Extract from act of Congress of February 20, 1907, creating and defining the duties of the Immigration Commission.

That a commission is hereby created, consisting of three Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States. Said commission shall make full inquiry, examination, and investigation, by subcommittee or otherwise, into the subject of immigration. For the purpose of said inquiry, examination, and investigation said commission is authorized to send for persons and papers, make all necessary travel, either in the United States or any foreign country, and, through the chairman of the commission, or any member thereof, to administer oaths and to examine witnesses and papers respecting all matters pertaining to the subject, and to employ necessary clerical and other assistance. Said commission shall report to Congress the conclusions reached by it, and make such recommendations as in its judgment may seem proper. Such sums of money as may be necessary for the said inquiry, examination, and investigation are hereby appropriated and authorized to be paid out of the "immigrant fund" on the certificate of the chairman of said commission, including all expenses of the commissioners, and a reasonable compensation, to be fixed by the President of the United States, for those members of the commission who are not Members of Congress; * * *

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

THE IMMIGRATION COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., December 5, 1910.

To the Sixty-first Congress:

I have the honor to transmit herewith, on behalf of the Immigration Commission, a report entitled "The Immigration Situation in Other Countries." This report is a review of the more important features of the situation in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, and Brazil. That part of the report which deals with Canada is a revision of a report entitled "The Immigration Situation in Canada," which was transmitted to Congress by the Commission, April 1, 1910, and printed as Senate Document No. 469, Sixty-first Congress, third session. The part of the report relating to Australia and New Zealand was prepared under the direction of the Commission by Mary Helen Eagan, and that part relating to Argentina and Brazil by Mary Mills West.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM P. DILLINGHAM.
Chairman.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN CANADA.

INTRODUCTORY.

Canada affords an interesting example of a country with a definite immigration policy based on local needs and conditions, and an immigration law sufficiently broad and flexible to permit the effective carrying out of that policy. The Canadian policy is based on the purpose of the government to promote the immigration of settlers for the newly opened agricultural regions of the western Provinces and other parts of the Dominion and to discourage the coming to Canada of such classes of immigrants as tend to congregate in towns and cities.

The United States, the United Kingdom, and certain northern and western countries of continental Europe are regarded by Canada as the sources most likely to furnish the class of immigrants desired, and in them the government carries on a systematic and usually successful propaganda to promote or direct immigration to the Dominion. No effort is made to promote immigration from southern and eastern European countries, and while immigrants from such countries are not specifically excluded by the Canadian immigration law, they are not sought by Canada nor are they desired unless it is clearly shown that they do not intend to become city dwellers.

In earlier years the Dominion shared somewhat in the movement of population from the United Kingdom and northern and western Europe to North America; but until recently the United States was the destination of by far the greater part of such immigration, a condition easily accounted for by the fact that the settlement of the agricultural regions of the West was made practicable at a much earlier date in the United States than in Canada. With the opening up of the great areas of agricultural lands in the western Provinces of the Dominion and the extension of the propaganda referred to, immigration increased until Canada is now one of the great immigrant-receiving countries of the world. During the period July 1, 1900, to March 31, 1909, a total of 1,244,597 immigrants were admitted to the Dominion, while during a closely corresponding period, July 1, 1900, to June 30, 1909, the total immigration to the United States was 7,753,816. Considering the population of the two countries, however, the movement to Canada was relatively much greater, the number of immigrants admitted during the period referred to being equal to 26.1 per cent of the Dominion's population in 1901, while the number entering the United States during the fiscal years 1900 to 1909 equaled 10.2 per cent of the population of the latter country in 1900.

The chief sources of Canadian immigration are the United States and the United Kingdom, the former having furnished 393,908, or 31.6 per cent, and the latter 502,264, or 40.4 per cent of the total number of immigrants admitted to the Dominion during the period referred to. During the same period Canada expended more money in promoting immigration from the United States than from the United Kingdom, the amounts being respectively $1,662,000 and $1,445,500. From 1901 to 1909, inclusive, 71.2 per cent of the total European immigration to Canada originated in those northern and western countries where the Canadian propaganda is carried on, while in the same years only 23.8 per cent of the European immigration to the United States came from the same countries. The large immigration from the British Isles to the Dominion is chiefly responsible for this result, but even where continental European immigration alone is considered, Canada receives relatively fewer immigrants from southern and eastern Europe than does the United States.

The movement of population from the United States to Canada and the counter movement from the Dominion to the States are treated in separate chapters. The latter movement is one of early origin, but immigration to Canada from the States is largely a development of recent years, having grown from 2,412 in 1897 to 59,926 in 1909 and 103,984 in the Canadian fiscal year ending March 31, 1910. In this report the movement from the States is discussed from the Canadian standpoint, but it is the purpose of the Commission to discuss the subject more fully in a subsequent report.

The Canadian immigration law is admirably adapted to carrying out the immigration policy of the Dominion. Under its terms no immigrants are specifically denied admission solely because of their race or origin, or because of the purpose for which they have come to Canada, but the discretion conferred upon officials charged with the administration of the law does make much discrimination entirely possible. With this discretionary authority Canadian officials are able to regulate the admission of immigrants according to the demand for immigrant labor in the Dominion at the time. Moreover, the Canadian immigration department is directed by officials who are largely responsible for the development of the Canadian system for promoting and regulating immigration, and who through ability and long experience have become experts in that field.

This report, which was prepared by Mr. W. W. Husband, one of the secretaries of the Commission, is intended primarily to cover the situation in Canada since 1900, during which time immigration and immigration control have become subjects of great importance in the Dominion. Wherever practicable, comparisons have been made between the immigration laws and systems of Canada and those of the United States, and their effect upon immigration to the two countries.

In presenting this report the Immigration Commission desires to express its appreciation of the many courtesies extended to the Commission by the Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian minister of labor; Hon. F. C. F. O'Hara, deputy minister of trade and commerce and chief controller of Chinese immigration; Mr. W. D. Scott, Canadian superintendent of immigration; Mr. L. M. Fortier, deputy superintendent of immigration; Dr. Munro, Canadian medical inspector and immigration agent at Vancouver; Mr. John H. Clark, United States commissioner of immigration, and Mr. Everett J. Wallace, assistant United States commissioner of immigration, at Montreal; Dr. Percy L. Prentis, formerly United States immigrant inspector in charge at the port of Vancouver, and now inspector in charge at Chicago; and Mr. Ralph P. Harrison, United States immigrant inspector in charge at the port of Quebec.

CHAPTER I.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA.

CANADA'S IMMIGRATION POLICY.

The immigration question in Canada, always vital, has in recent years assumed a place of paramount importance among the problems of the Dominion. This is due largely to the development of western Canada and to the purpose of the government to populate that region with selected settlers. To further this end Canada has developed an immigration policy which is officially expressed as follows:^a

1. Money is expended and administration is exercised with the object of securing immigrants whose purpose in life is to occupy farm lands, either as owners, tenants, or laborers.

2. Money is voted and administration is exercised with the object of excluding those whose presence in Canada would tend to add to the congestion of towns and cities.

In pursuance of this policy, organized effort is made to secure immigrants from countries which furnish the classes or races most desired as settlers for the agricultural regions of the Dominion now under development, but no effort is made in those countries which are considered likely to furnish immigrants of the second class referred to.

The European countries favored by Canada in this regard are Great Britain and Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Iceland, Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland, and in such of these countries as permit the promotion of emigration to a foreign country Canada conducts a systematic propaganda to induce or direct emigration of the desired classes to the Dominion. Canada's plan of action includes the maintenance of salaried agents in London, Liverpool, Birmingham, York, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Belfast, Exeter, Dublin, Paris, and Antwerp, and under the direction of these agents an extensive advertising campaign is carried on. Officially prepared circulars in several languages, attractively setting forth the inducements offered by Canada to agricultural immigrants, are distributed in large numbers; similar advertisements are carried in newspapers and other publications which circulate among the classes most desired; permanent exhibits of Canadian products are maintained in several cities, and traveling exhibits are sent to various sections of Great Britain and Ireland and to agricultural fairs and other exhibitions throughout the United Kingdom.

Another feature of the propaganda, and one which particularly indicates Canada's desire for immigrants, is the payment of a liberal bonus to several thousand so-called booking agents in the favored countries. These booking agents are for the most part local steamship ticket agents, and theoretically the bonus is allowed for the purpose of inducing such agents to favor Canada by directing thereto intended emigrants who otherwise might choose a different destination. The bonus paid is £1 ($4.86) on each person 18 years of age or over, and 10s. ($2.43) on persons between 1 and 18 years.^a In Great Britain it is paid upon tickets to Canada sold to British subjects who have for at least one year been engaged in the occupation of a farmer, farm laborer, gardener, stableman, carter, railway surfaceman, navvy, or miner, and who signify their intention of following farming or railway construction work in Canada. Female domestic servants also are included.^b A like bonus is paid on similar classes of immigrants from France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland. During the fiscal years 1905 to 1909, inclusive, this bonus was paid on 16.5 per cent of all British immigrants, and on 11 per cent of all immigrants from continental Europe, admitted to Canada.

In England the Salvation Army is utilized as an agency to promote emigration to Canada, and grants of money are made to the army for that purpose. It is stated, however, that the Dominion government has no system of free or assisted passage to Canada, and that no immigrant is ever brought to Canada at the expense of the government.

For many years Canada has regarded the United States as a desirable field for immigration effort. The propaganda is conducted under the direction of an official designated as inspector of agencies and press agent, and general agents are stationed in sixteen cities. The efforts of these salaried representatives are supplemented by sub-agents, who are paid a commission of $3 per man, $2 per woman, and $1 per child on bona fide settlers induced by them to settle in western Canada. During the fiscal years 1905 to 1909, inclusive, this commission was paid on 5.6 per cent of all United States immigrants entering Canada. The subject of immigration to Canada from the United States is discussed at greater length elsewhere in this report.

The British press is relied upon as a factor in promoting emigration to Canada, through news articles relative to the progress and advantages of the Dominion, and also through the publication of letters from persons who have settled there. British newspaper writers and other publicity agents are encouraged to visit Canada, and it is stated that much desirable advertising has resulted.

Some years ago Canada inaugurated the plan of sending delegates to Great Britain in the interest of the immigration propaganda, and this practice has been continued. The origin and purpose of this movement is referred to as follows in the official report on immigration by the Deputy Minister of the Interior in 1903:^c

Those delegates, 55 in all, were selected as those having had most successful careers in agricultural pursuits in the West, and who could give their personal testimony regarding the different districts in which they reside. It was considered by the department that although strong efforts had been made to induce people from the British Isles to locate in Canada, the result had not been as satisfactory as might have been expected, and it was felt that a new method for reaching the class of people whom we are desirous of securing should be adopted. No scheme ever attempted by the department to encourage immigration has attracted greater attention or has proved as successful as the visit of these former delegates.

They left for England in the beginning of February last, and on an average were engaged for periods varying between six weeks and two months in visiting the various towns respectively assigned to them. The demand for information from the delegates was so great that many of them were compelled to remain for weeks at the government agencies. There is no doubt that the most effective work was done in this way, and that as a result no country in the world to-day is better known than Canada is in the old country. The delegates were brought in immediate contact with the people who contemplated removing to another country, and the information imparted by the delegates in these interviews has done more than any other means heretofore employed in removing the deep-rooted prejudices against settlement in Canada and in conveying a correct knowledge of the country. Their visits to the various towns created a most lively interest. They were appealed to by prospective settlers and their lectures and movements were reported by the papers throughout the country.

I certainly attribute very largely the increase in the immigration from the British Isles during the past year to the visit of these delegates, and the results thus obtained have more than compensated for the comparatively small expenditure of public money which it involved.

Concerning this feature of Canada's campaign to promote immigration, Mr. J. Obed Smith, assistant superintendent of emigration for Canada in London, says:^a

The continuance of the policy of sending successful farmer delegates to tell their personal story of success has been productive of excellent results throughout the British Isles, and I am of the opinion that the policy in question should be continued next season. Strive as the department does to prepare literature absolutely correct in every detail, there is, perhaps owing to competition from other colonies, a lingering opinion among intending immigrants that government literature requires to be fortified by the personal opinion of some actual settler or farmer from Canada, with whom they can converse.

IMMIGRATION EXPENDITURES.

During the fiscal years 1898 to 1908, inclusive, Canada's expenditures in promoting and regulating immigration aggregated $6,779,823. Of this amount, $2,500,432, or 36.9 per cent, was expended in Canada, and the remainder in the United States, the United Kingdom, and continental Europe. The geographical distribution of this expenditure by years is shown in the following table:

^a Report of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, 1909, p. 64.

^b The Canadian fiscal year ended June 30 in the years 1898 to 1906, inclusive, and March 31 in 1907 and succeeding years.

Assuming that the amount of money expended in Canada represents the cost of regulating immigration, and the amount expended outside of Canada the cost of promoting immigration, it will be seen that the latter was 63.1 per cent of the total cost during the period considered.

The distribution by geographical divisions of expenditures outside of Canada is shown in the following table:

Country.	Expenditures outside of Canada.
	Total.	Per cent of total.
United States.....	$1,936,000	45.2
United Kingdom.....	1,643,000	38.4
Continental Europe.....	700,400	16.4
Total.....	4,279,400	100.0

During the fiscal years 1901 to 1908, inclusive, a total of 1,097,689 immigrants were admitted to Canada. The total expenditures of the Dominion on account of immigration during the same period were $5,828,195.61, or $5.31 per immigrant admitted. Of this amount $2,151,795.61, or $1.96 per immigrant, was expended in Canada, or, as previously stated, in the regulation of immigration, while $3,676,400, or $3.35 per immigrant, was expended outside of Canada, or in the promotion of immigration.

The total immigration to Canada from the United States and the United Kingdom during the period above mentioned, compared with the expenditures by Canada in each country on account of immigration, is shown in the following table:

TABLE 3.—Immigration to Canada from the United States and the United Kingdom, and Canadian immigration expenditures in such countries, fiscal years 1901 to 1908.

[From Immigration Facts and Figures, Canada, 1909, and statistical table on page 10.]

Country.	Total immigration.	Total expenditure.	Amount per capita.
United Kingdom.....	449,363	1,445,000	3.22

It will be noticed that during the period covered by the above table Canada expended a considerably greater sum in the United States in promoting immigration than was expended for the same purpose in England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, combined, and also that the cost per immigrant was relatively much greater.

The expenditure per capita on immigrants to Canada from continental Europe during the eight years considered was approximately $1.99. The wide difference between per capita expenditures in the United States and the United Kingdom and such expenditures in continental Europe may be accounted for by the fact that Canada makes no so-called immigration effort in several European countries which nevertheless furnish annually a considerable number of immigrants to the Dominion. Moreover, the United States and Great Britain permit the open and unrestricted solicitation of immigration on the part of Canada, while, as previously stated, some European countries regarded by Canada as sources of desirable immigration do not tolerate a propaganda of that nature.

SOURCES OF CANADA'S IMMIGRATION.

It is apparent that at present Canada divides the emigrating races of the transoceanic world into three general groups, as follows: First, natives of the United Kingdom and of northern and western continental Europe; second, southern and eastern Europeans; third, the races of the Orient.

The government has a well-defined idea of the desirability of each group as settlers in Canada; and the Canadian immigration act, although excluding no one solely because of his race or nationality, seems to make possible an effective discrimination among them. As previously explained, every effort is made to induce persons of the first class to settle in Canada. Those of the second group, although admitted in rather large numbers, are not solicited, and, as will be shown later, more or less effective obstacles are placed in their way. Those of the third class are practically prohibited from coming by the Chinese immigration act, and by barriers erected under various provisions of the immigration law, which will later be discussed in detail.

How Canada has succeeded in attracting immigrants of the races or peoples desired is indicated by the following tables, which show in detail the racial or national composition of immigration to the Dominion during the past nine years, during which period the present system of control has been developed.

Canadian immigration statistics are generally recorded by race rather than country of birth, although, as will be seen, territorial rather than ethnological designations are employed to a considerable extent, and in some instances immigrants are designated by the religious sect with which they are affiliated. Therefore the table next submitted, while not entirely comparable with United States immigration statistics, nevertheless gives a clear idea of the racial distribution of recent Canadian immigration.

It appears from the above that during the nine years mentioned 78.4 per cent of the immigration to Canada consisted of races or peoples from the north and west of Europe and from the United States, 18.9 per cent of races or peoples from the south and east of Europe, and only 1.7 per cent was from Asiatic countries. What proportion of the immigration of favored classes was induced by Canada's efforts, and how many persons of the classes not favored were prevented from coming because of the indifferent attitude of Canada, or by the barriers erected against them, can not, of course, be determined.

As previously stated, during the fiscal years 1905 to 1909, inclusive, a bonus was paid on 16.5 per cent of the arrivals from the United Kingdom, on 11 per cent of those coming from continental Europe, and on 5.6 per cent of United States immigrants, but it is, of course, improbable that the bonus paid was the determining factor in each case involved.

Whether attributable to Canada's policy or to natural causes, it is noteworthy that so large a proportion of the European immigration to the Dominion during the period considered originated in countries where immigration effort is made. The result is even more striking when it is considered that the incentive to emigration, as measured by recent immigration to the United States, is much stronger in southern and eastern than in northern and western European countries. The following table, comparing recent European immigration to Canada and to the United States, clearly illustrates the point:

TABLE 10.—Total European immigration, including Syrian, to Canada and to the United States, fiscal years 1901 to 1909.

It will be seen that in the past nine years 71.2 per cent of European immigration to Canada was from the northern and western countries, while only 23.8 per cent of persons coming from Europe to the United States were from those sections. British immigration, however, was largely responsible for the preponderance of northern and western Europeans in the movement to Canada, for, as indicated by the above table, 74.6 per cent of the continental immigrants to the Dominion came from southern and eastern Europe and Syria. But even when continental Europe is considered separately it will be seen that there is a considerable racial difference in the composition of immigration to Canada and to the United States.

There is an even more striking difference in the composition of European immigration to Canada and to the United States for the year ending March 31, 1908, during which immigration to Canada reached its highest point, and the year ending June 30, 1907, when the greatest immigration to the United States was recorded, as will be seen from the next table submitted.

While these results may be, and doubtless are, due in part to the difference in policy of the two nations, whereby Canada encourages immigration from one section and in a measure discourages it from another, while the United States makes no distinction in that regard, it is altogether probable that the chief reason is of another nature. A large proportion of the immigrants from northern and western Europe are primarily seekers after land, and while the United States was able to present that attraction such immigrants came in large numbers. On the other hand, immigration from the south and east of Europe is essentially industrial, probably because of the fact that since immigration from that section began the demand in the United States has been for industrial workers. In Canada the situation is exactly reversed. The demand for industrial workers is not great, but the opportunities for agricultural settlers in the newly developed country to the west of Ontario are widely advertised, and northern Europeans have responded as they did when similar conditions existed in the United States.

OCCUPATIONS OF IMMIGRANTS.

In an official pamphlet intended for circulation in the United Kingdom farmers, farm laborers, and female domestic servants are mentioned as the only persons the Canadian immigration department advises to emigrate to Canada. All others are advised to get definite assurances of employment in Canada before leaving home, and to have money enough to support them for a time in case of disappointment.^a The pamphlet referred to gives specific advice to persons of various occupations, and is quoted here to illustrate how the Canadian government attempts to promote immigration in accordance with the needs of the country, and also to show the means employed to acquaint intended British emigrants with conditions of employment in the Dominion.

Intending agriculturists, tenant farmers, farm laborers, market gardeners, gardeners, persons understanding the care of horses, cattle, and sheep, young men desiring agricultural experience, and female domestic servants are advised to emigrate to Canada, and persons with capital are assured that unlimited openings are afforded.

^a "Classes Wanted in Canada," issued by the authority of the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, Canada, 1909, p. 31.

On the other hand, clerks, draftsmen, telegraph operators, shop assistants, governesses, nurses, etc., are admonished not to emigrate unless proceeding to assured employment or to join friends.

No encouragement is held out to professional men, especially in cases where immediate employment is desired, and schoolmasters and teachers are warned not to emigrate on the chance of obtaining a situation. The pamphlet further states that there are few openings for civil engineers and architects at the present time, but that the demand for assistant surveyors in connection with new railway surveys is good and likely to so continue.

How successful the government has been in inducing the desired immigration, so far as the occupations of immigrants are concerned, is shown by the following table:

TABLE 12.—Occupation of immigrants to Canada, including accompanying women and children, 1907 to 1909.

Of the total immigration to Canada during the years mentioned 38.6 per cent were classed as farmers or farm laborers, which classification, as noted, includes accompanying women and children. It will be seen that the United States was the chief source of agriculturists arriving in Canada during the period, 58.4 per cent of the total number being from that country, while only 29.6 per cent of the whole came from northern and western European countries.

As noted elsewhere, the present movement of population from the United States to Canada is largely composed of farmers and farm laborers and their families, 78.7 per cent of the total during the period covered by the above table being so classified. In the same three years only 23.7 per cent of the immigration from northern and western European countries was of the agricultural class. The widely different character of immigration from the two sources mentioned suggests that cities furnish the greater part of northern and western European immigration to Canada and a very small proportion of the immigration from the United States.

The occupations entered by immigrants after arrival in Canada would be a better index of the result of the Government's efforts to secure permanent settlers for the land, but complete statistical data in this regard are not available. It is stated in a general way in reports of Canadian immigration officials that the great majority of immigrants engage in agricultural pursuits either as farmers or farm laborers, and without doubt this is the fact.

While it is impossible to state accurately how large a proportion of immigrants entering Canada engage in agricultural pursuits, some indication of this is furnished by the records of free land entries in western Canada.

HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

From July 1, 1900, to March 31, 1909, 235,690 homesteads were entered for in the western Provinces, and of this number 156,261, or more than 66 per cent, represent entries by immigrants, practically all of whom came from Europe and the United States. According to the record the average number of persons for each entry was 2.5, and therefore 390,654, or more than 31 per cent of the total immigration to Canada during the period specified, were involved. This does not take into account the large number of European immigrants who became farm laborers, or immigrants—particularly from the United States—who acquired railway and other land by purchase. The fact that nearly one-third of all immigrants become agriculturists through the medium of free land alone supports the contention that Canada's efforts in this regard have resulted successfully.

The following table shows the distribution of the 156,261 homestead entries referred to among various immigrant groups:

^b Including Icelandic and Syrian.

There is a striking preponderance of homesteaders among immigrants from the United States as compared with those from other countries, nearly 45 per cent of the former being of that class. It will be noted that the English show the smallest percentage of homesteaders of any class of immigrants enumerated, while the percentage among immigrants from the British Isles, as a whole, is considerably smaller than among those designated under "Continental Europe" and "All others." The extent to which United States immigrants have contributed to the settlement of western Canada is shown by the fact that of all homestead entries made by immigrants during the period considered, nearly 45 per cent were made by settlers from the United States.

The relation of immigrant entries of the various classes to the total number of entries made during the time specified is shown by the following table:

IRISH IMMIGRATION.

In view of the large increase in the number of English and Scotch immigrants to Canada in recent years, it is noteworthy that Irish immigration to that country is comparatively small. In 1908, when the movement from Europe to Canada reached its greatest height, it included only 6,547 Irishmen to 91,412 English and Welsh and 22,223 Scotch, and in the nine years ending March 31, 1909, the total Irish immigration was only 30,184, or less than the Galician, Hebrew, or Russian immigration to Canada for the same period. It is evident that the Irish immigrant prefers the United States to Canada, for during the nine years ending June 30, 1908, 337,812 persons of that race landed in the United States. This tendency is peculiar to the Irish, for as far as English and Scotch immigration is concerned, Canada is a successful competitor of the United States, as will be seen from the following table:

TABLE 15.—Total immigration to Canada (nine years ending March 31, 1909) and to the United States (nine years ending June 30, 1908) from Great Britain and Ireland.

[Compiled from statistical table on p. 10 and reports of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration.]

It will be noticed that the English and Welsh and the Scotch immigration to Canada has been somewhat larger than that to the United States during the past nine years, while more than eleven times as many Irish immigrants came to the United States as went to Canada during that time.

The relatively small Irish immigration to Canada as compared with the immigration of other Britons to that country can not be attributed to Canada's lack of effort, for the same systematic campaign to secure settlers for the Dominion is carried on alike in Ireland, Scotland, and England. Placards displayed in the Canadian exhibit at the Dublin Exposition in 1907 indicate that Canada feels the successful competition of the United States in this regard, and attempts to turn the tide of immigration from that country to Canada.

Following are some of the placards referred to:

One of the greatest surprises to United States farmers settling in Canada is the absence of cyclones and drought which they had to contend with in their own country.

If it is your intention to go to America, remember that United States farmers are going to Canada in great numbers. Canada offers to settlers better inducements than any other country in the world.

Canada will receive you with open arms instead of imposing on you an alien tax of $4 per head.

It may be asked: "Why do you use the great number of United States farmers going to western Canada as one of your principal advertisements?" Because it was this movement that woke up the people of the British Isles to the great possibilities of western Canada. Moreover, Canadians themselves only commenced through that great movement of United States farmers to appreciate the value of their own country.

T. P. O'Connor, Esq., says in "P. T. O.", March 9, 1907: "No fewer than a quarter of a million of Americans are expected to reach Canada from these regions within the present year. And all the people who do go to western Canada are enthusiastic in their praises of the resources, the possibilities, the climate of the country. The old legend that you could find nothing there but arctic cold is exploded; you find, on the contrary, one of the most beautiful and temperate climates in the world, and people are growing rich almost overnight. Such is the demand for land; such is the immense migration."

A picture was displayed purporting to represent Nebraska farmers bound for Canada. In explanation of the illustration was the following legend:

This picture is reproduced from a photograph taken in Nebraska showing a large number of United States farmers moving to Canada.

BOY: I say, father, are we going to be Canadians when we get to Canada?

FATHER: Well, my boy, from what I have seen of that country, its rich lands, big crops, and where the people make their own laws and live up to them, to my mind it is a mighty-good country to belong to.

Notwithstanding the efforts of Canada, however, the United States is still the choice of more than 90 per cent of the Irish immigrants landing in North America.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the foreign-born Irish element in the population of Canada has decreased steadily and rapidly in recent years. This is also true of the Irish-born population of the United States from 1890 to 1900, but the downward movement began later than in Canada, and the decrease has been relatively smaller. The table next submitted illustrates the movement of Irish-born persons in Canada and the United States at recent census periods.

TABLE 16.—Population of Irish birth in Canada and the United States in census years specified.

[Compiled from the Canada Year Book, 1908, and the United States census reports.]

Census year—	Canada.		United States.

1901.....	101,629	-31.9

It seems improbable that the marked decrease in the Irish-born population of Canada from 1871 to 1901 was entirely due to death, and, although no reliable data upon the subject are available, it may fairly be presumed that Irish emigration from Canada to the United States has been a factor in producing the result indicated. The table shows, however, that even in the United States there was a considerable downward movement in the foreign-born Irish population between 1890 and 1900.

JUVENILE IMMIGRATION.

The immigration of poor and homeless British children to Canada began many years ago, and is now encouraged and supervised, but not otherwise assisted, by the Dominion government. This juvenile immigration is chiefly recruited from the orphan or industrial homes of the British Isles. The children are sent to Canada by charitable and religious organizations, and are there distributed through various philanthropic homes and agencies. The majority of such children are placed in the families of farmers, and the demand for them far exceeds the supply. It is estimated that during the last fifty years nearly 60,000 juvenile immigrants have been transported to Canada from the British Isles.^a

^a Report of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, 1909, p. 89.

The extent of this movement in recent years and also the extent of the demand for the immigrant children by Canadians are shown in the following table:

TABLE 17.—Juvenile immigration to Canada, and application by Canadians for such immigrants, 1901 to 1909.

[Compiled from report of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, 1909.]

Fiscal year—	Juvenile immigrants admitted.	Applications received.

Total.....	19,034	130,825

It is said that there formerly existed in Canada a deep-rooted prejudice against such juvenile immigration, but that this has almost entirely disappeared, and there is now a great demand for these children. The foregoing table seems to fully substantiate the latter statement. According to official reports, the children are especially trained in the British industrial and philanthropic homes with a view to their final emigration to Canada. They are not, however, sent there against their will.

Upon landing in Canada the children are placed in receiving and distributing homes, located in different parts of the Dominion, and remain there until indentured to farmers or others. The guardianship of the home over the children is continued to a greater or less degree until a period of apprenticeship is passed, and the children are taught to rely on the homes for advice and assistance. Agents of the homes visit the indentured children periodically. In turn the Canadian government exercises supervision over the receiving and distributing homes and, in a manner, looks after the welfare of the children in their foster homes. This work is carried on under the direction of an official designated as chief inspector of British immigrant children and receiving homes.

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

In addition to the juvenile immigration elsewhere referred to, Canada annually receives a considerable number of British, and particularly English, immigrants, who, by private charity or state aid, have been sent from the mother country. Until last year the Canadian government had practically no part in the selection of such immigrants abroad, and as a result many were rejected at Canadian ports or deported after landing. In 1908 Mr. J. Bruce Walker, assistant superintendent of emigration for Canada in London, made a report upon the activities of the various philanthropic and charitable societies engaged in promoting emigration to Canada. Because of the general interest of the subject, this report is printed in full elsewhere.^a According to the report 12,336 persons were sent to Canada in the calendar year 1907 by London charitable societies alone. As immigration to Canada is recorded by fiscal rather than calendar years, it is impossible to exactly compare the number of assisted immigrants with the total immigration for any stated period; but it is interesting to note that the above number is equal to nearly 30 per cent of the total English immigration to Canada in the fiscal period of nine months ending March 31, 1907, or more than 13 per cent of such immigration in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1908. These figures do not include state-aided and rate-aided immigrants, which classes are described in Mr. Walker's report as follows:

These are the products of the distress committees and of the workhouses. The distress committees are bodies in large centers of population, permitted under the terms of the unemployed workmen's act to levy a small rate as a tax upon the public for the emigration and for provision by employment, or otherwise, of the unemployed in such communities. * * * The distress committees usually operate through some recognized booking agency, providing the fares for the transportation, and leaving such booking agency to provide the employment on the Canadian side. There is no supervision of an official character exercised over these emigrants.

No data are available relative to the number of state-aided and rate-aided immigrants sent to Canada.

The general character of emigrants assisted to leave England by the various agencies above mentioned is stated in the report referred to.

Mr. Walker's report resulted in prompt action by the Canadian government, for on April 18, 1908, there became effective an order in council which prohibited the landing in Canada of any person whose passage had been paid wholly or in part by any charitable organization or out of public moneys unless the emigration to Canada of such person had been approved by the Canadian emigration authorities in London.^b This action on the part of the governor in council affords another illustration of the adaptability of the Canadian immigration act to meet emergencies.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1910.

The Commission's report upon the Immigration Situation in Canada is based on data covering a period ending with March 31, 1909. After the main part of the report had been prepared certain data became available relative to immigration to the Dominion during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910. These data consist merely of figures showing the number and race or nationality of immigrants to Canada during that year, which were made available for the use of the Commission through the kindness of Mr. W. D. Scott, Canadian Superintendent of Immigration.

^b Including 186 United States citizens coming to Canada via ocean ports.

By comparison with the statistical table on page 10 of this report it will be noted that 61,886 more immigrants were admitted to Canada during the last fiscal year than during the preceding fiscal year ending March 31, 1909. The number admitted during the fiscal year 1910, however, is 53,675 less than during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1908, which was the year of highest immigration to the Dominion.

Immigration to Canada from the United States is chiefly responsible for the increase in the total numbers between the fiscal years ending March 31, 1909, and March 31, 1910, the figures for these years being, respectively, 59,926 and 103,984, or an increase of 44,058 in the latter year.

The movement to Canada during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910, by geographical divisions, in comparison with immigration from the same countries in 1908 and 1909, is shown by the following table:

TABLE 19.—Total immigration to Canada, by specified countries or groups of countries, fiscal years 1908 to 1910.

The most significant fact shown by the above table is the relative decrease of the European elements and the increase of the United States element in the immigration movement to Canada since 1908.

It will be noted that in 1908 northern and western European countries furnished 50.7 per cent of the total immigration, while the United States furnished 22.3 per cent. In 1910, however, 49.8 per cent of the total number of immigrants admitted to Canada came from the United States and 33.6 per cent from northern and western Europe. Immigration from southern and eastern Europe to Canada was relatively much less in 1910 than in 1908, the decrease being from 20.8 per cent of the total immigration in 1908 to 13.5 per cent of the total in 1910.

A comparison between British and United States immigration to Canada during the years under discussion is shown by the following table:

TABLE 20.—British and United States immigration to Canada, fiscal years 1908 to 1910.

Country.	1908.	1909.	1910.
United Kingdom.....	120,182	52,901	59,790
United States.....	58,445	59,926	103,984

As previously stated, 1908 was the year of greatest immigration to Canada. In 1909 there was a sharp decline in the total number admitted, immigration from the United Kingdom being particularly affected. There was, however, a slight increase in the immigration from the United States in the latter year. The decline in immigration to Canada between 1908 and 1909 was due to unfavorable conditions in the Dominion; but it is worthy of note that while immigration from Great Britain in the latter year fell off, considerably more than one-half the movement from the United States was not checked. Improved conditions in the Dominion in 1910 resulted in an increase in the immigration movement from practically all sources; but it is a striking fact that immigration from the United States increased 73.5 per cent, while the increase from the United Kingdom was only 13 per cent.

Data are not available to show what each State and Territory contributed to the immigration movement to Canada from the United States in 1910. Neither is information relative to the occupation of these immigrants available. The statistics furnished to the Commission by the Canadian immigration department, however, show that included in the 103,984 persons admitted to Canada were 63,539 males, 20,725 females, and 19,720 children whose sex is not given. These last figures indicate that a large proportion of the movement from the United States to Canada was composed of families, which substantiates similar statements in this report relative to the immigration to Canada in other years.

CHAPTER II.

IMMIGRATION TO CANADA FROM THE UNITED STATES.

For many years Canada has made persistent and systematic effort to promote emigration from the United States to the Dominion. That the propaganda has resulted successfully is indicated by the fact that during the period from July 1, 1901, to March 31, 1909, the United States led all other countries in the number of immigrants furnished to Canada. England and Wales combined was the nearest competitor in this regard, as will be seen from the general statistical table on page 16.

RECENT IMMIGRATION.

The contribution of the countries mentioned to Canadian immigration during the period specified as compared with all other countries is shown by the following table:

TABLE 21.—Total immigration to Canada, 1901 to 1909, by race or country.

[Compiled from statistical table furnished by the Canadian immigration department.]

All others.....	472,888	38.0
Total.....	1,244,597	100.0

The importance of the United States as a field for immigration effort by Canada is clearly understood when it is considered that in recent years nearly one-third of the total immigration into the Dominion came from the States. Moreover, the class of immigrants furnished by this country is, according to Canadian officials, just the class desired to accomplish the government's purpose of developing the agricultural and other resources of western Canada.

How the campaign to induce emigration from the United States is conducted is shown in the following extract from the annual report for 1908 of Mr. W. J. White, inspector of agencies and press agent, who directs the Canadian propaganda in this country:^a

There is not a State in the Union in which Canada is not advertised. The offices of the government are located in the best agricultural sections, with a view to being in easy touch with the surrounding country so as to make it possible for the agents to cover their respective districts with the least trouble. The offices are located as follows:

M. V. McInnes, Sixth Avenue Theater Block, Detroit, Mich.
C. A. Laurier, Marquette, Mich.
Jas. N. Grieve, Spokane, Wash.

E. T. Holmes, 315 Jackson street, St. Paul, Minn.
W. V. Bennett, 315 Board of Trade Building, Omaha, Nebr.

Thos. Duncan, 30 Syracuse Bank Building, Syracuse, N. Y.
Geo. A. Hall, 210 House Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

The work of these agents is very much the same in character. At almost all the offices there are one or two assistants, whose duty it is to look after the correspondence, issue the certificate which entitles the applicant to the reduced rates afforded by the Canadian railroads to the actual settler, and give to the caller all available information. At the end of the week the assistant keys the letters received according to post-offices and districts. The agent then selects the district that he should visit during the next or coming weeks and advises one or more of the correspondents that he will meet them and their friends at some given place on a set date, or if this is not possible, when necessary he visits the individual correspondent. He carries with him samples of the grains and grasses of central Canada, has with him a supply of literature, and quotes rates from their home to such a point in western Canada as they may desire to go to. He assists the intending settler by securing him the lowest freight rates for his stock and effects, advises him the best way in which to get cars, and afterwards follows the course of the car to its destination. Very often the male members of the family move in advance of those dependent. When this occurs it is the duty of the agent to assist the family in every way possible in order to get a start.

During the fall of the year exhibits of grain and grasses, roots, vegetables, etc., with which the agent has supplied himself, are taken from fair to fair and tastefully arranged; then the agent's time is pretty well occupied in this way for from two to three months. A chain-letter system is adopted, which is very effective in getting the names of those in a neighborhood who would likely be interested in Canada. To the names thus secured literature and circulars are sent, and it is surprising the amount of effective work that is done in this way. It is sometimes the case that the manner in which one State may be worked will differ from another State. In each case, however, the agents keep me advised as to what they feel is the best course to pursue, and I am always prepared to accept and act upon such suggestions as may be safely adopted. In some cases it is found that the management of a fair does not care to allow our exhibits to be placed, but these cases are so rare that it is scarcely necessary to refer to them. In most cases there is no difficulty whatever in securing space, and in others managements have requested that we exhibit, offering a space free of charge. Generally, however, we rent a space in some building, and sometimes, unable to do this, ground space is rented. On this ground a temporary structure is sometimes erected, and in other cases a tent is secured in which exhibits are placed. It is often necessary, in order to interest people in a certain district, to secure the assistance of one or two or more responsible men. Various ways are adopted in order to do this. One of the best methods is to secure transportation for these people and send them through to our western provinces to report to their friends. The agent fills up his report very carefully, and in this way gets in touch with a good class of people. Again, parties are accompanied as far as the boundary line, as there is a possibility that in passing through some of the Western States towns some of the people who may have been directed by the efforts of local agents to Canada may become interested in American lands.

I referred in my last report to the inducements held out by Texas land agents. The railroad rates from St. Paul, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas, Indianapolis, and other points to Texas lands were much lower than those to Canada. The Western Passenger Association, however, has adjusted this, so that the rates are now more even; therefore some of this difficulty has been overcome. There is still opposition, and considerable of it is owing to the fact that Texas lands are reasonably low in price and an army of agents are at work throughout the country setting forth the advantages in Texas from a settler's standpoint.

Besides the inducements held out by landowners in Texas, those offered by holders in Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, and South Dakota were sufficient to arouse a disturbing sentiment amongst possible movers and divert the attention of land seekers. These lands do not carry the advantages that Canadian lands do, but the desire to keep within one's own country is something that is hard to overcome. There is the wish to know what it has to offer before going outside. It is true that Canada has the "last best West," but there is sufficient of the American West (whatever the character of the land may be) to keep the department and its corps of agents busy in the presentation of the superior advantages and opportunities afforded by Canada.

In addition to the salaried agents mentioned above, the Canadian immigration department is represented in the United States by a large number of subagents in different parts of the country, who, as previously stated, are paid a bonus of $3 per man, $2 per woman, and $1 per child on bona fide settlers induced by them to settle in western Canada.^a Extensive newspaper advertising is one of the chief features of the Canadian campaign in the United States. Concerning this Mr. White says:^b

The country weekly and the farm journals are the principal mediums used. It is found that they reach the class of people mostly desirable as settlers. The city daily and magazine have not been used to any extent, not being found as valuable for reaching the farming public as the others just mentioned. Nearly 7,000 newspapers were contracted with.

In recent years the Canadian authorities have encouraged tours of inspection through western Canada by United States editorial associations and newspaper writers generally, and Canadian railways have cooperated in making such tours practicable. As a result articles and editorials relating to Canada have appeared in many newspapers in different parts of the country. It is stated that the publicity gained by this method has materially aided Canadian agents in the campaign to induce emigration to Canada from the United States.

Concerning the methods employed, and the success of Canada's immigration propaganda in the United States, Mr. White says:^b

It has not been considered advisable to make any changes in the method of advertising. The plan adopted in the early stages of the work, which has brought the number of settlers up from less than 1,000 to nearly 60,000 in the space of nine years, has been considered good enough to adhere to. No other plan can be submitted that would be more effective.

Mr. White's reference to the growth of immigration to Canada from the United States is practically substantiated by statistics, as appears from the following statement showing such immigration since January 1, 1897:^c Few data are available showing the racial composition of the emigration movement from the United States to Canada. Canadian official reports indicate that a considerable proportion of the emigrants from the middle western States are Germans, Scandinavians, Finns, and other of non-English-speaking races who had previously come to the United States as immigrants. Canada has made special effort to induce former Canadians, and particularly French-Canadians, to repatriate themselves, with some measure of success. It is, nevertheless, probable that a considerable number of those composing the movement to Canada are native-born American farmers, who, through the Canadian propaganda, are attracted to the Dominion by the opportunity to secure free or cheap lands.

Beginning with the year 1908, the Bureau of Immigration has kept a record of aliens leaving the United States to settle permanently in another country, and the reports of the United States Commissioner-General of Immigration show that in the fiscal years 1909 and 1910, 64,672 left the United States for British North America. Newfoundland is included in this term, but undoubtedly practically all went to Canada. So far as was ascertained, the races participating in this movement were as follows:

It will be noted that the race to which these emigrants belonged is reported in less than half of the cases, but so far as this information is available Scandinavians, Germans, Italians, English, Russians, and Scotch are the most important elements. It will be understood that the figures in the preceding represent persons who have not become naturalized in the United States and that account is not taken of United States citizens by birth or naturalization.

Many of the emigrants dispose of their land or other property in the United States before emigrating, and Canadian officials estimate that in the fiscal year 1909 the United States immigrants brought to Canada, in stock, cash, and effects, upwards of $60,000,000.^a

As already stated, the middle western States are the chief source of the emigration to Canada. Data covering any considerable period of time are not available, but the following table will show which States were the largest contributors to the movement in the fiscal years 1907 to 1909:

Probably no other considerable movement of population from one country to another at the present time is so largely composed of agricultural people as is the emigration from the United States to Canada. As shown by the table on page 15, 120,450, or more than 78 per cent of the total number going to Canada in 1907, 1908, and 1909, were classed as farmers or farm laborers, which includes, also, accompanying members of families, while less than 23 per cent of all other immigrants to Canada during the same period were of those classes. Of the races coming to the United States as immigrants during the fiscal years 1899 to 1908, inclusive, the percentage of farmers and farm laborers was highest among the Roumanians, it being 55.8 per cent of the total immigration of that race, while among all immigrants to the United States in that period the percentage of farmers and farm laborers was 16.^b United States statistics relative to occupations of immigrants, however, do not include accompanying women and children. It is probably true that the great majority of immigrants to the United States change occupation in coming here, the opportunity to do so being the main incentive to their immigration. The movement from the United States to Canada differs in this regard, however, for, like earlier migrations westward in the States, it is largely a movement from farm to farm, which in this instance means removal to a foreign country. While the Canadian immigration propaganda in the United States is by no means confined to the agricultural classes, practically the only inducement offered to all classes is free or cheap land, and probably the majority of the general laborers, mechanics, etc., who emigrate to Canada enter agricultural pursuits.

^a Report of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, 1909, p. 80.

^b Reports of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration.

HOMESTEAD ENTRIES.

Nearly 45 per cent of the immigrants from the United States to Canada from 1900 to 1909 were homesteaders, and they made 70,182 free homestead entries, or 29.8 per cent of the total number of such entries made in the western Provinces during that period.^a

In the year ending December 31, 1909, a total of 11,976 free homestead entries were made in Canada by persons coming from the United States. The distribution of these entries according to the State or Territory from which the homesteaders emigrated is shown by the following table:

It will be seen from the foregoing table that every State and Territory in the Union, except Delaware and Mississippi, was represented, but that more than one-half of the total number of entries were made by emigrants from North Dakota and Minnesota. During the month of January, 1910, 978 homestead entries were made in Canada by immigrants from the United States, as compared with 342 entries by such immigrants in January, 1909.

It is unnecessary to comment on the importance of immigrants from the United States as factors in developing the agricultural resources of Canada. Numerically they already form a considerable part of the population of the western Provinces, and, according to Canadian officials, their experience and training in agricultural pursuits, gained in the United States, are of great value to the Dominion.

EARLIER IMMIGRATION.

Reliable data relative to the emigration movement from the United States to Canada prior to 1901 are not available. The Canadian census returns, however, shed some light upon the question as far as natives of the United States are concerned, by revealing the number of such persons in Canada in the census years 1871, 1881, 1891, and 1901, as shown by the following table:

d Census not taken in 1871-1891.

It will be noted that the Province of Ontario has led all others in the number of persons born in the United States, but that the number was approximately the same at each census year. The same is essentially true of all the eastern Provinces except Quebec. In that Province the increase was insignificant until during the decade 1891-1901. The increase in that period was, in all probability, largely due to the emigration from New England of American-born children of French Canadian parentage. The table indicates that the emigration of natives of the United States to western Canada developed to a considerable extent during the ten years prior to 1901. The numbers, however, are small compared with emigration from the United States to Canada in recent years, and the Canadian census of 1911 may be expected to show a large increase in the native United States element in Canada's population.

THE RETURN MOVEMENT.

It is impossible to state what proportion of the immigration to Canada from the United States is permanent. In practically all larger immigration movements of the present time, however, there is a relatively large return movement, and it is probable that a considerable per cent of the United States immigrants settling in Canada eventually resume a residence in the United States. This statement is substantiated by the following extract from the latest annual report of John H. Clark, United States Commissioner of Immigration in Canada. Mr. Clark says:^a

* * * there is an element in the travel from Canada to the United States, in which I feel our bureau will be especially interested, reference being had to citizens of our own country who, having settled in Canada, return to again take up their residence in the United States. Commencing with January 1 of the current year, a record has been compiled, showing that 6,869 of such citizens were interviewed by our officers during the past six months, and as containing important information, it has been directed that a similar record be obtained in the future. As the foregoing record covered that period of the year when the movement would naturally be northbound, I feel it perfectly safe to say that not less than 15,000 American citizens returned from Canada within the year to resume residence in the United States.

CANADIAN EXPENDITURES IN THE UNITED STATES.

As shown elsewhere^b the Canadian immigration department expended $1,936,000 in the United States during the fiscal years 1898 to 1908, inclusive. This amount was $293,000 more than was expended by the department in promoting immigration from the United Kingdom during the same period, and only $564,432 less than the total expenditures of the department in Canada.

The amount expended by the Canadian immigration department in the United States in the fiscal years 1901 to 1908, inclusive, compared with the immigration into Canada from the United States during the same period, is shown in the table following.

As previously stated, the Canadian government employs in the United States a large number of subagents who are paid a small commission or bonus on bona fide settlers induced by them to settle in Western Canada,^a but the commission paid for this service is somewhat smaller than the bonus allowed to booking agents in the United Kingdom and other European countries. As a rule, subagents in the United States are not continuously employed in the work of inducing emigration to Canada, their service in this connection being incidental to other occupations.

The number and per cent of immigrants from the United States, the United Kingdom, and continental Europe, on whom a bonus was paid from 1905 to 1909, inclusive, is shown by the following table:

It will be noticed that the percentage of immigrants from the United States on whom a bonus is paid is much smaller than in the case of the British and other Europeans, and that in every instance the percentage of immigrants on whom a bonus was paid was considerably smaller in 1909 than in 1905, the decrease being especially marked in the case of continental Europeans.

CHAPTER III.

IMMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES FROM CANADA.

No reliable data are available to show the extent of immigration to Canada from the United States for any considerable period prior to 1901. That such immigration, or at least permanent immigration, was, however, relatively small is indicated by the fact that in 1901 there were only 127,899 persons of United States birth in the Dominion.^a

On the other hand, Canada has for a long time contributed largely to the population of the United States. As early as 1850 there were, according to the census of that year, 147,711 natives of Canada in this country. Each succeeding census showed a large increase in this number until in 1900 there were nearly one-fourth as many native-born Canadians in the United States as in Canada.

The total number of natives of Canada in that country and in the United States in corresponding census years was as follows:

Native-born Canadians in Canada: ^b

1881-----	3, 715, 492
1891-----	4, 185, 877
1901-----	4, 761, 815

Native-born Canadians in the United States: ^c

1870-----	493, 464
1880-----	717, 157
1890-----	980, 938
1900-----	1, 181, 255

While the figures relative to Canadians in the United States do not of course represent the actual movement of population from the Dominion, they do show that Canada was an important source of immigration to the United States during the period considered.

The growth and geographical distribution of the Canadian-born element in the population of the United States in census years since 1870 are shown in the following table:

In the United States censuses of 1890 and 1900 Canadian-born persons were divided into two classes, French and English, the latter classification being based on language rather than race, and including of course persons of Scotch and Irish as well as of English descent. The number and geographical distribution of these elements in the population are shown in the following table:

The above tables, however, indicate nothing concerning the many transoceanic immigrants to Canada who eventually settled in the United States. Although no statistical data exist to prove the assertion, it is a well-known fact that in the past a great many European immigrants to Canada have later emigrated from the Dominion to the States. This is particularly true of the English, Irish, and Scotch, but in more recent years the newer immigrant races have to a greater or less extent joined in the movement.

During the past few years the United States Bureau of Immigration has collected statistics relative to aliens entering the United States from Canada for the purpose of taking up a permanent residence here, and the results show that the movement continues in spite of the fact that Canada is now one of the chief immigrant receiving countries of the world.

The following table shows the extent of the emigration movement from Canada to the United States in 1908 and 1909:

^a Includes native-born Canadians and former immigrants to Canada.

^b Less than 0.05 per cent.

The above table includes native-born Canadians as well as former immigrants to Canada, and although the proportion of each is known it is not possible with the data at hand to distinguish between them as regards "race, people, or descent."

The records of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization for 1908 show that, of the 43,805 immigrants from Canada admitted to the United States in that year, 13,052 were native Canadians and 30,753 were foreign-born residents of Canada. Of the 53,448 immigrants admitted from Canada in 1909, 24,118 were native Canadians and 29,330 were foreign-born.

It should be clearly understood that those persons classified as foreign-born were former immigrants to Canada who had acquired a residence in the Dominion and that the classification does not include persons in transit through Canada to the United States.

While it is not possible with the data at hand to classify according to their nativity the elements enumerated under "race, people, or descent" in the preceding table, it is safe to assume that the natives of Canada previously referred to were for the most part persons of English, French, Irish, and Scotch stock.

In comparing the immigration of the two years considered, a large increase in the Canadian French element in 1909 is noted. This is no doubt accounted for by an increased demand for industrial workers in New England during that year.

A noteworthy feature of the immigration to the United States from Canada in 1909 is the great relative decrease in the number of Asiatics admitted. It will be noted that in 1908 the Japanese and East Indians or Hindus formed 7.7 per cent of the total immigration from Canada, while in 1909 they formed only 0.6 per cent of such immigration. While this fact is interesting as indicating a falling off in Asiatic immigration, it is chiefly significant when it is considered that the decrease followed the practical exclusion of such immigrants from Canada,^a thus illustrating the effect upon the United States of Canada's control of immigration.

The occupations of Canadian immigrants to the United States in the two years under consideration are shown in the following table:

TABLE 31.—Occupations of Canadian immigrants to the United States in fiscal years 1908 and 1909.

^a Including women and children.

The above table is chiefly interesting as showing the relatively small proportion of farmers and farm laborers entering the United States from Canada when compared with the large percentage of that class among persons emigrating from the United States to Canada. As stated elsewhere, more than 78 per cent of the latter movement is composed of farmers and farm laborers and their families, while only 9.4 per cent of those entering the United States from Canada, excluding persons of no occupation, are so classed. The large proportion of skilled laborers among the Canadian immigrants to the United States is also noteworthy.

In many respects the immigration from Canada is similar to that originating in Europe. There is the same preponderance of males, and, like immigration from all sources, the great majority of the immigrants are from 14 to 45 years of age. There is a large percentage of illiterates among the immigrants from Canada, but this is chiefly accounted for by the presence of south and east Europeans. These facts are shown in detail in the following table:

Concerning the cause of the emigration movement from Canada to the United States, Commissioner Clark, in his annual report for 1909, elsewhere quoted, says:^a

Should those interested in statistics inquire for a cause for the above exodus of Canadians to the United States, it may be stated, as a result of careful questioning for manifest purposes, that, in many instances, the claim is made that native workmen are being replaced by those brought into Canada under the Government's immigration policy, and to accept this explanation is not difficult when we recall conditions existing in the United States, where in many of the great manufacturing centers, particularly in the New England States, native help has been entirely superseded by the foreign article.

CHAPTER IV.

THE CANADIAN IMMIGRATION LAW.

At the time the Commission's report on the Immigration Situation in Canada^a was presented to Congress (Apr. 1, 1910) the Canadian immigration law of 1906 was in force, but Parliament had under consideration a government bill which proposed several more or less important changes in that law. The bill in question became a law May 4, 1910, and is included in the report referred to as an appendix, but the report as a whole necessarily concerns the law of 1906 and the bill by which it was proposed to amend it. In what follows the laws of 1906 and 1910 are discussed without reference to the bill in question, and in this respect the present report differs from that of April 1, 1910.

The Canadian law of 1910 is essentially like the law of 1906 in the more important details. Some additions were made to the classes denied admission to the Dominion and more or less important administrative changes were made, but as most of these changes had already been given the force of law through orders of the governor-general in council, the system of regulating immigration was not particularly changed by the legislation of 1910. Therefore references to the law of 1906 in what follows may as a rule be applied to the present Canadian law.

EXCLUDED CLASSES.

Notwithstanding the fact that Canada makes persistent efforts to promote immigration its law relative to the exclusion of undesirable immigrants is hardly less rigid than that of the United States. In fact, the classes excluded under the laws of both countries are nearly identical, as will be seen from the following comparison of section 3 of the Canadian law with section 2 of the United States law:^b

Canadian law of May 4, 1910, section 3.	United States law of February 20, 1907,^c section 2.

3. No immigrant, passenger, or other person, unless he is a Canadian citizen, or has Canadian domicile, shall be permitted to land in Canada, or in case of having landed in or entered Canada shall be permitted to remain therein, who belongs to any of the following classes, hereinafter called "prohibited classes:"

2. That the following classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States: All idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, and persons who have been insane within five years previous; persons who have had two or more attacks of insanity at any time previously; paupers; per-

^a Senate Doc. No. 469, Sixty-first Congress, second session.

^b As amended by act of March 26, 1910.

^c The Canadian immigration laws of 1906 and 1910 and the United States immigration laws of 1907 are printed in full in the appendix to this report.

(a) Idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, and persons who have been insane within five years previous.

(b) Persons afflicted with any loathsome disease, or with a disease which is contagious or infectious, or which may become dangerous to the public health, whether such persons intend to settle in Canada or only to pass through Canada in transit to some other country: Provided, That if such disease is one which is curable within a reasonably short time, such persons may, subject to the regulations in that behalf, if any, be permitted to remain on board ship if hospital facilities do not exist on shore, or to leave ship for medical treatment.

(c) Immigrants who are dumb, blind, or otherwise physically defective, unless in the opinion of a board of inquiry or officer acting as such they have sufficient money, or have such profession, occupation, trade, employment, or other legitimate mode of earning a living that they are not liable to become a public charge or unless they belong to a family accompanying them or already in Canada and which gives security satisfactory to the minister against such immigrants becoming a public charge.

(d) Persons who have been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude.

(e) Prostitutes and women and girls coming to Canada for any immoral purpose and pimps or persons living on the avails of prostitution.

(f) Persons who procure or attempt to bring into Canada prostitutes or women or girls for the purpose of prostitution or other immoral purpose.

(g) Professional beggars or vagrants, or persons likely to become a public charge.

(h) Immigrants to whom money has been given or loaned by any charitable organization for the purpose of enabling them to qualify for landing in Canada under this act, or whose passage to Canada has been paid wholly or in part by any charitable organization, or out of public moneys, unless it is shown that the authority in writing of the superintendent of immigration, or in case of persons coming from Europe, the authority in writing of the assistant superintendent of immigration for Canada, in London, has been obtained for the landing in Canada of such persons, and that such authority has been acted upon within a period of sixty days thereafter.

(i) Persons who do not fulfill, meet,

sens likely to become a public charge; professional beggars; persons afflicted with tuberculosis or with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease; persons not comprehended within any of the foregoing excluded classes who are found to be and are certified by the examining surgeon as being mentally or physically defective, such mental or physical defect being of a nature which may affect the ability of such alien to earn a living; persons who have been convicted of or admit having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude; polygamists, or persons who admit their belief in the practice of polygamy; anarchists, or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States, or of all government, or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials; prostitutes, or women or girls coming into the United States for the purpose of prostitution or for any other immoral purpose; persons who procure or attempt to bring in prostitutes or women or girls for the purpose of prostitution or for any other immoral purpose; persons hereinafter called contract laborers, who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment or in consequence of agreements, oral, written, or printed, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled; those who have been, within one year from the date of application for admission to the United States, deported as having been induced or solicited to migrate as above described; any person whose ticket or passage is paid for with the money of another, or who is assisted by others to come, unless it is affirmatively and satisfactorily shown that such person does not belong to one of the foregoing excluded classes, and that said ticket or passage was not paid for by any corporation, association, society, municipality, or foreign government, either directly or indirectly; all children under 16 years of age, unaccompanied by one or both of their parents, at the discretion of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor or under such regulations as he may from time to time prescribe: Provided, That nothing in this act shall exclude, if otherwise admissible, persons convicted of an offense purely political, not involving moral turpitude: Provided further, That the provisions of this section relating to the payments for tickets or passage by any corpora-or comply with the conditions and requirements of any regulations which for the time being are in force and applicable to such persons under sections 37 or 38 of this act.

tion, association, society, municipality, or foreign government shall not apply to tickets of passage of aliens in immediate and continuous transit through the United States to foreign contiguous territory: And provided further, That skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed can not be found in this country: And provided further, That the provisions of this law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, ministers of any religious denomination, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession, or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants.

Although the phraseology employed differs somewhat in the exclusion provisions of the two laws above quoted, it is apparent that both are designed to exclude practically the same classes of physical, mental, and moral defectives and delinquents. Because of this fact a comparison of the essential provisions of the two laws is of interest.

It will be noted that the United States law excludes persons whose passage is paid by any corporation, society, municipality, or a foreign government, while the Canadian act provides for the admission of such assisted immigrants on approval of the department's representative in London.

Anarchists or persons who believe in the overthrow of government are specifically excluded by the United States, but not by the Canadian law. The latter, however, provides for the deportation from Canada of—any person other than a Canadian citizen [who] advocates in Canada the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of Great Britain or Canada, or other British dominion, colony, possession, or dependency, or the overthrow by force or violence of constituted law and authority, or the assassination of any official of the Government of Great Britain or Canada or other British dominion, colony, possession, or dependency, or of any foreign government, or shall by word or act or attempt to create riot or public disorder in Canada, or shall by common repute belong to or be suspected of belonging to any secret society or organization which extorts money from, or in any way attempts to control, any resident of Canada by force or threat of bodily harm, or by blackmail;

Polygamists, unaccompanied children, and contract laborers are also among the classes excluded by the United States law, but not specifically by the Canadian act. Polygamists are not mentioned in the latter, and as previously explained, Canada welcomes British children and provides homes for them in Canadian families.

There is a radical difference, noted elsewhere, between the attitude of Canada and the provisions of the United States law with regard to the admission of so-called contract laborers.^a DISCRETIONARY AUTHORITY GRANTED OFFICIALS.

The most striking feature of the Canadian immigration law, and the one in which it differs most widely from the United States law, is its flexibility, or adaptability to emergencies or changed conditions. The Canadian law confers almost unlimited power on the governor in council in matters respecting immigration.

The last paragraph of section 3 of the Canadian law as quoted provides for the exclusion of—

Persons who do not fulfill, meet, or comply with the conditions and requirements of any regulations which for the time being are in force and applicable to such persons under sections 37 or 38 of this act.

The importance of this provision will be apparent when the two sections referred to are considered. These sections are as follows:

SEC. 37. Regulations made by the governor in council under this act may provide as a condition to permission to land in Canada that immigrants and tourists shall possess in their own right money to a prescribed minimum amount, which amount may vary according to the race, occupation, or destination of such immigrant or tourist, and otherwise according to the circumstances; and may also provide that all persons coming to Canada directly or indirectly from countries which issue passports or penal certificates to persons leaving such countries shall produce such passports or penal certificates on demand of the immigration officer in charge before being allowed to land in Canada.

SEC. 38. The governor in council may, by proclamation or order whenever he deems it necessary or expedient—

(a) Prohibit the landing in Canada or at any specified port of entry in Canada of any immigrant who has come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which he is a native or naturalized citizen, and upon a through ticket purchased in that country, or prepaid in Canada;

(b) Prohibit the landing in Canada of passengers brought to Canada by any transportation company which refuses or neglects to comply with the provisions of this act;

(c) Prohibit for a stated period, or permanently, the landing in Canada, or the landing at any specified port of entry in Canada, of immigrants belonging to any race deemed unsuited to the climate or requirements of Canada, or of immigrants of any specified class, occupation, or character.

Under the Canadian immigration act of 1906 the governor in council was given wide latitude in the matter of denying admission to persons not specifically debarred by law, but considerably greater authority in this regard is conferred by the above sections. As a matter of fact it would appear that the governor in council has practically unlimited power, and could, if deemed desirable, not only prohibit the immigration to Canada of any particular class, but practically suspend all immigration.

On May 9, 1910, five days after the new Canadian law became effective, several orders in council were promulgated under authority of sections 37 and 38, above quoted.^a One of the orders provided as follows:^b

1. No immigrant, male or female, other than a member of a family provided for under the following regulations, shall be permitted to enter Canada between the 1st day of March and the 31st day of October, both days inclusive, unless he or she have in actual and personal possession at the time of arrival money, belonging absolutely to such immigrant, to the amount of at least $25

^a The Law and Regulations of Canada Respecting Immigration and Immigrants, issued by the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, May 16, 1910.

^b See Appendix G, No. I, p. 141.

in addition to a ticket or such sum of money as will purchase a ticket or transport for such immigrant to his or her destination in Canada.

2. If an immigrant so intending to enter Canada is the head of a family and is accompanied by his or her family or any members thereof, the foregoing regulations shall not apply to such family or the members thereof, but the said immigrant head of family shall have in his or her possession, in addition to the said sum of money and means of transport hereinbefore required, a further sum of money, belonging absolutely to such immigrant, equivalent to $25 for each member of the said family of the age of 18 years or upward, and $12.50 for each member of said family of the age of 5 years or upward and under the age of 18 years, and in addition tickets or a sum of money equivalent to the cost of transport for all the said members of the family to their place of destination in Canada.

3. Every such immigrant seeking to enter Canada, between the 1st day of November and the last day of February, both inclusive, shall be subject to the foregoing regulations, with the substitution of $50 for $25 and $25 for $12.50 wherever the said sums of $25 and $12.50 are mentioned in the said regulations.

It was provided, however, that male immigrants going to assured employment at farm work and females to assured employment at domestic service may be admitted if possessed of means of reaching the place of such employment. Under this order the money requirement may also be abrogated in the case of immigrants going to join certain relatives.

Similar orders in council had been promulgated under the law of 1906.^a

Three other orders in council, all of which were promulgated on May 9, 1910, provided as follows:^b

No immigrant shall be permitted to enter Canada if he or she, being a subject or citizen of any country which issues a passport or penal certificate or both to persons emigrating therefrom, fails to produce such passport or penal certificate or both upon demand by the immigration officer in charge, and whether coming to Canada directly or indirectly from any such country.

No immigrant of Asiatic origin shall be permitted to enter Canada unless in actual and personal possession in his or her own right of two hundred dollars, unless such person is a native or subject of an Asiatic country in regard to which special statutory regulations are in force or with which the government of Canada has made a special treaty, agreement, or convention.

From and after the date hereof the landing in Canada shall be and the same is hereby prohibited of any immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens, and upon through tickets purchased in that country or purchased or prepaid in Canada.

The last two orders quoted were in effect identical with orders promulgated under the law of 1906. Both of these orders were evidently intended primarily to exclude Hindus. Canada has a special statutory provision relative to Chinese immigration, and Japanese immigration to the Dominion is regulated under an agreement with Japan. Neither of these provisions applies to Hindu immigration, which is consequently affected by the money requirement mentioned. A still more effective safeguard against the coming of Hindus, however, is found in the order which requires that immigrants come to Canada by a continuous journey. The peculiar efficiency of this provision is due to the fact that there is no means by which a continuous journey from India to Canada can be accomplished.

As above stated, the orders in council promulgated under the act of May 4, 1910, were practically identical with orders issued under the law of 1906, which affirms a previous statement that the new law did not particularly affect the Canadian system of regulating immigration. Several orders in council quoted in the previous report of the Commission upon this subject are retained in the present report,^a and these indicate the earlier purpose of the Dominion government to absolutely control the immigration movement.

^b See Appendix G, Nos. II, III, and IV, p. 142.

One of the orders promulgated under the old laws will clearly illustrate this point. Section 10 of the law of 1906 provided as follows:

The governor in council may, on the recommendation of the minister, make such orders and regulations, not inconsistent with this act, as are considered necessary or expedient for the carrying out of this act, according to its true intent and meaning, and for the better attainment of its object.

In practice this section evidently assumed an importance beyond what is suggested by a casual reference to its terms, as will be seen by an order of the governor in council dated May 27, 1908, which is here presented in full:^b

Whereas a considerable number of European immigrants arrive in Canada by way of United States Atlantic and Pacific seaports, coming in by rail from port of landing in the United States, many of whom are of the classes prohibited by the immigration act from landing in Canada, and are for this reason or for causes arising within a period of two years of their arrival in Canada deportable under the act;

And whereas upon the superintendent of immigration seeking to deport such persons, the railroad companies responsible for carrying them across the border have pleaded inability to take them back on the superintendent's order, for the reason that the persons sought to be deported were not legally admissible into the United States, and would not be admitted into that country, except for transit to port of landing and immediate delivery into the custody of the steamship company responsible for taking them back to the port or place from which they were brought;

And whereas the steamship companies have had this agreement and the request of the department of the interior with respect thereto before them since about the 23d of February, 1908, but the only company that has thus far executed the agreement is the Allan Line Steamship Company (Limited) of Glasgow, running ships to Boston, Mass., and Portland, Me.;

And whereas on account of the neglect of the other companies to attend to this matter the department of the interior is, at the present time, in the position of having some 55 deportable immigrants on its hands and being unable to deport them;

Therefore his excellency the governor-general in council in these circumstances, and seeing that undesirable immigrants are constantly coming into Canada, as above described, and that the superintendent of immigration is unable to put the law in force with respect to such immigrants, is pleased to order, as a necessary measure of protection for Canada, under the authority of section 10 of the immigration act, chapter 93, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, that all such immigrants as seek to come into Canada by rail, who have come from any country on any ship landing at a United States port belonging to any steamship company or owner who has not entered into the agreement hereto annexed, shall be and they are hereby prohibited from landing in or coming into Canada.

The importance of this traffic to steamship companies bringing to United States ports passengers bound to Canada, is indicated by the fact that 29,308 out of 204,157, or 14.4 per cent, of the trans-oceanic immigrant arrivals in Canada during the year ending March 31, 1908, came via the United States. These were distributed by ports as follows:^a

^a See Appendix B, pp. 97-101.

^b Appendix B, No. IV, p. 99.

New York	22, 379
Portland, Me	3, 650
Boston	1, 987
Philadelphia	898
Baltimore	394
Total	29, 308

Perhaps it is needless to add that the agreement suggested by the Canadian authorities was entered into without great delay on the part of the steamship companies.

REJECTIONS AT PORTS OF ENTRY.

Observations at Canadian ports indicate that, generally speaking, the inspection of immigrants, both medical and otherwise, under the Canadian law is less rigid than under the United States law, which statement is substantiated, in part at least, by the record of rejections in 1908 under the respective laws, as shown by the following table:

TABLE 33.—Total number of immigrants admitted and rejected under Canadian and United States laws, fiscal year 1908.

Country.	Admitted.	Rejected.	Proportion rejected.
Canada	262, 469	1, 002	1 to 262
United States	782, 820	10, 907	1 to 72

An exact comparison in this regard is impossible, because the laws of the two countries differ somewhat as to excluded classes. The principal difference to be considered in this connection is the United States contract-labor provision, under which 1,932 aliens were excluded in the year 1908. This does not seriously affect the comparison, however, for disregarding the number of contract laborers excluded, the proportion of other classes excluded to those admitted to the United States in the year mentioned was 1 to 87. Therefore it is fair to assume that under the United States laws the proportion of comparable exclusions in the year mentioned was three times as great as under the Canadian act.

A study of exclusions by classes of immigrants under the Canadian and United States laws strikingly illustrates the effect of Canada's policy of discrimination between immigrants from different sections of Europe as compared with the result of the nondiscriminating policy of the United States in this regard, as will be seen by the following table:

TABLE 34.—European immigrants, including Syrian, admitted and rejected under the Canadian and the United States laws in 1908, by race or people.

[Compiled from reports of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, and reports of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration.]

Race or people.	Canada.			United States.
	Admitted.	Rejected.	Proportion rejected.	Admitted.	Rejected.	Proportion rejected.
North and west European, including Icelandic.....	133,136	152	1 to 876	239,981	2,263	1 to 106
Other European, including Syrian....	54,600	395	1 to 138	506,136	6,282	1 to 81

While not nearly so pronounced as in the case of Canada, there is apparently a discrimination on the part of the United States against immigrants from southern and eastern Europe; but this is doubtless entirely due to the fact that a preponderance of certain excludable classes, such as contract laborers and persons afflicted with loathsome or dangerous contagious diseases comes from that section, and not to a discriminatory policy with regard to races or peoples, as such.

On the other hand, it must be assumed that the large proportion of rejections among south and east European immigrants to Canada, compared with the number of north and west Europeans debarred, is due almost entirely to the fact that Canada discriminates in favor of the latter. The same causes which obtain in the United States, as above stated, may account in a small degree for the result in Canada, and it is possible that the more or less definite system of selection exercised by Canadian officials abroad may have some effect in this regard, but in the main the difference is undoubtedly due to Canada's official attitude toward the classes mentioned.

A medical officer of the Canadian immigration service is now stationed at New York for the purpose of examining arriving immigrants destined to Canada. In the fiscal year ending March 31, 1909, this officer rejected 131 such immigrants, or 1 in every 65 arriving, a considerably larger proportion than was rejected under the United States law for the corresponding year.^a

DEPORTATION AFTER LANDING.

Although the number of immigrants rejected under the Canadian act is proportionately much smaller than under the United States law, Canada has an additional safeguard, or second line of defense, in a provision of the immigration act of 1910 which makes possible a general deportation of aliens who become public charges within three years after their landing in the Dominion.

Under the law of 1906 the limit within which deportation of public charges could be made was two years, and what follows is necessarily based on the operation of the earlier law.

^a Report of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, 1909, p. 103.

Section 28 of the immigration act of 1906 provided as follows:^a

No person shall be permitted to land in Canada who is a pauper or destitute, a professional beggar or vagrant, or who is likely to become a public charge; and any person landed in Canada who, within two years thereafter, has become a charge upon the public funds, whether municipal, provincial, or federal, or an inmate of or a charge upon any charitable institution, may be deported and returned to the port or place whence he came or sailed for Canada.

The method of procedure under this section as provided in section 33 of the same act was as follows:^a

1. Whenever in Canada an immigrant has, within two years of his landing in Canada, become a public charge, or an inmate of a penitentiary, gaol, prison, or hospital or other charitable institution, it shall be the duty of the clerk or secretary of the municipality to forthwith notify the minister, giving full particulars.

2. On receipt of such information the minister may, in his discretion, after investigating the facts, order the deportation of such immigrant at the cost and charges of such immigrant if he is able to pay, and if not, then at the cost of the municipality wherein he has last been regularly resident, if so ordered by the minister, and if he is a vagrant or tramp or there is no such municipality, then at the cost of the department of the interior.

3. When the immigrant is an inmate of a penitentiary, gaol, or prison the minister of justice may, upon the request of the minister of the interior, issue an order to the warden or governor of such penitentiary, gaol, or prison, commanding him to deliver the said immigrant to the person named in the warrant issued by the superintendent of immigration as hereinafter provided, with a view to the deportation of such immigrant; and the superintendent of immigration shall issue his warrant to such person as he may authorize to receive such immigrant from the warden or governor of the penitentiary, gaol, or prison, as the case may be, and such order and warrant may be in the form given in schedule 2 of this act.

4. Such order of the minister of justice shall be sufficient authority to the warden or governor of the penitentiary, gaol, or prison, as the case may be, to deliver such immigrant to the person named in the warrant of the superintendent of immigration as aforesaid, and such warden or governor shall obey such order; and such warrant of the superintendent of immigration shall be sufficient authority to the person named therein to detain such immigrant in his custody in any part of Canada until such immigrant is delivered to the authorized agent of the transportation company or companies which brought him into Canada, with a view to his deportation as herein provided.

5. Every immigrant deported under this section shall be carried by the same transportation company or companies which brought him into Canada to the port from which he came to Canada without receiving the usual payment for such carriage.

6. In case he was brought into Canada by a railway company, such company shall similarly convey him or secure his conveyance from the municipality or locality whence he is to be deported to the country whence he was brought.

7. Any immigrant deported under this section as having become an inmate of a penitentiary, gaol, or prison, who returns to Canada after such deportation may be brought before any justice of the peace in Canada; and such justice of the peace shall thereupon make out his warrant under his hand and seal for the recommittal of such immigrant to the penitentiary, gaol, or prison from which he was deported, or to any other penitentiary, gaol, or prison in Canada; and such immigrant shall be so recommitted accordingly and shall undergo a term of imprisonment equal to the residue of his sentence which remained unexpired at the time of his deportation.

By this provision Canada practically established a probationary period of two years during which admitted immigrants might be effectively tested physically, mentally, morally, and industrially, and deported to the country whence they came if found unworthy. The deportation provision became effective July 13, 1906. Deportations were possible, however, previous to that time, and the record shows that between January 1, 1903, and March 31, 1909, 3,149 aliens were deported. This number distributed by fiscal years is as follows:^a

1905	86
1906	137
1907	201
1908	825
Total	3, 149

It will be noted that of the 3,149 deportations from Canada during the seven years considered, 2,573, or 81.7 per cent of the whole, have occurred during the fiscal years 1908 and 1909.

The racial distribution of those deported was as follows:^b

Assuming for the purposes of this article that all immigrants admitted to Canada since 1901 were subject to deportation under the law, it is interesting to note the effect on the various immigrant classes as shown by the following tables, which compare, by class of

As previously shown, comparatively few immigrants from the north and west of Europe are denied admission to Canada on arrival, the proportion rejected to those admitted in 1908 being 1 to 876, while among those from European countries where no immigration effort is made the proportion was 1 to 138. This apparent discrimination suggests that Canada generally accepts immigrants from the favored countries on probation, and that other Europeans are more carefully selected at the time of their landing. Whatever the fact in this regard may be, it is evident that no discrimination is made in favor of any race or class in the deportation of undesirables after landing. As the above tables indicate, the proportion of deported immigrants from European countries where immigration effort is made is more than twice as great as the proportion of those from other European countries. A more conclusive proof of the nondiscriminatory policy of Canada in this regard is shown in the fact that the proportion of English and Welsh deported, 1 to 187, is greater than that of any other races except the Dutch, Greek, Roumanian, and Turkish, and among the last named the numbers involved are too small to be particularly significant. In striking contrast with the large proportion of English and Welsh deported is the small proportion of Italians, only 1 of this race being deported to 1,559 admitted.

The Japanese, who are now practically excluded from admission to Canada, show the smallest proportion of deportations, 1 to 3,105, and immigrants from the United States are second in this regard, the proportion of deported being 1 to 2,644.

In his annual report for 1908, P. H. Bryce, chief medical officer of the Canadian department of immigration, accounts for the preponderance of English among those deported after admission as follows:^a

Not only does the large number of people from English cities come to our large cities, but it is especially true of that class, "ne'er-do-wells," social and moral derelicts, and ineffectives in general. They are not only physically unequal to the task of farm life, but they are further usually incapable of enduring the quiet of rural life. Hence if sent to the country they too frequently drift back to town, and when winter comes and work fails they seek aid in those institutions set apart for the city poor and helpless.

In striking contrast with this is the following comment by the same official:^b

The notable absence of mental defectives amongst the peoples from southern countries is a matter of much interest and, contrary to a too popular opinion, it appears that if compulsory education can be generally enforced we have in such races not only an industrial asset of great value, but also the assurance of a population remarkably free from the degenerative effects seen in those classes which have been for several generations factory operatives and dwellers in the congested centers of large industrial populations. Recognizing the constant and increasing need of a population not only capable of but willing to do the rougher work of opening up new areas by building railways and canals, we may consider it a fortunate matter if such can be obtained of clean blood and much native energy, only requiring the influence of social and educational environments to transform them into good citizens and absorb them into the masses of our law-abiding and progressive communities.

The wide range of causes for deportation under the Canadian law is shown by the following table:

It will be noted that, with the exception of the Bulgarians, all of whom were deported as public charges, the various causes of deportation were well distributed among the races. Particularly suggestive is the fact that the English contributed largely to each class of what Mr. Bryce terms "ineffectives in general."

The Canadian law relating to the deportation of admitted aliens is radically different from the United States law upon the same subject. Under the latter but one class of aliens can be deported for acts committed or because of circumstances due to causes which arise subsequent to their admission to the United States. The exception noted occurs in section 3 of the immigration law of February 20, 1907,^a which provides that—any alien woman or girl who shall be found an inmate of a house of prostitution or practicing prostitution at any time within three years after she shall have entered the United States shall be deemed to be unlawfully within the United States and shall be deported * * *.

The United States law, however, also provides:^b

That any alien who shall enter the United States in violation of law, and such as become public charges from causes existing prior to landing, shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, be taken into custody and deported to the country whence he came at any time within three years after the date of his entry into the United States.

^aAppendix H, p. 145.

^bSection 20, United States immigration act of February 20, 1907. Appendix H, p. 145.

A comparison of the last-mentioned provision of the United States law with section 28 of the Canadian act of 1906, previously quoted (p. 49), clearly indicates the radically different policy of the two countries in this regard. Under the Canadian law deportation was not restricted to those cases where the alien became a public charge from causes existing prior to landing, but he could be deported from Canada for causes arising at any time within two^a years after landing. Because of this difference in the law and policy of the two governments it is impossible to make comparison other than to merely indicate the result obtained under each. This is presented in the following table, which shows the number of immigrants admitted to each country during the fiscal years 1907, 1908, and 1909, and the number deported from each country after admission during the same period:

TABLE 42.—Immigrants admitted and aliens deported after admission, Canada and the United States, fiscal years 1907 to 1909.

[Compiled from reports of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, and reports of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration.]

Country.	Immigrants admitted.	Aliens deported.	Proportion deported.
Canada.....	534,044	2,774	1 to 193
United States.....	2,820,005	5,188	1 to 544

As previously stated, no restriction was placed upon the deportation of delinquent, defective, and otherwise undesirable aliens from Canada, provided the cause for such deportation arose within two years after arrival. Under the United States law the process of deportation, except in the case of prostitutes as noted, is accompanied by the necessity of proving illegal entry into the country or, in the case of public charges, that they became such from causes existing prior to landing. Moreover, under the Canadian law municipal authorities are required to cooperate with government officials in making the deportation provision effective, an arrangement which does not and can not exist in the United States. On the other hand, the United States law permits deportation within three years, while the Canadian law under discussion limited such time to two years. All things considered, the possibility of deporting undesirable aliens is much less restricted in Canada than in the United States, but the above table indicates that, in spite of severe legal restrictions and the absence of compulsory assistance from state or municipal authorities, the comparative results obtained in the United States were decidedly favorable.

The possible effect of the adoption in the United States of the deportation provisions in the Canadian law must of necessity be a matter of speculation. A suggestion in this regard, however, based on the census of alien inmates of penal, reformatory, insane, and charitable institutions in the United States made by the Bureau of Immigration in 1908, is interesting if not conclusive. The census referred to included all penal, reformatory, and charitable institutions, public and private, including county jails and poorhouses, institutions for feeble-minded, hospitals, asylums, and penal institutions of all classes in the United States and in Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico. In the case of all aliens detained in institutions covered by this census an attempt was made to learn the length of time they had been in the United States. This information could not be secured from all aliens, and the percentages which appear hereafter are based upon answers of aliens from whom this information could be obtained.^a The data, moreover, are not entirely reliable for the purpose at hand, as the census included some aliens classed as criminals who, while detained in penal institutions at the time, had not actually been convicted of crime. The census also included persons detained for minor offenses as well as serious crimes, and it is probable that even under the sweeping provisions of the Canadian law not all of this class would have been considered deportable.

The results of the census show that 60,501 aliens or unnaturalized foreign-born persons were detained in all penal, reformatory, and charitable institutions, and the approximate number who had been in the United States two years or less was 7,769.

TABLE 43.—Aliens detained in penal, reformatory, and charitable institutions, United States, 1908, by class and length of time in country.

[Compiled from report of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration, 1908.]

Class.	Total.	In country two years or less.
		Number.	Percent.
Criminals.....	15,323	3,049	19.9
Insane.....	25,606	845	3.3
Paupers.....	19,572	3,875	19.8
Total.....	60,501	7,769

The total number of inmates of all institutions enumerated was 610,477, including 60,501 aliens, 73,593 naturalized citizens, and 476,383 native born, and theoretically, under the Canadian law, 7,769, or 1 to every 79 of the whole number detained, were deportable.

MEDICAL OFFICERS AND THEIR DUTIES.

The Canadian immigration laws and regulations confer great administrative authority upon medical officers, especially with reference to the admission, exclusion, and deportation of immigrants. The chief medical officer is directly responsible to the immigration department for the proper enforcement of regulations necessary to prevent the landing of undesirable immigrants. Local medical officers at ports of landing exercise like authority in a more restricted field. The following regulation issued under the Canadian law, and applied alike to the chief and to local medical officers, illustrates the peculiar powers vested in these officials:^a

All agents and officials of the department must obey all directions given by the medical officer regarding the deportation or the retention of any immigrants with respect to whose health there has been, or is, any question.

In striking contrast with this is the position of medical officers under the United States immigration law, section 17 of which provides:^b

That the physical and mental examination of all arriving aliens shall be made by medical officers of the United States Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, * * * who shall certify for the information of the immigration officers and the boards of special inquiry * * * any and all physical and mental defects or diseases observed by said medical officers in any such alien * * *

To complete the contrast, attention is directed to the following regulation of the United States Bureau of Immigration relative to medical officers detailed from the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service to the immigration service:^c

Every officer of such service (United States Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service) detailed for this duty shall, subject to the instructions of the Surgeon-General of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, be under the direction of the immigration officer in charge of the port to which he may be detailed.

It will be observed that the authority of the United States medical officer does not extend beyond the mere certification of the physical and mental condition of immigrants, their admission or exclusion being entirely in the hands of the immigration officers, boards of special inquiry, and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, except in cases where rejection is mandatory under the law.

On the other hand, the Canadian medical officer exercises absolute authority with regard to the admission or rejection of immigrants when the matter of health is in question and his functions as an administrative officer of the government extend even beyond this. In short, the duties of the Canadian medical officer are administrative as well as professional, while the United States medical officer serves merely in an advisory capacity.

CONTRACT LABOR.

Canada's contract-labor policy is exceedingly interesting in comparison with the United States policy in that regard.

An immigrant coming to Canada without first having assured himself that some definite employment awaits him is quite likely to be debarred from entering on that account;^d while an immigrant who comes to the United States with such assurance, and admits it, is necessarily excluded as a contract laborer.^e

The difference in the policy of the two countries, as far as individual cases of so-called contract labor are concerned, is strikingly illustrated at Canadian ports where immigrants destined both to Canada and the United States are examined. A single instance observed by a member of the Commission will illustrate the point. At Quebec recently a young Englishman destined to a middle western State was held for the United States board of special inquiry because he innocently admitted to an inspector that his brother, already in the United States, had assured him that he could have work on a railroad if he would come. Acting upon that assurance he left England to join the brother. When examined before the Board, he stated that he did not know the name of the railroad or the nature of the work, but simply had been assured that such a place awaited him. A rigid though sympathetic cross-examination failed to change the young man's story, and he was excluded by the Board, a decision which could hardly have been otherwise under the provision of the United States law which excludes—^a persons * * * called contract laborers, who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment or in consequence of agreements, oral, written, or printed, expressed or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled.

While the above-mentioned case was being considered before the United States board, Canadian officials were conducting an examination of Canadian-bound immigrants from the same ship in which assured employment was insisted upon as one of the chief requisites to admission.

Canada's policy in this regard is clearly illustrated by the following from an advertising pamphlet issued by the authority of the minister of the interior:^b

Important.—Farmers, farm laborers, and female domestic servants are the only people the Canadian immigration department advises to emigrate to Canada. All others should get definite assurance of employment in Canada before leaving home and have money enough to support them for a time in case of disappointment.

PROTECTION OF IMMIGRANTS.

Under the Canadian system the official interest of the government in the immigrant continues until he has secured employment or reached his final destination in Canada. At many points in the districts to which immigrants go the immigration department maintains agencies which assist the newcomers, and so-called immigration halls for the free accommodation of newly arrived immigrants have been established at various places. The Dominion government also maintains free information or employment bureaus in the principal centers for the benefit of employers of labor as well as persons seeking employment. Through these bureaus the immigration department and its agents abroad are kept informed as to the demand for labor in various parts of the country, and so are enabled to, in part, direct immigrants to points where assured employment awaits them. In many cases the agents abroad advise the employment bureaus of the coming of immigrants in order that arrangements for their employment may be completed by the time they reach Canada. The Canadian department seeks to protect newly arrived immigrants from all kinds of imposition and exploitation. Hotels and boarding houses patronized by immigrants are regulated by law,^a and generally the newcomers are treated as wards of the government until they are finally established.

An instance of Canada's care of the immigrant appears in the cooperation of the department with the various churches. The Canadian steamship manifest contains among other inquiries a question relative to the religion of the immigrant. The immigration authorities state that officials of the department are instructed not to insist upon an answer to this question if any objection to answering it is raised by the immigrant. The information, it is stated, is gathered not because the government lays any stress upon religious belief or makes it in any sense a test of the admissibility of the immigrant, but largely in order to assist the churches in work among those newly arrived. A list of arriving immigrants, classified by their religious belief, and their destinations, is furnished to the head of any religious denomination requesting the same. Such church officials are enabled in this way to notify church authorities in different localities of the arrival of such immigrants, and it is said that much good results, not merely in putting the new immigrants into better social surroundings, but also in the way of helping them to secure work.

CHAPTER V.

ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION.

Canada, in common with other colonial possessions of Great Britain and with the United States, has an oriental immigration problem, and like other countries has adopted a policy which practically excludes Asiatic laborers. As in the United States, oriental immigration was for a considerable period confined almost exclusively to the Chinese. Later came the Japanese, and finally the Hindus, or East Indians. These immigrants, for the most part, settled on the Pacific coast, and the Province of British Columbia led the movement for their exclusion.

In 1900 the legislative assembly of this Province adopted what was known as the "British Columbia immigration act."^a And this act was framed to exclude Asiatics primarily, but by its terms all illiterates might also be denied admission to the Province. The provision under which it was sought to accomplish this end was as follows:

The immigration into British Columbia of any person who, when asked to do so by the officer appointed under this act, shall fail himself to write out and sign in the characters of some language of Europe, an application to the provincial secretary of the Province of British Columbia, to the effect of the form set out in Schedule B to this act annexed, shall be unlawful.

Schedule B, referred to, was as follows:

SCHEDULE B.

Province of British Columbia.

SIR: I claim to be exempt from the operation of the "British Columbia immigration act 1900." My full name is _____. My place of abode for the past twelve months has been _____. My business or calling is _____. I was born at _____ in the year _____.

Yours, etc., _____

The act further provided that—

An immigrant making his way into or being found in British Columbia in contravention of the provisions of this act shall not be entitled to a license to carry on any trade or calling that is subject to the legislative authority of British Columbia, nor shall he be entitled to acquire and hold land, or to any of the rights or privileges of a free miner, or to a free miner's certificate, or to exercise the franchise, and any license or franchise right which may have been acquired in contravention of this act shall be void.

The "British Columbia immigration act" was disallowed by Earl Minto, governor-general of Canada, in 1901.^b

^a Chapter 11, Revised Statutes British Columbia. 1900.

^b The British Columbia Gazette, October 10, 1901, p. 1677.

Similar acts were passed by the legislative assembly of British Columbia in 1902,^a 1903,^b 1904,^c and 1905,^d but all were disallowed. In each of these acts the immigrant's admission to British Columbia was conditioned upon his ability to "write in the characters of some language of Europe." The acts of 1902 and 1903 proposed a reading test also, and the acts of 1904 and 1905 required that the immigrant write at dictation "in the characters of some language of Europe," and sign "a passage of 50 words in length in an European language."

Although British Columbia was unable to legislate effectively against Asiatic immigration the agitation for restriction continued until the Canadian government adopted measures which resulted in practically excluding Asiatic immigrants from the Dominion.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

Canada, like the United States, dealt with the Chinese situation through special legislation, but sought to prevent their coming by means of a prohibitive head tax rather than by absolute restriction. At first the tax was fixed at $50, but evidently this did not have the desired effect, for the amount was increased from time to time until at present every Chinaman, except those belonging to a limited exempt class, is required to pay $500 for the privilege of entering Canada. The Canadian law in this regard is as follows:^e

Every person of Chinese origin, irrespective of allegiance, shall pay into the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada, on entering Canada, at the port or place of entry, a tax of five hundred dollars, except the following persons who shall be exempt from such payment, that is to say:

(a) The members of the diplomatic corps, or other government representatives, their suites and their servants, and consuls and consular agents.

(b) The children born in Canada of parents of Chinese origin and who have left Canada for educational or other purposes, on substantiating their identity to the satisfaction of the controller at the port or place where they seek to enter on their return.

(c) Merchants, their wives and minor children; the wives and minor children of clergymen; tourists; men of science (subject to such regulations as may from time to time be made by the Governor in Council); duly certified teachers; who shall substantiate their status to the satisfaction of the controller, subject to the approval of the minister, or who are bearers of certificates of identity, or other similar documents issued by the Government or by a recognized official or representative of the Government whose subjects they are, specifying their occupation and their object in coming into Canada.

2. Every such certificate or other document shall be in the English or French language, and shall be examined and endorsed (visé) by a British consul or chargé d'affaires or other accredited representative of His Majesty, at the place where it is granted, or at the port or place of departure.

3. A student of Chinese origin who upon first entering Canada has substantiated his status as such to the satisfaction of the controller, subject to the approval of the minister, and who is the bearer of a certificate of identity, or other similar document issued by the Government or a recognized official or representative of the Government whose subject he is, and who at that time satisfies the controller that he is entering Canada for the purpose of securing a higher education in one of the recognized universities, or in some other educational institution approved by the Governor in Council for the purposes of this section, and who afterwards furnishes satisfactory proof that he has been a bona fide student in such university or educational institution for a period of one year shall be entitled to a refund of the tax paid by him upon his entry into Canada.

In 1907 Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, now minister of labor, but then deputy minister, was appointed a commissioner to inquire into the methods by which oriental laborers had been induced to come to Canada, and from his report upon the subject is quoted the following statement relative to Chinese immigration to Canada, past and present:^a

It was in the days of gold discovery in the mines of Cassiar and Caribou, in the early sixties, and of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in the early eighties, that immigration from China to Canada took place on a considerable scale, there being no restrictions of any kind imposed. The numbers became such, however, that in 1884 the government of the day found it necessary to appoint a royal commission to make inquiry concerning this immigration, and in * * * 1886 a tax of $50 per head was imposed on every Chinese immigrant. The number of Chinese who had come into Canada at that time was estimated as between 9,000 and 10,000. The Dominion census for the year 1891 gave the total of Chinese in Canada as 9,129, of which number 8,910 were in British Columbia. From these figures it would appear that the large influx of Chinese into British Columbia during the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway was well absorbed, nearly all apparently remaining in this country or others coming in to take their place. During the following decade the numbers so increased that in 1900 the Dominion government increased the capitation tax from $50 to $100, the increase to take effect on January 1, 1901. It was contended by the people of British Columbia that this was inadequate and ineffective in preventing Chinese immigration to Canada, and the government in the same year appointed a second commission to investigate concerning Chinese and Japanese immigration into the province. The census in 1901 gave the total number of Chinese in Canada as 16,792, of which by far the greater portion were in the Province of British Columbia. The commission appointed in 1900 found that, as represented, the $100 head tax upon Chinese was ineffective and inadequate, and recommended that the amount of the tax be increased to $500. Adopting this recommendation, Parliament, in July, 1903, enacted a law placing a tax of $500 on all Chinese entering the country, but its provisions did not come into force till January 1, 1904. The returns show that between June, 1900, and January 1, 1904, over 16,000 Chinese paid the tax of $100, as follows:

Fiscal year—

June, 1900–1901	2, 518
June, 1901–2	3, 525
June, 1902–3	5, 245
June, 1903, to January 1, 1904	4, 719
Total	16, 007

In other words, the total Chinese population in Canada nearly doubled during the years 1900 to 1903, inclusive. Assuming that the bulk of the Chinese who came into the country remained here, it would appear that at the time the $500 tax was imposed there were over 30,000 Chinese in Canada, most of whom were in the Province of British Columbia. What effect the new legislation had will be apparent from the following figures, which show the number of Chinese who have paid the tax in the years since the $500 limit was imposed:

From January 1, 1904, to June 30, 1904	0
From June 30, 1904, to June 30, 1905	8
From June 30, 1905, to June 30, 1906	22
From June 30, 1906, to June 30, 1907	91
From June 30, 1907, to March 31, 1908	1, 482

^a Report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the methods by which oriental laborers have been induced to come to Canada. W. L. Mackenzie King, C. M. G., Commissioner, Ottawa, 1908, pp. 69–72.

Paradoxical as it may be, the all but complete cessation of Chinese immigration which followed the increase of the capitation tax to $500, which cessation continued up until the beginning of 1907, and the sharp upward movement which has taken place since, are each, in large measure, the result of the increase in the amount of the tax. The explanation is simple. Prior to the imposition of any tax Chinese came to this country in such numbers that they not only entered into serious competition with white labor, but being in such numbers there was more or less competition among themselves. Unfamiliar with the conditions in Canada, having come from a land where unskilled labor earns from 5 to 10 cents per day, and skilled about double, and at most treble, that amount, a wage of $20 to $40 a month to a laborer and a wage of $10 to $30 to a servant appeared to afford the opportunity of saving, within the course of a few years, that fortune which the Chinese immigrant came to this country to seek. Labor agencies and contractors found it a profitable business to bring Chinese in large numbers to the country. Yip Sang, a prominent Chinese merchant of Vancouver, stated that were there no tax at the present time at least 8,000 would come out each year, and that he himself would bring out Chinese in large numbers. Chinese brought to this country by labor agencies and contractors, or who had come of their own volition, by informing relatives and friends in China of opportunities here, set up what may be described as a natural flow in the tide of Chinese emigration; this tide the tax of $50 or $100 was too small to check.

The imposition of a $500 tax administered a death blow to the work of the labor agencies and contractors. For a while it raised an almost effective barrier against the natural tide. An advance of $50 or even $100 to emigrants coming under the guarantee of service was a risk which agencies or contractors, considering first the security of their profits, hesitated to incur; when this amount was raised to $500, such an advance could no longer be considered as a business proposition. Likewise, the Chinaman who was desirous of having his relatives or friends share his opportunity discovered that through the imposition of the tax the economic inducement to immigration had been suddenly swept away. At the rate of wages then current for Chinese labor, he could extend to his friends no hope of being able to recover, even after many years of industrious toil, an outlay for admission so considerable. The Chinese at home looked on the new tax as constituting an all but impossible barrier. The Chinamen in the new land had not yet seen how this barrier was to be surmounted. Then the economic effect of the tax gradually became apparent. The Chinaman who had landed in this country prior to January, 1904, discovered that the state, unwittingly perhaps, had, by restricting further competition from without, created of his labor a huge monopoly; without organization, without expense, without even agitation, every Chinaman became a unit in a labor group more favored than the most exclusive and highly protected trade union. Then monopoly began to do its work. The Chinaman, discovering his protected position, sought the advance in wages which comes from an increasing demand and a diminishing supply. Within a couple of years the wages doubled, and in some instances, more particularly in the case of servants of a better class, trebled, and even went beyond this point. Yip Sang testified that before the $500 tax was imposed he paid Chinamen for packing fish from $25 to $40 a month, with food; that now he has obliged to pay for the same services $60 to $70; that in other classes of employment Chinese were obtaining at the present time $2.50 where before the tax had been imposed only $1 was received. Thus, it has come about that as a result of the rise of wages consequent upon the monopoly created by the tax Chinamen have found, speaking generally, that once in the country it is possible to accumulate within half the time the sum desired, and that thereafter the fortune from year to year is apt to be nearly or more than double what it originally was.

It took about three years for the economic changes to work out and for the Chinaman to become fully aware of the new situation. Once cognizant of it, he began to advise his relatives and friends in China.

With the betterment of their economic conditions, the number of Chinamen returning for a visit to their own country began to increase. This number has grown so steadily since the tax was imposed that during the closing months of the past year the steamship companies found it next to impossible to afford the accommodation demanded by Chinamen desirous of returning for a short sojourn to their own land. Many Chinamen who have gone on a visit to their own country have brought back with them relatives or friends. Others who have remained in Canada have sent home money to assist in the bringing of others out. Some have simply furnished the information and have left it to the intending emigrant to procure in such way as he might the amount that was necessary to pay his passage and the tax imposed.

The difference in the remuneration of labor in Canada and China, and the fact that the savings of a few years here constitute a life fortune in China, have constituted the main incentives to emigration. The tax and its economic effects account for the numbers being what they are. The assistance given to their relatives and friends by Chinese, either here or in China, sometimes from humanitarian, sometimes from commercial motives, explain the means by which they have come. In addition to this a number of those who are coming at the present time are Chinese who have resided in the United States at one time, or have friends residing here at present. They know conditions on this side of the water, and not being permitted to enter the United States are coming to this country.

CHINESE IN TRANSIT.

The persistence of the Chinese in coming to the New World, despite the inhospitable attitude of Canada and the United States, is in part shown by the number annually passing in transit through Canada, bound for the West Indies and elsewhere.

The following table shows this movement through the port of Vancouver for the past three years:

TABLE 44.—Chinese in transit through Canada, via Vancouver, by destination, fiscal years 1907 to 1909.

[Compiled from statistical table furnished by department of trade and commerce, Canada.]

Total.....	2,785	126	1,007	4,181	120	101	5	9	8,334

During the same years 88 Chinese destined to the United States were, according to the same authority, admitted at the port of Victoria. During the fiscal year 1908, 2,800 Chinese passed through the United States in transit to other countries. Of these, 1,962 reached the United States overland, and of course many of them are recorded in the Canadian statistics quoted. Of this class of immigrants the United States Commissioner-General of Immigration says:^a

There is no doubt that with these transits, as with the same class in the past, many enter Mexico and other near-by countries with the purpose, often accomplished, of eventually taking up a residence in the United States despite the provisions of law, * * *.

JAPANESE IMMIGRATION.

Until recent years no record was kept of Japanese immigrants arriving in Canada, and consequently the development of the movement can not be accurately traced. The Canadian census of 1901^b shows that 4,674 persons born in Japan were in the Dominion at that time, 4,515 of whom were in the Province of British Columbia. According to the same census,^a 27 persons born in Japan were present in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. A census taken in 1906^a in these three Provinces shows an increase of only 77 in the Japanese population. In the meantime a considerable number of Japanese had come to Canada, but, as in the United States, they appear to have settled near the Pacific coast. Statistics are available relative to Japanese immigration to Canada beginning with the fiscal year 1905, and the movement since that time has been as follows:^b

^a Report of United States Commissioner-General of Immigration, 1908, p. 159.

^b The Canada Year Book, 1908, pp. 2 and 4.

1905-6.....	1,922
1906-7 (9 months).....	2,042
1907-8.....	7,601
1908-9.....	495
April 1-August 31, 1909.....	147
Total.....	12,561

It was estimated that at the beginning of the year 1907 the Japanese population of British Columbia was about 7,500, although W. L. Mackenzie King^c thinks the number was considerably less. During the year 1907 Japanese immigration exceeded the total estimated Japanese population of the Province at the beginning of the year. This increased the already existing and determined opposition in western Canada to oriental immigration. In this connection Mr. Mackenzie King, in the report referred to, says:

Assuming, however, that 7,500 was the total Japanese population at the beginning of the year, it is not a matter of surprise that with the arrival at their shores of 8,125 Japanese in the ten months following, the people of British Columbia, and more especially the residents of Vancouver, should have experienced some concern, and that as vessel after vessel landed an ever-increasing number, until in fewer months than it had taken years to bring the Japanese population of British Columbia to what it was, this total was exceeded by new arrivals, that consternation should have been felt in many quarters. If anything more were needed to occasion unrest, it was to be found in the simultaneous arrival from the Orient of Hindus by the hundreds and Chinese in larger numbers than those of immediately preceding years. It was an alarm at numbers, and the cry of a white Canada was raised.

Of the 8,125 Japanese immigrants above referred to, 77 were refused admission and 3,619 held passports for the United States, so that the actual number admitted to Canada was 4,429.^d According, to the same authority, 2,779 of these immigrants came from Hawaii, 9 from Mexico, and 1,641 direct from Japan. Of the immigrants direct from Japan, says Mr. Mackenzie King, 900 in round numbers were sent out by the Tokyo Emigration Company at Yokohama at the instance of the Canadian Nippon Supply Company at Vancouver, in accordance with an arrangement effected between these two companies. The business of the latter company was to furnish Japanese laborers to contractors and other large employers and to furnish supplies to such laborers.

It appears that the influx of Japanese from Hawaii into Canada was largely due to the restriction placed upon such immigration into the United States, and because of this Mr. Mackenzie King's report upon the movement is of particular interest. He says in part:^a

The Japanese emigrant who reaches the Hawaiian Islands passes beyond the jurisdiction of his native country and comes beneath the flag of the United States. If employed in the sugar or rice fields, where most of his fellow-countrymen work, he will find himself the servant of an association of capitalists who control the political and financial destinies of the island. The Planters' Association of Honolulu is an organization of employers formed for the protection of their mutual interests. Its influence is limited only by the wealth it represents, while the indirect effects of that influence are of vaster sweep than its possessors know. It is reported that the wishes of this association were not forgotten when the United States Government enacted in January of last year, "that whenever the President shall be satisfied that passports issued by any foreign government to its citizens to go to any country other than the United States, or to any insular possession of the United States or the Canal Zone, are being used for the purpose of enabling the holders to come to the continental territory of the United States from such other country, or from the Canal Zone, or from such insular possessions * * *."

It is believed, at least by the Japanese who reside in the islands, that the members of the Asiatic Exclusion League in San Francisco were not without contributions from the association's incidental expense fund, to assist them in an agitation which by excluding Japanese from the mainland would confine that class of labor to the islands, to the greater economic advantage of the members of the association. It was suggested by one of the Japanese witnesses who gave testimony before the Commission, that the influence of the Planters' Association was not altogether inoperative in British Columbia to-day. Inoperative it certainly has not been, if we recognize the fact that it was in the efforts of the Planters' Association to lower the wages of the Japanese resident in Hawaii, that we find the beginnings of that unrest which has led to Japanese coming in such large numbers from the Hawaiian Islands to British Columbia during the past year. A ship that landed over 1,000 Portuguese at Honolulu, brought by the Planters' Association from Madeira to help weaken the competition of the emigrant arrivals from Japan, carried away from that port within a fortnight later, Japanese in equal numbers, who, failing to find admission to the American continent via San Francisco, as before, came at the instance of those who engineered the expedition to Canada instead; nor was this the only expedition of the kind. There was, however, a curious irony in the whole situation; more especially, as it happened that United States citizens practicing law in Honolulu, acted as the legal representatives of the Japanese boarding-house keepers, the parties primarily responsible for the exodus of their fellow-countrymen from the islands, and that in their efforts to go one better, planters and boarding-house keepers alike were losers in the ventures they had planned.

As has been seen, the total Japanese immigration to Canada from the Hawaiian Islands during the ten months ending October 31, 1907, was 2,779. This immigration had its beginning in arrivals in small numbers brought by Australian lines to the port of Victoria during the early months of the year. It was in the summer months, with the arrival at the port of Vancouver of the Admiral Jaureguiberry, and especially the arrivals subsequently of the Kumeric and Indiana that the citizens of Vancouver saw landing at their wharves a foreign multitude for which accommodations within the city's precincts could not be found. It was then that many of the indifferent were alarmed and that the people at large became aroused to what the possibilities of an unlimited immigration of persons from the Orient might mean. * * * The expeditions of the Admiral Jaureguiberry and the Kumeric were each in the nature of two-sided speculations. Their promoters were desirous of changing the attitude of the Planters' Association toward the Japanese residents in the islands; they were hopeful also of reaping a considerable profit from the transportation supplied to the Japanese who might be persuaded or desirous of leaving for Canada. The trips of the Indiana were not dissimilar in this respect.

The ground had been well prepared, unintentionally doubtless, but most effectively, by the action of the Planters' Association. When the Japanese came to the Hawaiian Islands they worked for very small wages. It is estimated that they came to the number of 50,000 or 60,000, this being in part, through the efforts of the planters to replace native labor on the plantation by Japanese coolies, a movement which started some twelve years ago. Of recent years, however, and especially since the Japanese war, the emigration of Japanese to Hawaii has been considerably restricted, and the resident Japanese have sought hard to secure an increase in their wages and improved conditions of employment. This the planters refused to grant; instead they began to arrange for the importation of Portuguese labor. The unrest thus created by the action of the planters, the boarding-house keepers sought to intensify through the agency of a local subsidized Japanese press, by means of which advantages of British Columbia as a place where labor was in demand, wages high, and opportunity great, were brought before the minds of the workers in the plantations. Many were the articles appearing, some as press dispatches from Vancouver, others simply descriptive. They were met by articles of a different sort inspired from another source; but the fact that wages for common laborers on the plantations were anywhere from $18 to $35 per month, whereas on the railways of British Columbia they were from $1.35 to $1.50 per day, gave the best of the argument to those who were seeking to bring about an exodus sufficiently great to make the planters aware of the limited supply of available labor, and secure for it remuneration at an increased rate. A brief account of the several expeditions will serve to illustrate the methods employed.

The Japanese boarding-house keepers of Honolulu, having learned that with the consent of the Government at Washington, some 3,000 Portuguese were to be brought under contract from the Canary Islands to work on the sugar plantations, that they were being brought by the Savaria and the Kumeric of the Andrew Weir Line, entered into negotiations with the Theodore Davis Company, of Honolulu, for the chartering of vessels to take Japanese to Canada. They succeeded in chartering the Admiral Jaureguiberry, and when the Kumeric arrived at Cote in Chile on her way from Madeira to Honolulu, the agents of the Theodore Davis Company succeeded in chartering her for the boarding-house keepers, to be in commission for them as soon as the Portuguese were landed. The Admiral Jaureguiberry got away without much difficulty; she carried only a small number of Japanese emigrants, 241 in all. When she landed at Vancouver, however, Doctor Munro, the medical inspector and immigration agent, acting under the regulation of his department that "no person shall be permitted to land who is a pauper or destitute or likely to become a public charge," assuming that the several emigrants had no employment awaiting them, demanded that before landing each should produce at least $25 to insure that he would not become a public charge, and not being supplied with this amount he was about to reject 150 of the new arrivals. Members of the Japanese Boarding-House Keepers' Union at Vancouver, on learning that a number of Japanese had arrived at the port and were about to be turned away for lack of funds, knowing that there would be little difficulty in securing for them immediate employment, and seeing the opportunity for a slight revenue in the way of commission for their services, and possibly also out of subsequent business dealings, came to the rescue of the party about to be rejected and advanced in cash the sum of over $3,000 as a guarantee bond that the Japanese would not become public charges. This was accepted by Mr. Munro on the condition that he should be given later a statement showing that employment had been secured by these men and where they were at work. The immigrants were then allowed to land. The passports belonging to these men were retained by the Japanese consul pending their detention. They were later given to the Boarding-House Keepers' Union, which, it is alleged, collected $5 apiece from each Japanese before returning his passport.

While the Admiral Jaureguiberry was meeting with difficulties at Vancouver, the Kumeric was having her own troubles at Honolulu. Having landed 1,400 Portuguese, she began to take on board the Japanese who had purchased their transportation for Canada. The planters, greatly incensed, threatened actions against the captain and used every means to prevent the ship putting out to sea, but she got away eventually and arrived at Vancouver on the 23d of the month.

When the Japanese boarding-house keepers of Honolulu decided on the chartering of the Kumeric, they retained Mr. Charles F. Chillingworth, a United States attorney, resident in Honolulu, as their solicitor and legal representative. Mr. Chillingworth had in his employ a Japanese interpreter, Mr. Kiro-chiro Maruyama. He, it appears, assisted materially in completing arrangements and accompanied the emigrants on their voyage to Vancouver. * * *

The charterers had learned from the experience of the emigrants on board the Admiral Jaureguiberry that it would be necessary for each of the passengers on the Kumeric to have in his possession $25, in order that he might be able to comply with the regulation of the immigration department as interpreted by its officer at Vancouver. They made arrangements, therefore, to deposit a sum of money with the Theodore Davis Company sufficient to meet the amount which would be required for all the passengers, which amount was sent by draft to the charterers' agent at Vancouver, cashed by him, and distributed among the passengers before they presented themselves for examination to Doctor Munro. The following letter was given by Theodore Davis to Captain Baird of the Kumeric, and shown by him to Doctor Munro on her arrival.

"In order to comply with the immigration law of Canada, we have collected $25 from each of the passengers going to Vancouver on the Kumeric. We have done this for the sole reason that if left in their possession they might gamble it away, and on arrival there they would not have the requisite amount of money, and therefore we considered it would not be safe, after collecting this money, to leave it in their hands, but that it would be better to hand the money over to you as master of the vessel, on account of the danger of carrying a large amount of ready cash. We have therefore sent this money to the ship's agent in Vancouver in the form of a draft, which they will cash and distribute the money among the passengers."

Doctor Munro, having seen this letter of Theodore Davis, was under the impression at the time he passed the immigrants that the whole transaction was genuine and bona fide. It appeared subsequently that the money belonging in reality to the charterers, had been put up in this way as "show" money pure and simple, and that Mr. Maruyama, who accompanied the party, had come along to see to the getting of it back after all had been landed.

When the Kumeric's 1,189 passengers had arrived, the boarding-house keepers in Vancouver were greatly concerned. They had not accommodation for more than 300, and the Japanese consul, Mr. Morikawa, was appealed to. After calling upon his worship the mayor, and conferring with Doctor Munro, Mr. Morikawa decided that it would be best to keep the party on board till he would be able to make provision for their shelter. He arranged with the street-car company to provide such cars as it could place at his disposal, and arranged that such numbers as could be handled in this way should be taken to Steveston, where temporary quarters were secured; others were to be taken around by boat to the same point on the Fraser. This was an expense incurred in the interest of the Japanese themselves, and Mr. Morikawa thought it proper that it should be met by them. Having been shown the letter which Captain Baird had in his possession, he secured the consent of the immigrants to hold this money in trust till all were properly provided for, and arranged to have a member of the consulate collect the money from each immigrant as he came off the ship. The consul, moreover, appears to have thought that the money had been put up by parties in Honolulu interested in having these emigrants sent to Canada, and he openly stated that it might help to prevent like occurrences in the future if the money did not find its way back there again.

The sight of a number of immigrant arrivals dropping $25 apiece into a sack held by an officer of the Japanese consul was too much for some of the citizens of Vancouver. The local member of the Dominion Parliament and the city solicitor each interested himself in having what seemed an extraordinary proceeding immediately stopped. Doctor Munro was sent for and gave orders that no further collections should be made, and that the money already collected should be returned. Each immigrant, therefore, landed with his $25. Had the money all been collected and returned in the manner which Mr. Morikawa thought expedient, it is probable that none of it would ever have gone back to Honolulu. As it was, many of the Japanese with this amount in their possession spurned the proffers of assistance made them by the Vancouver boarding-house keepers and sought of their own account the furtherance of the good fortune they had commenced to share the moment they put foot on Canadian soil. Mr. Maruyama had a difficult task. He was able by allowing a small commission to the boarding-house keepers to get back with their assistance some of the money which the Japanese had been allowed to retain; but Mr. Chillingworth, who happened along on the 26th of August to look after the interests of his clients, frankly admitted in an interview that the whole scheme had been a most pronounced failure and that those for whom he was acting had been heavy losers by the venture.

But Mr. Chillingworth was not the only lawyer who interested himself in promoting this novel kind of speculation. Mr. A. V. Geer, another American attorney resident at Honolulu, and a Japanese interpreter, Kinsaburo Makino, started a similar though separate venture. The vessel chartered in this case was the Indiana, which arrived at Vancouver during August and September, carrying in the former month 306 Japanese laborers and in the latter 257.

* * * Mr. Geer and his partner, Mr. Makino, had hoped to secure 800 passengers on each trip. They were able to secure only 306 on the first trip and 257 on the second. It is believed that the venture was with them a personal speculation. * * * In any event, both expeditions were failures financially to those responsible for them, though they increased the Japanese population in this country to the extent of over half a thousand.

That the numbers from the Hawaiian Islands fell off in the manner they did was doubtless due in part to the increased success which attended the efforts of the Planters' Association, but it appears to have been due also to the efforts of the Canadian Nippon Supply Company and of the Japanese consuls at Vancouver and Honolulu.

The Canadian Nippon Supply Company, as has been shown, profited by the influx from Honolulu to the extent of obtaining only 139 laborers of the numbers who came in. These, Mr. Gotoh said, proved such poor laborers that he was obliged to sacrifice the contract under which he had put them to work. But the interests of the Canadian Nippon Supply Company, as already shown, lay with the emigration companies of Japan, not with the uncertain numbers coming from parts unknown. The supply company recognized in the agitation which these increases might provoke that the foundations of their own business were threatened, and their promoters endeavored in many ways to have the tide of Hawaiian emigration stemmed.

The Hawaiian Shinpo of July 29 contains in Japanese the following cable dispatch, which Mr. Yoshy admits having sent:

"Special cable to our office.—We received a cable message from Mr. Yoshy, director of the Canadian Nippon Supply Company, of Vancouver, 9.40 p. m., of the 27th instant: 'All emigrants completed their landing on the 26th instant. Have not any houses to stay in; can not get any work; were sent out of the city about 12 miles; white men excited about it; $25 collected for support and other expenses; the emigrants had to do this.' "

In the letters and cables sent to Japan by Mr. Gotoh and Mr. Yoshy there are frequent references to the trouble which this immigration from Hawaii was giving them, and the hope was expressed that the Government in Japan might be able to do something to put a stop to it. The following, for example, is a copy of a lengthy cable sent by Mr. Gotoh to the Yokohama branch of the Canadian Nippon Supply Company. It is dated Vancouver, June 4, nearly two months before the above dispatch from Mr. Yoshy to the Hawaiian Shinpo and before either the Admiral Jaurequiberry or the Kumeric had sailed:

"VANCOUVER, June 4, 1907.

"CANADIAN NIPPON SUPPLY COMPANY,

"Yokohama.

"Information received by cable from Honolulu says certain steamers have been chartered for the purpose of importing another load of immigrants. If they are coming in this manner, we do not think we can provide all these emigrants coming out from Japan with work. They are taking such chances to carry emigrants out from Honolulu, because the Japanese Government has no way to interfere with these affairs. It is most undesirable to bring such a big load of emigrants to this country. Unless by some means these shipments from Honolulu are stopped, I can not say whether we can take care of all emigrants coming from Japan, so try and see officers at the foreign office and see if there are no means to take some decided steps to stop them.

"THE CANADIAN NIPPON SUPPLY COMPANY."

The Canadian Nippon Supply Company knew only too well that any sudden influx of Japanese in large numbers was the beginning of the end with them, and they put forth what efforts they could to save their own undoing.

More effective, perhaps, in their influence in lessening the numbers of emigrants from Hawaii were the repeated cables sent by Mr. Morikawa, the Japanese consul at Vancouver, to the Japanese consul at Hawaii, and the exertions of the latter. In the same number of the Hawaiian Shinpo as that in which Mr. Yoshy's dispatch appeared, was the following article containing a cable sent by Mr. Morikawa to the consul at Honolulu. It is headed "Pitiable condition of the emigrants on Kumeric," and reads:

"Concerning the condition of the emigrants who left on the Kumeric, the local Japanese consul-general has not received any information. He sent a cable to the consul at Vancouver; received the cable this evening, as follows: Half-past 6 p. m., 27th day, by Consul Morikawa, of Vancouver, Kumeric arrived at the quarantine station on the 25th of this month. Received strict examination by immigration inspector, and yesterday afternoon they all landed. As sent in prior cable, all immigrants have not had any houses to stay; about 800 sent to Fraser River. I understand they will not be able to secure employment, and they may suffer for want of support: White labor is excited about it, and they made active demonstration. The majority of the emigrants did not know the exact condition in here, and I hope you will try every possible way to stop any more immigrants from there."

Mr. Shintaro Anno, a Vancouver Japanese contractor, who gave evidence before the Commission, testified that he was in Honolulu at the time, and that he had read in the Japanese papers there three or four cables from Mr. Morikawa to the Japanese consul at Hawaii "trying in every possible way to prevent any more immigrants coming here." Doctor Munro, the Dominion medical inspector and immigration agent, when asked if he thought any of the employment agencies in Vancouver had had anything to do with the bringing of these men from Honolulu, replied: "No, I don't think so; but I don't know anything about it. I know the Japanese consul was very averse to seeing them come here. I think the first ship was the Monteagle, and from the time of the first arrival in April the Japanese consul was anxious, and came to see me about it, and asked me if there was no way of preventing these people coming from Hawaii, and he came to my office on a number of occasions and asked me to exercise my powers to prevent these people coming." * * *

It remains to be said that with this immigration from Hawaii it is unreasonable to believe that the Japanese Government could have been in any way concerned.

The following statement made by Mr. Morikawa, in an interview reported in the Vancouver Province, of July 25, 1907, appears to be a true account of the situation in so far as Mr. Morikawa's own endeavors and the attitude of the Japanese Government are concerned:

"When an intimation was first received that there was to be an exodus of Japanese from Hawaii to British Columbia, strong representations were made to the Japanese Imperial Government. The home authorities were agreed with me that the movement was unwise, and instructed me to cooperate with the Japanese consul-general at Honolulu in adopting every measure possible to prevent any of the Japanese laborers from removing to British Columbia. Many cablegrams have been exchanged during the past month in regard to the subject between here, Honolulu, and Tokyo. In endeavoring to stem the movement, we had the active cooperation of the Sugar Planters' Association of Hawaii. In a cable I sent to Honolulu just before the Kumeric sailed, I intimated the unlikelihood of the newcomers securing employment here. My advice was transmitted to the intended immigrants, but seems to have been completely disregarded."

It is true that of the immigrants from Hawaii, all were provided with passports, many of them passports issued by the foreign office of Japan during the present year, but they were passports marked for Hawaii or Hawaii only. In going to Hawaii their holders were voluntarily allowed to pass beyond the jurisdiction of Japan; in coming to Canada, it seems reasonable to assume they went beyond the wishes of the authorities, by whose permission they had been allowed to emigrate at all. This seems the proper view to take, but it makes plain this fact, which is of the utmost significance, so far as Japanese immigration to Canada is concerned, that whatever may be the power of Japan to control the emigration from her own shores, that power may end when the territorial limit is crossed.

The great decrease in Japanese immigration to Canada during the year 1908 indicates that the movement from Hawaii was short lived, and also the effectiveness of an informal agreement between Canada and Japan, whereby the issue of passports for Japanese coming to Canada is limited to 400 annually.

HINDU IMMIGRATION.

Hindu, or East Indian, immigrants were the latest to become a factor in Canada's oriental immigration problem, but owing to quick and vigorous action on the part of the Dominion the movement was of brief duration. The following statement of arrivals during the past five fiscal years illustrates the rise and fall, as well as the extent, of Hindu immigration to Canada:

1906 -----	387
1907 (9 months) -----	2, 124
1908 -----	2, 623
1909 -----	6
1910 (5 months) -----	1

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, in his report on oriental laborers in Canada, previously referred to, says:^a

Mr. David E. Brown, general superintendent of the trans-Pacific service of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who lived for fourteen years in Hongkong and had charge of the company's business in the Orient, when asked before the Commission if he could suggest what had brought the Hindus to Canada in such numbers within the past year, stated in reply that he would say that the movement had had its origin in the visit of the soldiers of the different colonies of the Empire to London at the time of the Queen's jubilee; that the Indian troops who had returned home via Canada had been made much of and were impressed by the country and its opportunities; that Indians were employed very largely as police in Hongkong, and that it was from among their number that the movement had started in the first instance. Asked what year that would be, Mr. Brown replied "five or six years ago; possibly three or four; it was about a year after, or two years after the Queen's jubilee." When it was pointed out that the Queen's jubilee was in 1897, Mr. Brown said: "Well, say five or six years after they would get back home. As satisfactory reports were sent back by these men on this side, others would be induced to come."

There are some, doubtless, who share Mr. Brown's view, which at least is an agreeable one, creating, as it does, the impression that immigration from India had its beginnings from a cause essentially imperial and patriotic. On the other hand, the evidence of the Indians who testified before the commission indicates pretty clearly that the immigration from India which has been a matter of concern to the people of British Columbia owes its origin to aims and methods which were anything but imperial or patriotic; that in fact the influx of recent years has not been spontaneous, but owes its existence in the main to (1) the activity of certain steamship companies and agents desirous of selling transportation and profiting by the commissions; (2) the distribution throughout some of the rural districts of India of literature concerning Canada and the opportunities of fortune hunting in the province of British Columbia; and (3) the representations of a few individuals in the province of British Columbia, among the number a Brahmin named Davichand, and certain of his relatives, who induced a number of the natives of India to come to Canada under actual or verbal agreements to work for hire, the purpose being that of assisting one or two industrial concerns to obtain a class of unskilled labor at a price below the current rate, and at the same time of exploiting their fellow-subjects to their own advantage. Some of the natives may have emigrated to Canada of their own accord or because of the advice or desire of relatives who had come to this country, but had the influences here mentioned not been exerted, it is certain that their numbers would not have been appreciable.

^a Report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the methods by which oriental laborers have been induced to come to Canada. W. L. Mackenzie King, C. M. G., Commissioner, Ottawa, 1908, pp. 75, 76.

Whatever may have caused the beginning and rapid growth of Hindu immigration to Canada, the reason for its decline is clear. Canada, and particularly British Columbia, did not want the Hindus as immigrants, but the fact that citizens of Canada and India were alike British subjects made the problem a delicate one. Consequently Mr. King was, in 1908, sent on a mission to England "to confer with the British authorities on the subject of immigration to Canada from the Orient and immigration from India in particular."

That the desired end was attained is indicated by the fact that in the fiscal year 1909, following Mr. King's conference with the British authorities, only 6 Hindu immigrants were admitted to Canada, whereas the number for the previous year was 2,623. How this was accomplished is stated in Mr. King's report upon his mission to England, from which is quoted the following statement:^a

The question of the migration of peoples of the Orient and the problems to which it gives rise, whether it be in connection with immigration or emigration as between different parts of the British Empire or between portions of the British Empire and foreign countries, is by no means a new one to the British authorities. Australasia, South Africa, and India have each forced a consideration of the subject upon the attention of British statesmen for years past. Of the outlying dominions, Canada's experience has been the most recent, though in kind the issues and possibilities involved are much the same. As between Great Britain and Canada the effect of this is not without its advantage to the Dominion. It has afforded in England a ready appreciation of Canada's position and an understanding of the sort of considerations of which it is necessary to take account. That Canada should desire to restrict immigration from the Orient is regarded as natural; that Canada should remain a white man's country is believed to be not only desirable for economic and social reasons, but highly necessary on political and national grounds. * * *

It was clearly recognized, in regard to emigration from India to Canada, that the native of India is not a person suited to this country; that, accustomed, as many of them are, to the conditions of a tropical climate and possessing manners and customs so unlike those of our own people, their inability to readily adapt themselves to surroundings entirely different, could not do other than entail an amount of privation and suffering which render a discontinuance of such immigration most desirable in the interest of the Indians themselves. It was recognized, too, that the competition of this class of labor, though not likely to prove effective if left to itself, might, none the less, where the numbers to become considerable (as conceivably could happen were self-interest on the part of individuals to be allowed to override considerations of humanity and national well-being and the importation of this class of labor under contract permitted), occasion considerable unrest among workmen whose standard of comfort is of a higher order and who, as citizens with family and civic obligations, have expenditures to meet and a status to maintain which the coolie immigrant is in a position wholly to ignore.

My inquiry, under royal commission, into the methods by which oriental laborers have been induced to come to Canada, which was conducted in the city of Vancouver during the months of November and December of last year, though not extensively pursued so far as the immigration from India is concerned, was quite sufficient to show that this immigration was not spontaneous, but owed its existence, among other influences, to—

(1) The distribution throughout certain of the rural districts of India of glowing accounts of the opportunities of fortune making in the Province of British Columbia, visions of fields of fortune so brightly hued that many an India peasant farmer, to raise the money for the journey, had mortgaged to the lender of the village his homestead and all that it contained at a rate of interest varying from 15 to 20 per cent.

^a Report by W. L. Mackenzie King, C. M. G., deputy minister of labor on mission to England to confer with the British authorities on the subject of immigration to Canada from the Orient and immigration from India in particular, Ottawa, 1908, pp. 7-10.

(2) The activity of certain steamship agents who were desirous of selling transportation in the interest of the companies with which they were connected and of themselves profiting by the commissions reaped.

(3) The activity of certain individuals in the Province of British Columbia, among the number one or two Brahmins, who were desirous of exploiting their fellow-subjects, and certain industrial concerns which, with the object of obtaining a class of unskilled labor at a price below the current rate, assisted in inducing a number of the natives to leave under actual or virtual agreements to work for hire.

A few of the natives may have emigrated to Canada of their own accord or because of the desire of relatives, but had the aforementioned influences not been exerted it is doubtful if their numbers would have been appreciable.

How these several influences have been counteracted and an effective restriction obtained by administrative measures in such a manner as to render legislative action unnecessary will be apparent from an account of what has been accomplished, as the result, in part, of the present negotiations and, in part, of legislative enactments and regulations already in force, the application of which to this class of immigration has not been hitherto wholly apparent.

(1) The misleading effects of the distribution by interested parties of literature of the class above described has been offset by warnings which the government of India has issued, whereby the natives have become informed of the risks involved in emigration to Canada and of the actual conditions in so far as it is desirable that such should be known to persons about to sever their connection with one country for the purpose of taking up residence in another.

(2) The steamship companies which have been in any way responsible for the recruiting of emigrants have been given to understand that the governments of Great Britain and Canada and the authorities in India do not view with favor any action on their part calculated to foster further emigration from India to Canada.

(3) The power of the steamship companies to ignore the wishes of the Governments has been rendered largely inoperative by the application to emigration from India of the regulation of the Dominion government prohibiting the landing in Canada of immigrants who come to this country otherwise than by a continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens and upon through tickets purchased in that country.

(4) The Indian emigration act (XXI, of 1883) was framed with the view of affording protection to the natives of India who, at the instance of private individuals or corporations, might be induced to leave India to work under indenture or agreements for hire in other parts of the Empire or in foreign lands. It was found that, once away from India, advantage was not infrequently taken of the necessities of this class of labor and that individuals were subjected to great hardships and privations. To remedy this the act provides that emigration in the sense of the departure by sea out of British India of a native of India under an agreement to labor for hire in some country beyond the limits of India other than the island of Ceylon or the Straits Settlements is not lawful except to countries specified in the schedule of the act "and to such other countries as the governor in council from time to time by notification declares to be countries to which emigration is lawful." Every such notification "must contain a declaration that the governor-general in council has been duly certified that the government of the country to which the notification refers has made such laws and other provisions as the governor-general in council thinks sufficient for the protection of emigrants to that country during their residence therein."

It is therefore to be said that emigration (in the sense defined) to Canada from India is not lawful under the Indian emigration act and can not be made lawful except through the action of the Canadian government in making the necessary laws, to the satisfaction of the government of India, for the protection of Indian emigrants.

It will therefore be seen that of itself the Indian emigration act solves the problem so far as it relates to the importation of contract labor from India to Canada, and this is the one class to be feared, since without some agreement to labor it is hardly to be expected that the number of immigrants will be large. To render this law wholly effective so far as Canada is concerned, it would be sufficient to prohibit the landing in Canada of immigrants who come in violation of the laws of their own country.

(5) With the danger of the importation of native labor under contract or agreement removed, there remains for consideration only such classes as might desire to emigrate from India of their own initiative or as having left India and gone elsewhere—to China, for example—might be induced, by agreement or otherwise, to emigrate to this country. To the immigration of the latter class the regulation of the Canadian government requiring a continuous passage from the country of which they are natives or citizens and upon through tickets should prove an effective bar, whilst as to the former the same regulation, the warnings issued by the government of India, and the greater care which it may reasonably be expected the steamship companies will exercise in the future, should prove a real deterrent. It will be apparent, moreover, that, having regard for the policy of the India government in the protection of the natives as set forth in the Indian emigration act, the government of Canada is fully justified in requiring, as has been its policy, of persons coming to Canada without a knowledge of conditions and with manners and customs wholly different from our own, especially where such persons are ignorant of our language and are without any agreement guaranteeing work, that they should, for their own protection, be in possession of a sum of money sufficient to insure their not being reduced to a condition of mendicancy or becoming a public charge. The regulation at present in force, requiring all immigrants to have in their possession a sum of at least $25, constitutes a requirement which, for the protection of the Indians themselves, is an obvious necessity. Should this amount prove inadequate, it could be increased.^a

There is thus in the last analysis a dovetailing, so to speak, of Great Britain's well-known policy in the protection of the native races of India and Canada's policy in the matter of immigration.

Whilst effective as a means of restricting a class of immigration unsuited to Canada, it will be apparent that the arrangement as herein set forth is one which finds its justification on grounds of humanity as strong as are the economic reasons by which it is also supported. The liberty of British subjects in India is safeguarded rather than curtailed, the traditional policy of Britain in respect to the native races of India has been kept in mind, and the necessity of enacting legislation either in India or in Canada which might appear to reflect on fellow British subjects in another part of the Empire has been wholly avoided. Nothing could be more unfortunate or misleading than that the impression should go forth that Canada, in seeking to regulate a matter of domestic concern, is not deeply sensible of the obligation which citizenship within the Empire entails. It is a recognition of this obligation which has caused her to adopt a course which, by removing the possibilities of injustice and friction, is best calculated to strengthen the bonds of association with the several parts and to promote the greater harmony of the whole. In this, as was to be expected, Canada has had not only the sympathy and understanding, but the hearty co-operation, of the authorities in Great Britain, and India as well.

It will be noted that while Hindus are not specifically excluded, or, in fact, ever mentioned, in the Canadian immigration act or orders of the governor in council relative thereto, practically insurmountable barriers have been erected against them. The most formidable of these is the application to Hindu immigrants of section 38 of the immigration act of 1910, which provides that any immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens, and upon through tickets purchased in that country, may be excluded.^b The law of 1906 as amended in 1907 and 1908 contained a similar provision. The peculiar efficiency of this provision is due to the fact that there is no means by which a continuous journey from India to Canada can be accomplished.

^a The amount of money required in the case of Hindus was increased from $25 to $200 by an order in council dated June 3, 1908. (Appendix B, No. V, p. 99.)

CHAPTER VI.

FOREIGN ELEMENTS IN THE POPULATION OF CANADA.

The native and foreign born population of Canada in census years since 1871 is shown in the following table:

[Compiled from the Canada Year Book, 1908.]

The table indicates that immigration, or at least permanent immigration, to Canada in the thirty years preceding 1901 was relatively small compared with more recent years, for in 1901 the total foreign-born population present was only 93,501 more than in 1871. There was an increase of 54.1 per cent in the total population during the period mentioned, but to this increase the foreign-born element contributed only 4.9 per cent. In the absence of data regarding children born in Canada to foreign-born parents during the time under consideration it is impossible to determine just what effect immigration has had on the total increase.

The total population of Canada by country of birth in the census years 1871, 1881, 1891, and 1901, and also the per cent that the persons of each nativity formed of the total population in those years, is shown in the following table:

It will be noted that there was a considerable falling off in the foreign-born British element in Canada's population between 1871 and 1901, this movement being particularly pronounced in the case of natives of Ireland. The total number of persons from northern and western European continental countries more than doubled during the period, but the per cent of such persons to the total population was not greatly increased. There was a striking increase, however, in the number of persons from southern and eastern European countries during the thirty years under consideration. In 1871 the number of such persons was insignificant, but the increase, particularly between 1891 and 1901, was large, and in the latter year they formed a greater per cent of the total population than did natives of northern and western continental Europe. It should be noted also that in 1901 natives of the United States were second only to persons born in England in the number from any single country resident in Canada, while in the previous census years of 1871, 1881, and 1891 they were fourth among all nationalities present. The decrease in 1901 in the number and per cent of persons born in Ireland and Scotland, however, contributed materially to this result.

In the Canadian census enumerations of 1871, 1881, and 1901 the race or descent, as well as the country of birth of individuals, was secured, and because of the presence of large English and French speaking elements and the introduction and growth of other racial elements in recent years, the data are particularly valuable in a consideration of the Dominion population. The following table shows the composition of Canada's population in this regard in the census years mentioned:

It may be noted that the increase in the English element exceeded that of the French during the thirty years from 1871 to 1901. The English population during that period increased from 706,369 to 1,260,899, a gain of 78.5 per cent, while the French population increased from 1,082,940 to 1,649,371, or a gain of only 52.3 per cent. The increase in the British element as a whole, however, was only 45.1 per cent, which result is mainly due to the fact that the Irish element increased but little during the period.

APPENDIX A.

THE CANADIAN IMMIGRATION LAW OF 1906.^a

[Chapter 93, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, and the Amending Acts of 1907 and 1908 consolidated.]

SHORT TITLE.

1. This Act may be cited as the Immigration Act.

INTERPRETATION.

2. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires—

(a) "Immigrant" means and includes any steerage passenger or any "work a way" on any vessel, whether or not entered as a member of the crew after the vessel has sailed from its first or last port of departure, any saloon, second-class passenger, or person who having been a member of the crew has ceased to be such, who upon inspection is found to come within any class liable to exclusion from Canada, and any person arriving in Canada by railway train or other mode of travel; but does not include any person who has previously resided in Canada, or who is a tourist merely passing through Canada to another country.

Definitions:
"Immigrant."

(b) "Immigration agent" includes the superintendent of immigration, commissioners of immigration, and any subagents within or outside of Canada.

"Immigration agent."

(c) "Land" or "landing," as applied to passengers or immigrants, means their admission into Canada, otherwise than for inspection or treatment, or other temporary purpose provided for by this Act, or by any order in council, or proclamation, or regulation made thereunder.

"Land;"
"landing."

(d) "Master" means any person in command of a vessel.

"Master."

(e) "Medical officer" includes "medical superintendent," "medical inspector," and "inspecting physician."

"Medical officer."

(f) "Minister" means the Minister of the Interior.

"Minister."

(g) "Owner," as applied to a ship or vessel, includes the charterer of such ship or vessel and the agent of the owner thereof.

"Owner."

(h) "Passenger" includes any person carried upon a railway train or other vehicle or in a vessel, other than the master and crew, as well as all immigrants coming into Canada, but not troops or military pensioners and their families, who are carried in transports or at the expense of the Government of the United Kingdom, or of any colony thereof; but any person who is unlawfully on board the vessel shall not be held to be a passenger.

"Passenger."

(i) "Port of entry" means any port, railway station, or place at which immigrants enter Canada or at which there is an immigration agent or where the medical inspection of immigrants is carried on.

"Port of entry."

(j) "Ship" or "vessel" includes all ships, vessels, boats, or craft of any kind carrying passengers.

"Ship"; "vessel."

(k) "Stowaway" means a person who secretes himself and goes to sea in a vessel without the consent of either the owner, consignee, or master, or of a mate, or of the person in charge of the vessel, or of any person entitled to give such consent.

"Stowaway."

^a For law as amended May 4, 1910, see Appendix I.

Who shall be deemed immigration agent.

Where immigration offices shall be maintained.

3. Every person recognized by the Minister as an immigration agent shall, with reference to any act done or to be done under this Act, and without formal appointment, be deemed to be an immigration agent for the purposes of this Act.

4. The Governor in Council may establish and maintain immigration offices at such places within and outside of Canada as from time to time seems proper.

APPOINTMENT POWERS AND DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

Immigration officers who may be appointed.

Subordinate officers appointed by minister.

Appointment of subordinate officers in cases of emergency.

Immigration officers ex officio.

Duties of officers.

5. The Governor in Council may appoint a superintendent of immigration, commissioners of immigration, immigration agents, medical officers, and such other officers as the governor in council determines.

6. Subject to any regulations in that behalf, the Minister may appoint or employ, either permanently or temporarily, any necessary subordinate officers not provided for in the last preceding section, or in any order in council made thereunder, including police guards, inspectors, matrons, and nurses to assist immigration agents and medical officers in carrying out the provisions of this Act, and of any orders in council, proclamations or regulations made thereunder, and may confer upon them, and charge them with, such power and duties as he considers necessary or expedient.

7. Subject to the provisions of the regulations in that behalf, immigration agents and medical officers may, in emergency, employ such temporary assistance as may be required, but no such employment shall continue for a period of more than forty-eight hours without the sanction of the Minister.

8. When, at any port of entry, there is no immigration agent, the chief Customs Officer at that port shall be, ex officio, immigration agent.

9. Every officer appointed under this Act shall perform any and all duties prescribed for him by this Act, or by any order in council, proclamation or regulation made thereunder, and shall also perform such duties as are required of him by the Minister, either directly or through any other officer; and no action taken by any such officer under or for the purpose of this Act shall be deemed to be invalid or unauthorized, merely because it was not taken by the officer specially appointed or detailed for the purpose.

REGULATIONS.

Regulations may be made by governor in council.

10. The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, make such orders and regulations, not inconsistent with this Act, as are considered necessary or expedient for the carrying out of this Act, according to its true intent and meaning, and for the better attainment of its object.

PROPORTION OF PASSENGERS TO SIZE OF VESSEL.

Proportion of passengers—

To area of decks.

To tonnage.

"Adult" defined.

11. No vessel from any port or place outside of Canada shall come within the limits of Canada having on board, or having had at any time during her voyage—

(a) Any greater number of passengers than one adult passenger for every 15 clear superficial feet on each deck of such vessel, appropriated to the use of such passengers and unoccupied by stores or other goods not being the personal luggage of such passengers.

(b) A greater number of persons, including the master and crew, and the cabin passengers, if any, than one for every 2 tons of the tonnage of such vessel, calculated in the manner used for ascertaining the tonnage of British ships.

(2) For the purposes of this section, each person of or above the age of 14 years shall be deemed an adult, and two persons above the age of one year and under the age of 14 years shall be reckoned and taken as one adult.

OBLIGATIONS OF MASTERS OF VESSELS BRINGING PASSENGERS.

12. The master of any vessel arriving at any port of entry in Canada shall deliver a certified and correct report, in the form prescribed by the regulations in that behalf, to the immigration agent at the port.

Reports of passengers to be delivered to agent.

13. The master of any vessel sailing from a port outside of Canada who embarks passengers after the vessel has been cleared and examined by the proper officer at the port of departure, and who does not deliver reports of such additional passengers to the immigration agent at the port of entry, shall pay to such immigration agent for every passenger so embarked and not included in the list of passengers delivered to such proper officer at the port of departure, or to the proper officer at the port at which such passenger was embarked, or to the proper officer at the port at which such vessel first touched after the embarkation of such passenger, the sum of $20, for each passenger so embarked as aforesaid, and not included in one of the said lists.

Payment for carrying passengers not entered on list.

14. Nothing in this Act shall prevent the master of any vessel from permitting any passenger to leave the vessel outside of Canada at the request of such passenger before the arrival of the vessel at her final port of destination; but in every such case, the name of the passenger so leaving shall be entered in the manifest on the list of passengers made out at the time of the clearing of the vessel from the port of departure, or at the port at which such passenger was embarked, and shall be certified under the signature of the passenger so leaving the vessel.

Passenger may leave vessel before arrival at port of destination. Proceedings in such case.

15. In addition to the particulars hereinbefore required in the report to be delivered on each voyage by the master of any vessel arriving at any port of entry in Canada to the immigration agent at such port, the master shall report in writing to such agent the name and age of all passengers embarked on board of such vessel on such voyage who are lunatic, idiotic, epileptic, deaf and dumb, or dumb, blind or infirm, or suffering from any disease or injury known to exist by the medical officer of the ship, specifying the nature of the disease, and stating also whether or not they are accompanied by relatives able to support them.

Particulars to be entered in report.

16. The report shall further state the name, age, and last place of residence of any person who has died during the voyage, and shall specify the cause of death and whether such person was accompanied by relatives or other persons who were entitled to take charge of the moneys and effects left by such person and the disposition made thereof.

Entry as to passengers who have died.

(2) If there were no such relatives or other persons so entitled, the report shall fully designate the quantity and description of the property, whether money or otherwise, left by such person; and the master of the vessel shall pay over to the immigration agent at the port at which the vessel is entered, and fully account for, all moneys and effects belonging to any person who has died on the voyage.

Disposal of property.

(3) The immigration agent shall thereupon grant to the master a receipt for all moneys or effects so placed in his hands by the master, which receipt shall contain a full description of the nature or amount thereof.

Immigration agent to give receipt.

PERMISSION TO LEAVE THE VESSEL.

17. The master of any vessel shall not permit any passenger to leave the vessel until written permission from the immigration agent to allow his passengers to land has been given to the master.

Passengers not to land without permission.

(2) The immigration agent at a port of entry, after satisfying himself that the requirements of this Act and of any order in council, proclamation, or regulation made thereunder have been carried out, shall grant permission to the master of the vessel to allow the passengers to leave the vessel.

When passengers may leave vessel.

- Master to furnish bill of health. 18. The master shall furnish the immigration agent, or the medical officer at the port of entry, with a bill of health, certified by the medical officer of the vessel, such bill of health being in the form and containing such information as is required from time to time under this Act.
- Inspection of vessel by medical officer. 19. The immigration agent, whenever he deems proper, may request the medical officer, before any passengers leave the vessel, to go on board and inspect such vessel, and examine and take extracts from the list of passengers or manifest, and from the bill of health.
- Immigrants may be required to possess prescribed amount of money. 20. The regulations to be made by the Governor in Council may provide as a condition to permission to enter Canada that immigrants shall possess money to a prescribed minimum amount, which amount may vary according to the class and destination of such immigrants, and otherwise according to the circumstances.

MEDICAL INSPECTION.

- Hours of medical inspection. 21. The medical inspection of passengers shall be performed at the hours named in the regulations made by the Minister.
- Facilities for examination. 22. The immigration agent shall provide suitable facilities for the examination of immigrants at each port of entry, subject to any regulations made by the Minister.
- Tickets to be stamped after inspection. 23. Minister of Finance and shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

(2) The justice of the peace may award costs against the offender as in ordinary cases of summary proceedings, and may, in the case of an owner, charterer, or master of a vessel, also award imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, to terminate on payment of the penalty incurred, and may, in his discretion, award any part of the penalty, when recovered, to the person aggrieved by or through the act or neglect of such offender.

71. If it appears to the justice, by the admission of such person or otherwise, that no sufficient distress can be had whereon to levy the moneys so adjudged to be paid, he may, if he thinks fit, refrain from issuing a warrant of distress in the case, or, if such warrant has been issued, and upon the return thereof such insufficiency as aforesaid is made to appear to the justice, then such justice shall, by warrant, cause the person ordered to pay such money and costs as aforesaid to be committed to goal, there to remain without bail for any term not exceeding three months unless such moneys and costs ordered to be paid, and such costs of distress and sale as aforesaid, are sooner paid and satisfied; but such imprisonment of a master of any vessel shall not discharge the vessel from the lien or liability attached thereto by the provisions of this Act.

72. No conviction or proceeding under this Act shall be quashed for want of form, nor, unless the penalty imposed is $100 or over, be removed by appeal or certiorari or otherwise into any superior court.

(2) No warrant or commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the person has been convicted and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

(3) In the case of removal by appeal or certiorari or otherwise of any conviction or proceeding under this Act into any Superior Court, security shall be given to the extent of $100 for the costs of such removal proceedings to such superior court.

73. All expenses incurred in carrying out the provisions of this Act and of affording help and advice to immigrants and aiding, visiting, and relieving destitute immigrants, procuring medical assistance, and otherwise attending to the objects of immigration, shall be paid out of any moneys granted by parliament for any such purpose and under such regulations or under such orders in council, if any, as are made for the distribution and application of such moneys.

Costs.

Proceedings when there is no sufficient distress.

Lien not discharged.

Convictions or proceedings not to be quashed for want of form.

Warrant and commitment not to be held void.

Security in case of appeal, etc.

APPENDIX B.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL AND REGULATIONS, LAW OF 1906.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

I.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 25TH FEBRUARY, 1908.

On a memorandum dated 20th February, 1908, from the minister of the interior, stating that a very considerable number of emigrants arriving in Canada from the British Isles have either been rejected at Canadian ports or afterwards deported from Canada as undesirables, for causes named in the immigration act;

That during the year 1907 there were some 141 rejections and 441 deportations of British emigrants;

That among the many charitable and philanthropic associations actively engaged in the British Isles in sending and financially assisting immigrants to Canada are some whose work is chiefly among the unemployed, destitute, and incompetent classes in the congested centers of population.

While the minister does not contend that some of these immigrants may not make successful citizens of Canada, nevertheless it is true that it is not the object of these associations to encourage the emigration of the really competent, industrious, and ambitious man so long as he succeeds in supporting himself, and that their operations are confined almost exclusively to the class from which it is very unlikely that the needs of Canada can be properly supplied.

The class referred to includes not only the unemployed, but a large proportion of those who are a drag in the labor market from misfortune, incompetence, or indifference. In the case of these it is alleviation of their condition to transfer them here, because our experience is that they simply continue in the same condition, and are a detriment to Canada.

While the associations engaged in this work often claim, and perhaps endeavor to use, discrimination in the matter of selection, in effect it is found that emigrants are sent here who are entirely unsuited to the conditions prevailing in this country, and who are unlikely to succeed even under the most favorable circumstances.

The work of these associations does not come under the supervision of the Canadian immigration department in the British Isles, and it is very advisable that more effective measures should be adopted, supervisory and restrictive, in regard to the undesirable classes.

It might be mentioned that the department of the interior exercises a degree of supervision over a certain very limited class of immigrants who are sent out by the poor law guardians. If the guardians of a district are satisfied that a person who has been a charge on them is really capable of working his way in Canada, or elsewhere, under new conditions and with a fair start, they secure an appropriation from public moneys for the purpose of the emigration of such person. When an emigrant is sent out in this way, it is imperative that the consent of the assistant superintendent of emigration for Canada be obtained. In this way the department exercises some control. Independent inquiry is made, a medical certificate is obtained, and other precautions are taken to make sure of the suitability of the emigrant.

The minister is of the opinion that a similar system of inspection should be extended to all charitable and philanthropic societies or organizations operating in England, whether using public money or funds provided by public generosity, so that persons whom they propose sending to Canada may be subject to inspection by the officer representing the Canadian Government emigration department in London as to their antecedents, both morally and physically, and as to their general suitability for settlement in Canada; such persons to be allowed entry into Canada only upon presentation of a proper certificate from the assistant superintendent of emigration; and to be subject to exclusion and deportation in the usual way should they succeed in gaining admittance to Canada in contravention of the regulations.

The immigration act (sec. 10) provides that:

"The governor in council may, on the recommendation of the minister, make such orders and regulations, not inconsistent with this act, as are considered necessary or expedient for the carrying out of this act according to its true intent and meaning and for the better attainment of its objects."

The minister therefore recommends that an order in council be passed prohibiting, from and after the 15th day of April, 1908, the landing in Canada of any person whose passage has been paid wholly or in part by any charitable organization or out of public moneys, unless it is shown that the authority in writing of the assistant superintendent of emigration for Canada in London has been obtained for the emigration of such person, and that such authority has been acted upon within a period of sixty days.

The committee submit the same for approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

II.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Friday, 27th day of March, 1908.

Present: His Excellency the Administrator in Council.

The administrator in council is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the order in council of the 8th of January, 1908, which provides that in accordance with section 20 of the immigration act, chapter 93, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, the immigration agent at any port shall require every immigrant, male or female, 18 years of age or over, arriving before February 15, 1908, to have in his or her possession money to the minimum amount of $50, or if arriving after February 15 and before April 1, a minimum amount of $25, in addition to a ticket to his or her destination in Canada, unless satisfactory evidence is furnished that the immigrant is going to some definite employment or to relatives or friends already settled in Canada who will take care of such immigrant, do continue in force until the 31st day of December, 1908, in so far as the provision for a minimum amount of $25 is concerned.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

III.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Wednesday, the 27th day of May, 1908.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

Whereas during the present session of Parliament an act has been passed repealing subsection 1 of section 30 of the immigration act, chapter 93 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, and substituting the following provision therefor:

"30. The governor in council may, by proclamation or order, whenever he considers it necessary or expedient, prohibit the landing in Canada of any specified class of immigrants or of any immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens and upon through tickets purchased in that country."

And whereas it is considered expedient forthwith to prohibit the landing in Canada of immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than as set forth in the said provision,

Therefore, His Excellency in Council is pleased to order that from and after the date hereof the landing in Canada shall be, and the same is hereby, prohibited of any immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens, and upon through tickets purchased in that country.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

IV.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Wednesday, the 27th day of May, 1908.

Present: His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

Whereas a considerable number of European immigrants arrive in Canada by way of United States Atlantic and Pacific seaports, coming in by rail from port of landing in the United States, many of whom are of the classes prohibited by the immigration act from landing in Canada, and are for this reason or for causes arising within a period of two years of their arrival in Canada deportable under the act;

And whereas upon the superintendent of immigration seeking to deport such persons, the railroad companies responsible for carrying them across the border have pleaded inability to take them back on the superintendent's order, for the reason that the persons sought to be deported were not legally admissible into the United States, and would not be admitted into that country, except for transit to port of landing and immediate delivery into the custody of the steamship company responsible for taking them back to the port or place from which they were brought;

And whereas the steamship companies have had this agreement and the request of the department of the interior with respect thereto before them since about the 23d of February, 1908, but the only company that has thus far executed the agreement is the Allan Line Steamship Company (Limited) of Glasgow, running ships to Boston, Mass., and Portland, Me.;

And whereas on account of the neglect of the other companies to attend to this matter the department of the interior is, at the present time, in the position of having some fifty-five deportable immigrants on its hands and being unable to deport them;

Therefore His Excellency the Governor-General in Council in these circumstances, and seeing that undesirable immigrants are constantly coming into Canada, as above described, and that the superintendent of immigration is unable to put the law in force with respect to such immigrants, is pleased to order, as a necessary measure of protection for Canada, under the authority of section 10 of the immigration act, chapter 93, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, that all such immigrants as seek to come into Canada by rail, who have come from any country on any ship landing at a United States port belonging to any steamship company or owner who has not entered into the agreement hereto annexed, shall be and they are hereby prohibited from landing in or coming into Canada.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of Privy Council.

V.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Wednesday, the 3d day of June, 1908.

Present: His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

Whereas by the order in council of the 18th January, 1908, it is provided that in accordance with section 20 of the immigration act, the immigration agent at any port shall require every immigrant, male or female, 18 years of age or over, to have in his or her possession money to a minimum amount of $25, in addition to a ticket to his or her destination in Canada, unless satisfactory evidence is furnished that the immigrant is going to some definite employment or to relatives or friends already settled in Canada who will take care of such immigrants, and by a further order in council of the 27th March, 1908, this arrangement is continued in force;

And whereas Canada is looking primarily for immigrants of an agricultural class to occupy vacant lands, and as immigrants from Asia belong as a rule to laboring classes, and their language and mode of life render them unsuited for settlement in Canada where there are no colonies of their own people to insure their maintenance in case of their inability to secure employment, it is necessary that provision be made so that such immigrants may be possessed of sufficient money to make them temporarily independent of unfavorable industrial conditions when coming into Canada;

Therefore His Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to order that the amount of money required to be in possession of each immigrant as a condition to his being permitted to enter Canada shall be, and the same is hereby, increased to $200 in the case of all Asiatic immigrants other than those with whose countries the Government of Canada has special arrangements or those concerning whose countries special statutory regulations exist on the part of Canada; the conditions as to tickets to destination to remain as at present.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

VI.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Tuesday, the 23d day of June, 1908.

Present: His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

Whereas by sections 40 and 58 of the immigration act, chapter 93 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, it is provided as follows:

"40. Every keeper of a tavern, hotel, or boarding house in any city, town, village, or place in Canada, designated by any order in council, who receives into his house as a boarder or lodger any immigrant within three months from his arrival in Canada, shall cause to be kept conspicuously posted in the public rooms and passages of his house and printed upon his business cards a list of the prices which will be charged to immigrants per day and week for board or lodging or both, and also the prices for separate meals, which cards shall also contain the name of the keeper of such house, together with the name of the street in which it is situate, and its number in such street.

"2. No such boarding-house keeper, hotel keeper, or tavern keeper shall have any lien on the effects of such immigrant for any amount claimed for such board or lodging for any sum exceeding $5.

"58. Every keeper of a tavern, hotel, or boarding house in any city, town, village, or other place in Canada, designated by order in council, who—

"(a) Neglects or refuses to post a list of prices and to keep business cards on which is printed a list of the prices which will be charged to immigrants per day or week for board or lodging, or both, and the prices for separate meals, and also the name of the keeper of such house, together with the name of the street in which the house is situated and its number in such street, or—

"(b) Charges or receives, or permits or suffers to be charged or received, for boarding or lodging or for meals in his house, any sum in excess of the prices so posted and printed on such business cards, or—

"(c) Omits immediately on any immigrant entering such house as a boarder or lodger, or for the purpose of taking any meal therein, to deliver to such immigrant one of such printed business cards shall incur a penalty not exceeding $20 and not less than $5."

And whereas it is considered expedient to bring these sections into force in certain places;

Therefore His Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to designate, and doth hereby designate, for the purpose of sections 40 and 58 of the immigration act, the cities of Ottawa and Toronto, in the Province of Ontario; the cities of Quebec and Montreal, in the Province of Quebec; the city of Halifax, in the Province of Nova Scotia; the city of St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick; the city of Winnipeg, in the Province of Manitoba; and the cities of Vancouver and Victoria, in the Province of British Columbia, as cities within which every keeper of a tavern, hotel, or boarding house therein who receives into his house as a boarder or lodger any immigrant within three months of his arrival in Canada shall be subject to the requirements and the provisions of the said section 40 and to the penalties provided by the said section 58 in case of contravention thereof.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

VII.

PRIVY COUNCIL, CANADA,
AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Friday, the 11th day of September, 1908.

Present: His Excellency the Governor-General in Council.

His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, in virtue of the provisions of section 20 of the immigration act, chapter 93, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, is pleased, in view of the labor conditions and of the probable supply and demand for laborers in Canada during the coming winter to order and it is hereby ordered that in the case of immigrants arriving at Canadian ports between the 1st day of January and 15th day of February, 1909, the immigration agent at any port shall require every immigrant, male or female, 18 years of age or over, to have in his or her possession money to the minimum amount of $50 in addition to a ticket to his or her destination in Canada unless satisfactory evidence is furnished that the immigrant is going to some definite employment, or to relatives or friends already settled in Canada who would take care of such immigrant, and that on the last mentioned date the money qualification above prescribed be reduced to the minimum amount of $25 for each immigrant, and so remain until further ordered.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

IMMIGRATION REGULATIONS AND FORMS.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE GUIDANCE OF IMMIGRATION INSPECTORS.

Inspectors appointed to enforce the provisions of the immigration act and the regulations made thereunder in respect to immigrants arriving in Canada by railway, or other means, are expected to use fair discretion in carrying out their duties, bearing in mind that the policy of the department is not one of exclusion of immigrants, excepting in cases where their admission is directly provided against in the act, or regulations, or is likely to be an injury to the community.

The term "immigrant" means and includes any person arriving in Canada by railway train or other mode of travel, provided such person has not previously been domiciled in Canada. In any doubtful case where previous domicile in Canada is alleged as a reason for coming in the inspector is required to closely question the party as to such domicile, ascertaining the address, length of residence, and how employed, as well as name and age of passenger, and these particulars are immediately to be reported to the superintendent of immigration, with date of arrival and particulars as to train, and form and number of ticket, together with inspector's remarks as to reasons for objecting to passenger.

Special attention is to be given to the classes designated as "undesirable" and the inspector must see that none such are admitted.

(1) Feeble minded, idiots, epileptics, insane, or those who have had an attack of insanity within five years.

(2) The immigrant who may be afflicted with a loathsome disease, or with a disease that may become dangerous to the public health or widely disseminated, whether the immigrant intends to settle in Canada or only to pass through Canada to settle in some other country.

(3) One who is a pauper, a destitute, a professional beggar, or vagrant, or who is likely to become a public charge, or one who has been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude. A prostitute, or one who procures, or brings, or attempts to bring into Canada, prostitutes or women for purposes of prostitution.

The foregoing are absolutely prohibited from admission into Canada, and if any such are found on the train which the inspector is examining, he will notify the official or officials in charge of the train that such person or persons can not be admitted into Canada, but must be returned immediately. The inspector will require no other warrant or authority for this than that reposed in him by virtue of his appointment, and having taken the action thus indicated his responsibility in the matter will cease until such time as he may find that his instructions are not being carried out. Then he will immediately advise the superintendent of immigration, Ottawa, by wire, following the telegram by a letter giving a complete history of the action, with particulars as to train, date, name of debarred immigrant, etc.

(4) The law requires that an immigrant who is deaf and dumb, or dumb, blind, or infirm, must not be permitted to come into Canada unless he belongs to a family accompanying him, or already in Canada, and which family gives security satisfactory to the minister for his permanent support if admitted into Canada.

In this relation if the inspector is satisfied that there are no other reasons to refuse admission, he will allow party to go forward with family, if they are on train, or to family, if they do not accompany, taking careful note of name, destination, permanent address, and form and number of ticket, so that the case may be followed up subsequently, if necessary.

(5) It is provided by the regulations issued under the act that immigrants may be prohibited from coming into Canada, unless they come from the country of their birth, or citizenship, by a continuous journey, and on through tickets purchased before leaving the country of their birth, or citizenship.

With respect to the above it may be remarked that authority is thereby given to exclude certain classes of persons, when the labor conditions prevailing in Canada render such action desirable. When the labor conditions are not such as to render necessary the general application of this regulation, inspectors are enabled, by it, to exclude individuals whom they may have reason to suspect are undesirable for any of the reasons for exclusion set forth in the immigration act. Particular discretion will have to be exercised in cases coming under this clause.

(6) Immigrants arriving between the 1st of December and 15th of February may be required to have in their possession $50 per adult passenger besides a ticket to destination, and at other times $25 per adult passenger and ticket to destination.

While the inspector will be very careful in his examination to see that this clause is complied with, he will not enforce it in cases where satisfactory evidence is furnished that the immigrant is going to some definite employment, or to relatives or friends already settled in Canada who will take care of such immigrant.

For the complete checking up of trains, it may be necessary for the inspector to meet the Canada-bound trains at a station on the American side of the boundary line, and accompany train to the first point at, or within, the Canadian boundary.

Inspectors are required to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the immigration act and amendments, and with any orders in council, proclamations or regulations, made thereunder, and they are further required at the end of each month, and from time to time as they may be instructed, to report in writing to the superintendent of immigration, Ottawa, upon blanks to be prescribed by him, the number of immigrants passing through their respective ports of entry and such other particulars as may be ordered.

Cases of doubt may, to save time, be referred to the superintendent of immigration at Ottawa, by telegraph.

SCHEDULE 2.

APPENDIX C.

OFFICIAL CIRCULAR OF CANADIAN SUPERINTENDENT OF IMMIGRATION.

IN RE

EXCLUSION OF OVER-SEAS IMMIGRANTS.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, CANADA,

Ottawa, June 4, 1909.

In view of the fact that the immigration act at present in force has been amended several times, and that in accordance with its provisions its express terms have been supplemented by several orders in council, there is a possibility of misunderstanding arising between the several steamship and railway companies and the immigration department in the application of its exclusion provisions.

As a help towards avoiding such misunderstanding it seems advisable that the immigration policy of the Canadian Government and the understanding of the interior department of the exclusion provisions of the immigration act should be stated as shortly and plainly although informally as possible:

(1) Money is expended and administration is exercised with the object of securing immigrants whose purpose in life is to occupy farm lands, either as owners, tenants, or laborers.

(2) Money is voted and administration is exercised with the object of excluding those whose presence in Canada would tend to add to the congestion of our towns and cities.

Immigration effort is made in those countries which are considered most likely to furnish the people coming within the first of the two classes above specified.

No immigration effort is made in those countries which are considered likely to furnish the people coming within the second class.

The act is interpreted and its administration conducted throughout, to give effect to the above two distinct lines of policy.

Certain of the exclusion provisions of the immigration act are mandatory and apply equally to the people of every class and of every country. These are the provisions which exclude the physically, mentally, or morally unfit.

Other provisions exclude for financial or other reasons not physical, mental, or moral.

These provisions exclude:

(1) Charity-aided immigrants.

(2) Europeans who have in possession less than $25 in cash besides ticket to destination, and Asiatics who have less than $200 besides ticket to destination; excepting citizens of China or Japan, in regard to whom there are special arrangements. (Chinese must pay $500 head tax; Japanese must have in possession $25 cash and a passport.)

(3) Immigrants who do not come by continuous passage from, and on ticket purchased in, the country of their birth or citizenship.

Provision is made for relaxing the first of these causes of exclusion in the case of persons who have been inspected and approved before sailing by the assistant superintendent of immigration for Canada in England. No other relaxation will be made.

In regard to the second, provision is made for relaxation (a) in the case of persons going to friends permanently resident in Canada, who are capable of supporting them, and (b) in the case of those going to assured employment.

The relaxation in the case of persons going to friends only applies to persons ordinarily dependent on such friends; that is, wife or children going to husband or father; brother or sister going to brother, minors going to married or independent sisters, or parents going to children capable of supporting them.

The provision as to relaxation of the money qualification, because going to assured employment, is dealt with as follows:

(a) Immigrants from countries, other than those in which immigration effort is being made by Canada, can not be assumed by the immigration officials to be going to assured employment, and therefore each individual will be required to produce the amount of money the regulations call for.

(b) In view of the difficulties encountered by non-English speaking immigrants in securing employment, even though coming from the countries in which immigration effort is being made (in case of their not having the money required and ticket to destination), the agent must be satisfied by evidence which he must record that such immigrant is going to assured employment at farm work. (The over-sea countries in which immigration effort is made are: Great Britain and Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland.)

(c) In case of English-speaking immigrants while the steamship companies must be prepared at all times for a strict enforcement of the money requirement, the agent may, in case the immigrant is otherwise desirable, accept a reasonable assurance that he will find employment, provided such employment is at farm work.

Regarding the third cause for exclusion: All immigrants who are unable to satisfy the agent either that they have independent means of support or that they are suited to farm work and intend to engage in it, are liable to be excluded under the indirect passage provision.

The officials of the Immigration Department at ocean ports are being instructed that they will be held strictly to account for the enforcement of the act in accordance with the foregoing statement of its terms.

APPENDIX D.

OFFICIAL CIRCULAR TO BOOKING AGENTS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM.

SUPPLEMENTARY CIRCULAR.

IMMIGRATION BRANCH,
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Ottawa, November 15, 1906.

To Booking Agents in the United Kingdom:

It is the desire of the immigration department of Canada to have the most friendly relations with the booking agents of the United Kingdom. With a view to preventing misunderstanding it is deemed desirable to set forth in plain terms the purpose of the government of Canada in pursuing an active immigration policy and the reasons governing it in the conduct of that policy.

The bonus to booking agents of £1 on adults and 10 shillings on children between 1 and 18 is given to make it worth while for the booking agents to use his best exertions in securing for Canada the particular classes of people upon whom the bonus is paid.

In a country with a population of nearly fifty millions, such as the United Kingdom, which has no new territory for occupation, there must necessarily be a large yearly increase of population, which must either find an outlet or add to the congestion of the great cities. Every year there is a very large movement of people from the United Kingdom to North America. For a long time the larger part of this yearly movement went to the United States and a very small part to Canada. That which went to the United States was lost to the Empire; the part which went to Canada aided in building up the Empire.

It is not the expectation of the government of Canada to increase unduly the outflow of people from the United Kingdom, but it is its desire to turn to the benefit of the Empire in Canada a greater proportion of the natural and necessary annual outflow from the mother country.

The Canadian government in confining the bonus to emigrants of certain callings has selected those callings which may fairly be expected to fit people for the opportunities existing in Canada. By making special exertions to secure these classes for Canada, the booking agents will be doing their best for the emigrants themselves, for Canada, and for the Empire.

It is believed that, although the classes particularly desired by Canada might find a field for employment at home, the removal each year of some part of the natural increase there will leave room and opportunity for others who would, under other circumstances, be crowded out of these advantages.

The classes of people on whom bonus is paid by the Canadian government are expected, by reason of their experience at home, to find scope for their abilities in the occupation of the vacant lands of Canada, in employment upon the lands now occupied and cultivated, or in the railway development now in progress. And while it is not asserted that people of other callings or conditions of life should not come to Canada, or may not find a career open to them in this country, it is desired to have it well understood that the government of Canada assumes no responsibility with respect to any other immigration than that of the classes mentioned as eligible for bonus payment. It is not asserted that the farmer or farm laborer is necessarily a more desirable citizen than any other, but it is a simple fact that the demand in Canada is for people to occupy the as yet vacant lands of the country, to aid in the cultivation of those already occupied, and also to assist in providing additional transportation facilities. This it is which justifies the government in assuming the expense of immigration effort. To go beyond the attempt to meet these requirements would be to use the money of certain classes of Canadian taxpayers for the purpose of securing competitors against them in their several callings, for which they would naturally hold the government to account.

For these reasons booking agents will be good enough to understand that the present large bonus is only offered to secure the fullest compliance with its conditions, and they must expect the officials of the immigration branch to look strictly into every bonus claim made, not as showing any lack of faith in the booking agents or as discriminating against any class of people, but simply as a matter of business to make sure that money is not being paid except on the due fulfillment of conditions that have the sanction of all classes of the Canadian people, who, in fact, are paying the money.

In the circular of March 20 bonus was restricted to persons of certain classes was required that the person eligible by reason of his calling should be then employed in that calling and had been so employed for at least one year. This condition is altered in the new circular forwarded herewith so that the requirement is now that the person shall have been in such employment for at least one year, without special regard as to when that was, and the list of questions to be answered by the emigrant when applying for ticket has been altered accordingly.

In the circular of March 20 bonus was restricted to persons of certain classes therein mentioned, who signified their intention of following farming in Canada. This provision has been amended by adding "or railway construction work," so that whether the immediate intention is that of following farming or securing employment in railway construction work the person is eligible for bonus.

These changes enlarge the number of people upon whom bonus may properly be paid, but as they enlarge the number and to that degree are to the advantage of the booking agent, so the officials of the department may be expected to hold more closely to the express terms of the circular issued and to the intent which its terms express.

It is important that the provisions of the Canadian immigration act of last session, prohibiting the landing in Canada of certain classes of people, should be carefully studied (copy herewith), so that the booking agent will understand thoroughly that for his own credit and the advantage of his business he will not book people of these classes. They are liable to be returned to the place from whence they came at the expense of the steamship company. This liability exists for two years after their landing in Canada. It will be noticed that the following classes of people are prohibited from landing and are subject to deportation within two years: Feeble-minded, idiotic, insane, or who have been insane within five years, afflicted with any loathsome, contagious, or infectious disease; anyone who is a pauper, who is destitute, who is a professional beggar or vagrant, or who is likely to become a public charge; any prostitute or person who lives by the proceeds of prostitution, or any convicted criminal. Persons who are deaf and dumb, blind, or infirm may be admitted if accompanied by members of the family, who will be responsible for their support and safe-keeping. Unless so accompanied they are subject to deportation.

Bonuses are only payable on passengers traveling by lines which land at Canadian ports or at Portland, Me., during winter, and only on persons who are British subjects.

In the past it has been found necessary on occasion to discontinue business relations with booking agencies for various reasons, such as presentation of improper claims, booking of undesirables, the special booking of artisans under contract, and improper advertising. It is hoped that no difficulties of this kind will arise in future; but as the immigration department is a part of the public business of Canada, it is necessary that its work and connections should be kept clear of misunderstandings of every kind. The department would prefer not to have relations with any agency with which it might find itself at cross-purposes, and whose actions might subject its work to misrepresentation.

In the past it has not been the practice of the department to pay bonus on first-class passengers. This has not been because such payment was contrary to the intent of the bonus system, if such passengers were of the classes listed for bonus, but because first-class passengers are not subject to inspection on arrival in Canada, and therefore the department had no means of checking the propriety of the payments. If, however, booking agents will avail themselves of the provision contained in the circular herewith, which is the same as was contained in the circular of March 20, 1906, by securing a certificate from one of the accredited agents of the department in the United Kingdom, as therein provided, the bonus will be paid, but not otherwise.

The provision for granting certificates in the United Kingdom by emigration agents to insure payment of bonus is permissive and not compulsory. If such a certificate is granted in proper form the immigration department will not question the payment of the bonus. If such a certificate is not secured, then the payment of the bonus must depend upon the examination by the immigration officer at the port of landing. It is because of the necessity of inspection at port of landing that it has been found necessary to restrict payment of bonuses on emigrant passengers to those landing at Canadian ports, with the exception of those landing at Portland, Me., during winter.

Previous to issue of circular of March 20, 1906, there was some discrimination in bonuses paid under certain circumstances, but with the coming into effect of that circular, the terms of which are repeated in the accompanying circular, all booking agencies were placed on an equal footing, the same bonus being paid under the same conditions in all cases. It is the desire of the Immigration Department to deal quite fairly with all booking agencies, the result aimed at being to secure desirable emigrants for Canada up to the yearly requirements of the country.

It is not in the interest of the individual emigrant that he should remove to Canada unless there is reasonable prospect of his success here. The arrival of any large number of immigrants in this country who are unfitted for the conditions here must necessarily react against the continuance of the emigration movement. In spite of the fact that his failure to succeed is due to personal causes, the unsuccessful man will blame the country, and complain to his friends at home, thereby deterring them from coming out, and the efforts of the Immigration Department will be discredited with the people of Canada, who will therefore withdraw their support from those efforts. The men wanted in Canada are those who will do well here, who are recognized in the United Kingdom as being fit, but who are looking for the wider opportunities of the new country, not to be found at home. The efforts of the Canadian Immigration Department are not directed toward those who are merely looking for a place where they may live, but toward those who, while they are able to live under present conditions in the United Kingdom, are on the lookout for an opportunity to better their position in life.

It is suggested that booking agents take for future reference the home address of the emigrant upon whom bonus is to be claimed, and also that of some of his relatives remaining at home.

It is the desire of the Immigration Department that its work in the United Kingdom shall be carried on in cooperation with the licensed booking agencies. So far as possible, literature and samples of products will be supplied to booking agents on application, and our salaried agents are instructed to reply promptly to all communications received from booking agents, and to give all proper information, and all the assistance in their power to the legitimate booking of passengers of the classes upon which bonuses may be paid.

In the past, some booking agents have been in the habit of sending in bonus claims on persons who intended to follow mechanical pursuits in Canada, and on others who had never engaged in any of the specified occupations, or who had less than one year's experience in such occupations. Kindly see that in future you make claims only upon British subjects, who have had at least one year's experience in one of the specified occupations, and who come to Canada to engage either in agricultural pursuits or railway construction, and on female domestic servants. By pursuing such a course the work of this office will be materially lessened and the just claims consequently more promptly attended to. You are also requested to see that every blank space in emigrant's application for ticket is properly filled.

The department should be notified at once in all cases where an emigrant transfers his passage from the boat on which he originally books. The name and date of sailing of the vessel upon which he first booked should be given, as well as that of the ship to which he has been transferred.

All communications with regard to the nonpayment of any claims made should be sent direct to me. In every case the name, age, and contract ticket number of the emigrant, with the name of the vessel, and date of its sailing should be carefully given. In any case where the Canadian government finds it necessary to deport any immigrant within twelve months of his arrival in Canada because of criminal tendency, disease, or other cause, or where the immigrant has left Canada for the United States within that period, the bonus paid upon him will be deducted from the account of the agent to whom it was paid.

Superintendent of Immigration.

APPENDIX E.

AIMS AND METHODS OF CHARITABLE ORGANIZATIONS PROMOTING EMIGRATION TO CANADA FROM THE BRITISH ISLES.

[Report by J. Bruce Walker.^a]

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA, EMIGRATION BRANCH,
London, S. W., January 10, 1908.

SIR: For some time I have been devoting attention to the operations of certain philanthropic and charitable societies in this country, particularly in London, as far as their connection with emigration to Canada is concerned. The work of these societies has always given me the gravest anxiety, and from the information I have been able to obtain, after a close study of their methods during the past few weeks, I desire to say to you frankly that in my judgment the classes which these organizations send to Canada are for the most part not desirable citizens. There is no doubt that all the philanthropic and charitable societies engaged in the work of emigration to Canada are able to point with satisfaction to a certain proportion of their emigrants who have been successful in the Dominion. I am very far from seeking to convey the impression that all the material sent to Canada by these organizations is either unsuitable or undesirable. I readily recognize that many gratifying instances can be shown in which the emigrants, availing themselves of the new conditions, have been able to start life afresh, and are able to look forward to a life of comparative comfort and competence as compared with the conditions in their former home.

I do not think, however, that emigration to Canada is a solution of the London unemployed problem, and I do not think, speaking generally, that the class of persons coming within the scope of the association to which I am referring in this report are suited to the requirements of Canada and are likely to succeed in any great numbers in this country, even under the most favorable conditions.

While it may be conceded that these so-called charitable and philanthropic institutions are animated by good intentions, their interests are more concerned in the benefits that will accrue to England than to the advantages gained by Canada through the medium of the emigration of their proteges.

The work of these societies may be divided into two principal parts: First, the purely philanthropic or charitable; and secondly, the state or rate-aided emigration. With regard to the first the funds are procured by insistent and widespread appeals to the benevolent, and the operations of the organizations are confined to the destitute, the unfortunate, and, to a large extent, the incompetent. No pretence is made of assisting the emigration of a man, however competent, however industrious, however ambitious, so long as he is in employment. In other words, the best class of labor in this country is discouraged, and that labor which finds itself most frequently in the market, either from incompetence, intemperance, or indifference, is the peculiar care of such organizations. When an employer of labor in London, for business reasons, is compelled to reduce his staff of employees, he does not suspend the competent and reliable workman. He weeds out for the purpose of dismissal all those who have made themselves known either by their incompetence, their intemperance, or their carelessness, and these latter become the mass of people from whom and among whom the philanthropic and charitable societies to which I allude obtain their recruits for emigration to Canada.

At the present time and under the present condition of the emigration law there is practically no supervision exercised on this side over the work of these societies. It is claimed, of course, by the officers of these organizations that every care is taken and every anxiety shown to obtain only the most suitable for emigration to Canada. The results are shown by the material which they send to Canada, and do not warrant the belief that their efforts in these directions have been very successful. In any case, I am convinced that the societies operate amongst a very undesirable class for the purpose of emigration to Canada, and that the supervision, however well intentioned, is invariably defective and superficial. Whereas Canada is calling constantly for men accustomed to agricultural pursuits to emigrate to the Dominion, these so-called philanthropic bodies are engaged almost exclusively in operating amongst the dense masses of the congested parts of the City of London and other big cities, and are therefore seeking to meet our needs from a source that in all reason is very unlikely to supply such needs.

With regard to the state aided and rate aided, these are the products of the distress committees and of the workhouses. The distress committees are bodies in large centers of population, permitted, under the terms of the unemployed workmen's act, to levy a small rate as a tax upon the public for the emigration, and for provision by employment or otherwise of the unemployed in such communities. This tax is imposed up to a certain amount per pound, is used partly to provide food and shelter, partly to provide temporary employment, and partly to provide emigration. The distress committees usually operate through some recognized booking agency, providing the fares for the transportation and leaving such booking agency to provide the employment on the Canadian side. There is no supervision of an official character exercised over these emigrants. The Emigration Branch of the Department of the Interior is neither advised of their numbers, their character, nor the date of their sailing. In the present condition of the law, if a distress committee is satisfied that a booking agency organization can satisfactorily dispose of the men, the bargain is completed between that organization and the distress committee, and that is the end of it.

With reference to the rate-aided emigration—that is, the emigration provided by the poor-law guardians—there is a certain measure of control. When, for any reason, the guardians of the district are satisfied that the inmate of a workhouse is capable of working his way in Canada or elsewhere under new conditions and with a fair start, they apply to the president of the local government board for permission to appropriate from the public rates under the poor law a sum necessary for the emigration to Canada, say, of such person or persons. The local government board has laid it down as an imperative instruction that the consent of the assistant superintendent of emigration for Canada must, in every case, be obtained before the emigration is permitted of such pauper person or persons. Here the department is able to exercise some control, and does so, I venture to say, with good effect.

In the first place rigorous independent inquiry is made by ourselves, in which the previous character of the family, a medical examination on a prescribed form (after the manner of a life insurance medical application form) is filled up by a properly qualified medical man, and where it can be shown that the answers are correct, the health of the persons unquestioned, and that arrangements have been made for the proper reception and employment of the individuals, the departmental consent is given, and the consequent consent of the local government board to such emigration. Emigration of this class is less in quantity than that of any other to which I have referred, and I think inquiry will bear me out in saying that notwithstanding its source it is perhaps a little more satisfactory than either that emigrated by the unemployed workmen's act or the operations of charitable organizations.

The trouble, however, of a State-aided emigration is that it is dealing with a class of persons whose position is either due to their own intemperance or incompetence, and who, for the most part, lack that self-confidence and self-reliance that is necessary for success in a new country and under new conditions.

I am satisfied that an extremely large proportion of the nonsuccesses in English emigration is due to the unreasonable proportion of that class of emigration sent to Canada. In Scotland, where the proportion of emigrants to the population is more than double what it is in England, there are no such philanthropic societies and no such charitable organizations engaged in emigration work, and you can not but have observed how few cases of nonsuccess there are amongst the Scottish emigrants.

In my humble judgment the time has now come when the department should devise rigorous and effective measures to first discourage, and, secondly, to supervise such charitably aided emigration.

The total number of persons sent to Canada during the year 1907 by London charitable societies alone reaches the important figure of 12,336. These figures do not include all who have been sent to Canada financially assisted out of the rates. Another 500, perhaps, might be added as covering the operations of the various distress committees throughout England, who have booked emigrants in numbers of from 10 to 50 by private booking agencies.

THE EAST END EMIGRATION FUND.

The East End Emigration Society is a purely charitable organization, operating exclusively in the poorest and most crowded part of London—the East End. It is constantly making appeals to the generosity of the wealthy and benevolent through the medium of the public press, and by private appeals for money to emigrate deserving cases.

It may be conceded at once that this organization is working at what it believes to be a good cause, but unfortunately it is working in a territory where the environment and conditions are all against their obtaining a class of persons suitable for Canada; the vastly populated and greatly congested East End of London can not be considered a favorable field for obtaining that class of emigrants which Canada needs, and that class of men who are at all likely to accommodate themselves to the conditions obtaining in Canada and through their own energy and determination build up homes for themselves. The conditions under which they had lived, and in which in all probability their parents for several generations have lived, do not produce the kind of men who are fit for labor which Canadian farmers have to offer, and I can not but feel that while I accord the very best intentions to this organization, it is working in an area that can not possibly afford us satisfactory results. This organization books its own passengers, and in common with similar organizations has a private arrangement for a preferential rate in favor of itself as compared with the charge for transportation exacted from the ordinary self-paying emigrant. During the year this organization, without the slightest control, either by the Government in this country or by the Emigration Branch of the Department of the Interior in this country, sent to Canada 6,096 persons, recruited from the East End of London, paying, it may be presumed, in every case the total cost of such transportation.

SELF-HELP EMIGRATION SOCIETY.

This organization is likewise of a charitable character, although it insists upon a proportion of the passage being paid by the people emigrated, relying upon the charity and the good will of the wealthy classes of the metropolis for payment of the balance. The Self-Help Emigration Society sent to Canada during the year 1907 a total of 506 persons, neither inspected nor controlled by any agency on this side.

THE CHURCH ARMY.

This is a reformatory and charitable organization connected with and working under the auspices of the Established Church of England. They sent to Canada last year 1,595 persons, of whom 1,519 received assistance from the Church Army Emigration Fund. This organization is of a many-sided character, embracing the reclamation of the drunkard, the reception of the discharged prisoner, the shelter and food of the homeless, and an asylum for the unemployed. It has a number of cheap night shelters throughout this city and country, and is engaged exclusively in operating amongst the lowest and most degraded classes to be found in England. In pursuance of the reformatory work, they have a farm colony, to which men are sent on probation, and where those who are destined for emigration to Canada are placed for observation and training in actual farming operations, but as these men were originally anything but farmers or rural citizens the probation can hardly be called satisfactory; the training is not very practical, and the person still retains his aversion to the country and his love of populous places.

The Church Army also interests itself in the emigration of persons who can pay their fare; young men who are sowing their wild oats; young men who are beyond parental control; young men whose relatives believe that removal from old haunts and old associations to a new country would afford a renewed opportunity for starting life afresh, and rehabilitating themselves in the good opinion of their friends, and I am afraid that not a few of the latter are selected, not from any examination, but from the personal influence of those who are desirous of obtaining the emigration of such persons.

THE CHURCH EMIGRATION SOCIETY.

This society was not formed with the definite object of advancing the passage money of the emigrants, but a certain number of those sent out by the society have been assisted in this way. Their method of operation is to assist those who assist themselves; in other words, to pay a portion of their transportation, but to encourage only husbands and wives with small families. I am free to confess that this organization exercises a good deal of care in the selection of their emigrants, and insists upon the guarantee of the respectability of the family in the form of a good contribution to the cost of the transportation, and also insists upon an agreement for the repayment of the proportion advanced. Last year they sent altogether 663 persons to Canada. This society is first and foremost a religious society, and exists mainly for the purpose of binding together members of the Church of England in all parts of the world.

THE CENTRAL UNEMPLOYED BODY.

This is a purely London organization, operating under the Workman's Unemployed Act, confining its operations to the unemployed of the city of London, without regard to any particular locality in the metropolis. I am not prepared to deny but what they take a great deal of care, and go to a great deal of trouble in sifting, selecting, and finally approving of the emigrants. The objection to their organization, however, is that they work exclusively amongst a class of people for whom there is no demand in Canada, i. e., unemployed tradesmen, artisans, mechanics, and other skilled persons, as well as general laborers. The proportion of persons with farm training coming under their care is infinitesimal, and, as I have said, it is difficult to draw the line between the unemployed and the unemployable; and yet it is amongst just such classes that the Central Unemployed Body conducts its work. During the year the Central Unemployed Body emigrated to Canada 2,842 persons, booking them directly from its own offices, sharing the preferential rate, the bonus claims, and other such considerations as could be obtained. They have, as you know, no regularly constituted organization on the Canadian side, either for the reception, distribution, or absorption of such emigrants as they send. One or two agents throughout Canada can neither take care of nor place such numbers of persons, and consequently in the total credited in this report to the East End Emigration Fund, it should be stated that 2,573 persons were handed to the East End Emigration Fund by the Central Unemployed Body, because the former society was supposed to have a better organization for the employment of the emigrants on arrival in Canada. Apart from this, however, the Central Unemployed Body sent 2,842 persons to Canada, the great majority of whom I am afraid are not at all likely to readily assimilate and adapt themselves to Canadian conditions.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

During the year 1907 the Salvation Army emigrated 406 persons whose fares were either wholly or partially advanced. These form a proportion of the 15,000, which is about the aggregate of the Salvation Army's emigration during that year. Of these 406 persons, the majority of the wholly advanced fares came from emigrants provided by local distress committees in provincial towns. These local distress committees, being assured by the Salvation Army of their power to receive and provide employment for the emigrants of these distress committees, have placed them in the hands of the army and provided the funds. The remaining portion represents those families of wives and children of specially deserving cases where the army itself advanced the transportation with the hope of subsequent repayment.

With reference to the emigrants of distress committees handed to the care of the army, they are open to the same objection as such emigrants when in the care of any other society. They are, for the most part, tradesmen, townsmen, and generally very incompetent and inferior ones at that. It is worth noticing, however, that out of the total of 15,000 persons claimed by the Salvation Army as having been sent to Canada in 1907, only 406 had their fares wholly or partially advanced.

THE CENTRAL EMIGRATION BOARD.

The Central Emigration Board, an executive body not at all of a philanthropic or charitable character, was brought into existence for the purpose of providing a machine for booking and emigrating the products of the provincial distress committees. The latter have not taken kindly to the organization, inasmuch as provincial distress committees object to overlooking the claims of local booking agents, probably rate payers in their community, in order to deal with the Central Emigration Board in London, from whom they receive no return and no special consideration. Consequently, therefore, notwithstanding the inauguration of this body, with considerable press display and not a little prestige from important and influential persons on the directorate, it has not done a great deal of business. During the year it sent to Canada 228 persons, the unemployed products either of certain charitable societies or distress committees. I do not know what special provision it has for obtaining work on the other side, but I am afraid the organization, if any, must be of a very restricted character.

In inclosing you, in tabulated form,^a the totals of persons emigrated by such philanthropic societies as I have dealt with in this report. I beg to offer, in the most respectful way, the suggestion for submission to the minister, that if this emigration is not to be discouraged in toto, some means must be devised at once for its proper supervision and control.

-In my opinion, it will be an unfortunate condition of affairs if such organizations are permitted, unrestricted, and unrestrained, to pour upon the shores of Canada large numbers of persons, few of whom are at all fitted for our conditions and most of whom are morally and physically quite unfitted. It might be well to institute a regulation that the same permission should be obtained for the emigration of such persons as is obtained for the emigration of persons from workhouses, and it might also be permissible to insist that such organizations in England must have a complement organization in Canada and be able to show to the satisfaction of the department their ability to absorb and employ such emigrants as they send.

As most of these organizations carry on their operations in large centers of population, they seldom reach persons of agricultural experience, and, consequently, have in proportion to their numbers sent to Canada very few claims for the bonus given by the department to persons bent upon agricultural pursuits in Canada, and I think therefore it would be judicious to withhold the bonus in the case of any person obtaining either a free or an assisted passage, ability to pay the necessary transportation charge being one of the most satisfactory proofs of thrift and industry.

I have discussed with the leading officers of the local government board the question of the supervision of the efforts of charitable and philanthropic asso-

APPENDIX F.

THE CANADIAN IMMIGRATION LAW OF MAY 4, 1910.

As stated elsewhere, after the presentation to Congress of the Commission's report on the immigration situation in Canada and while it was still in the hands of the printer, the government immigration bill, with some amendments of minor importance, was enacted into law. The new law became effective on May 4, 1910, and, with the various orders in council promulgated under it, was published on May 16.^a

While the new law makes no very radical changes in the Canadian system of promoting and controlling immigration, such changes as have been made are, as elsewhere stated, the result of long experience on the part of expert officials, and as such are entitled to consideration not only by students of the Canadian system, but by everyone interested in immigration and immigration law. Because of this the law is published in full as a part of this report.

AN ACT Respecting Immigration.

[Assented to 4th May, 1910.]

His Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:—

SHORT TITLE.

1. This Act may be cited as The Immigration Act.

Short title.

INTERPRETATION.

2. In this Act, and in all orders in council, proclamations and regulations made thereunder, unless the context otherwise requires,—

Definitions.

(a) "Minister" means the Minister of the Interior;

"Minister."
"Officer."

(b) "officer" means any person appointed under this Act, for any of the purposes of this Act, and any officer of customs; and includes the Superintendent of Immigration, immigration commissioners and inspectors and every person recognized by the Minister as an immigration agent or officer with reference to anything done or to be done under this Act, whether within or outside of Canada, and whether with or without formal appointment;

(c) "immigration officer in charge" or "officer in charge" means the immigration officer, or medical officer, or other person in immediate charge or control at a port of entry for the purposes of this Act;

"Officer in charge."

(d) "domicile" means the place in which a person has his present home, or in which he resides, or to which he returns as his place of present permanent abode, and not for a mere special or temporary purpose. Canadian domicile is acquired for the purposes of this Act by a person having his domicile for at least three years in Canada after having been landed therein within the meaning of this Act: Provided that the time spent by a person in any penitentiary, gaol, reformatory, prison or asylum for the insane in Canada shall not be counted in the three-year period of residence in Canada which is necessary in order to

"Domicile."

How Canadian domicile acquired.

Proviso.

^a The Law and Regulations of Canada respecting Immigration and Immigrants. Issued by the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, May 16, 1910.

- How Canadian domicile lost. acquire Canadian domicile. Canadian domicile is lost, for the purposes of this Act, by a person voluntarily residing out of Canada, not for a mere special or temporary purpose, but with the present intention of making his permanent home out of Canada unless and until something which is unexpected, or the happening of which is uncertain, shall occur to induce him to return to Canada.
- "Alien."
"Canadian citizen." (e) "alien" means a person who is not a British subject;
(f) "Canadian citizen" means—
i. a person born in Canada who has not become an alien;
ii. a British subject who has Canadian domicile; or,
iii. a person naturalized under the laws of Canada who has not subsequently become an alien or lost Canadian domicile.
- Proviso. Provided that for the purpose of this Act a woman who has not been landed in Canada shall not be held to have acquired Canadian citizenship by virtue of her husband being a Canadian citizen; neither shall a child who has not been landed in Canada be held to have acquired Canadian citizenship through its father or mother being a Canadian citizen;
- "Immigrant." (g) "immigrant" means a person who enters Canada with the intention of acquiring Canadian domicile, and for the purposes of this act every person entering Canada shall be presumed to be an immigrant unless belonging to one of the following classes of persons, hereinafter called "non-immigrant classes":—
- "Non-immigrant classes."
Canadian citizens.
Domiciled residents.
Diplomatic.
Military.
Tourist.
Students.
Professional.
- i. Canadian citizens; and persons who have Canadian domicile.
ii. Diplomatic and consular officers, and all accredited representatives and officials of British or foreign governments, their suites, families and guests, coming to Canada to reside or to discharge any official duty or to pass through in transit.
iii. Officers and men, with their wives and families, belonging to or connected with His Majesty's regular naval and military forces.
iv. Tourists and travellers merely passing through Canada to another country.
v. Students entering Canada for the purpose of attendance, and while in actual attendance, at any university or college authorized by statute or charter to confer degrees; or at any high school or collegiate institute recognized as such for the purpose of this Act by the Minister.
vi. Members of dramatic, musical, artistic, athletic or spectacular organizations entering Canada temporarily for the purpose of giving public performances or exhibitions of an entertaining or instructive nature; and actors, artists, lecturers, musicians, priests and ministers of religion, professors of colleges or other educational institutions, and commercial travellers, entering Canada for the temporary exercise of their respective callings.
- Holder of permit to enter Canada.
Proviso. vii. Holders of a permit to enter Canada, in force for the time being, in form A of schedule one to this Act, signed by the Minister or by some person duly authorized: Provided that whenever in the opinion of the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration or Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such, any person has been improperly included in any of the non-immigrant classes, or has ceased to belong to any of such classes, such person shall thereupon be considered an immigrant within the meaning of this Act and subject to all the provisions of this Act respecting immigrants seeking to enter Canada.
- "Family." (h) "family" includes father and mother, and children under eighteen years of age;
- "Head of family." (i) "head of family" means the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister upon whom the other members of the family are mainly dependent for support;
- "Passenger." (j) "passenger" means a person lawfully on board any ship, vessel, railway train, vehicle or other contrivance for travel, or transport, and also includes any person riding, walking or otherwise travelling across any international bridge or highway; but shall not be held to include the master or other person in control or command of such vessel, ship, railway train, vehicle, bridge, highway or other contrivance for travel or transport, or any member of the crew or staff thereof; or military or naval forces and their families who are carried at the expense of the Government or the United Kingdom, or the Government of any British Dominion or Colony: Provided that any member of the crew of a ship or of the staff of a railway train or other contrivance for travel or transport who deserts or is discharged in Canada from his ship or railway train or other contrivance for travel or transport shall thereupon be considered a passenger within the meaning of this Act;

Proviso.

(k) "stowaway" means a person who goes to sea secreted in a ship without the consent of the master or other person in charge of the ship, or of a person entitled to give such consent; or a person who travels on any railway train or other vehicle without the consent of the conductor or other person authorized to give such consent;

"Stowaway."

(l) "ship" or "vessel" includes every boat and craft of any kind whatsoever for travel or transport other than by land;

"Ship."

(m) "master" means any person in command of a ship or vessel;

"Master."

(n) "owner" as applied to a ship or vessel includes the charterers of such ship or vessel and the agent of the owner or charterer thereof;

"Owner."

"Act."

PROHIBITED CLASSES.

3. No immigrant, passenger, or other person, unless he is a Canadian citizen, or has Canadian domicile, shall be permitted to land in Canada, or in case of having landed in or entered Canada shall be permitted to remain therein, who belongs to any of the following classes, hereinafter called "prohibited classes":—

Prohibited classes of immigrants.

(a) Idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons, and persons who have been insane within five years previous.

Persons mentally defective.

Diseased persons.

(b) Persons afflicted with any loathsome disease, or with a disease which is contagious or infectious, or which may become dangerous to the public health, whether such persons intend to settle in Canada or only to pass through Canada in transit to some other country: Provided that if such disease is one which is curable within a reasonably short time, such persons may, subject to the regulations in that behalf, if any, be permitted to remain on board ship if hospital facilities do not exist on shore, or to leave ship for medical treatment.

Persons physically defective.

(c) Immigrants who are dumb, blind, or otherwise physically defective, unless in the opinion of a Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such they have sufficient money, or have such profession, occupation, trade, employment or other legitimate mode of earning a living that they are not liable to become a public charge or unless they belong to a family accompanying them or already in Canada and which gives security satisfactory to the Minister against such immigrants becoming a public charge.

Criminals.

(d) Persons who have been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude.

Prostitutes and pimps.

(e) Prostitutes and women and girls coming to Canada for any immoral purpose and pimps or persons living on the avails of prostitution.

Procurers.

(f) Persons who procure or attempt to bring into Canada prostitutes or women or girls for the purpose of prostitution or other immoral purpose.

Beggars and vagrants.

(g) Professional beggars or vagrants, or persons likely to become a public charge.

Charity immigrants.

(h) Immigrants to whom money has been given or loaned by any charitable organization for the purpose of enabling them to qualify for landing in Canada under this Act, or whose passage to Canada has been paid wholly or in part by any charitable organization, or out of public moneys, unless it is shown that the authority in writing of the Superintendent of Immigration, or in case of persons coming from Europe, the authority in writing of the assistant Superintendent of Immigration for Canada, in London, has been obtained for the landing in Canada of such persons, and that such authority has been acted upon within a period of sixty days thereafter.

Persons not complying with regulations.

(i) Persons who do not fulfil, meet or comply with the conditions and requirements of any regulations which for the time being are in force and applicable to such persons under sections 37 or 38 of this Act.

Permit to enter Canada.

4. The Minister may issue a written permit authorizing any person to enter Canada without being subject to the provisions of this Act. Such permit shall be in the form A of the schedule to this Act, and shall be expressed to be in force for a specified period only, but it may at any time be extended or cancelled by the Minister in writing. Such extension or cancellation shall be in the form AA of the schedule to this Act.

APPOINTMENT, POWERS AND DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

Officers appointed by Governor in Council.

5. The Governor in Council may appoint a superintendent of immigration, commissioners of immigration, and such other officers as are deemed necessary for carrying out the provisions of this Act.

Immigration offices.

2. The Governor in Council may establish and maintain immigration offices at such places within and outside of Canada as from time to time seems proper.

Officers appointed by Minister.

6. Subject to any regulations in that behalf, the Minister may appoint or employ, either permanently or temporarily, any subordinate officers, not otherwise provided for, required in furtherance of the provisions and objects of this Act, including medical officers, inspectors, guards, matrons and nurses at immigrant stations, and may confer upon them, and charge them with, such power and duties as he considers necessary or expedient.

7. Subject to any regulation in that behalf, all officers appointed or having authority under this Act may, in emergency, employ such temporary assistance as is required for carrying out any duty devolving upon them under this Act, but no such employment shall continue for a period of more than forty-eight hours without the sanction of the Minister.

Assistance in cases of emergency.

8. When at a port of entry there is no immigration officer available for duty under this Act, the chief customs officer at that port or any subordinate customs officer designated by him shall be, ex-officio, an immigration officer.

Immigration agent ex-officio.

9. Every officer appointed under this Act shall perform all duties prescribed for him by this Act, or by any order in council, proclamation or regulation made thereunder, and shall also perform such duties as are required of him by the Minister, either directly or through any other officer; and no action taken by any such officer under or for any purpose of this Act shall be deemed to be invalid or unauthorized merely because it was not taken by the officer specially appointed or detailed for the purpose.

Duties of officers.

10. Every officer appointed under this Act shall have the authority and power of a special constable to enforce any of the provisions of this Act relating to the arrest, detention or deportation of immigrants, aliens or other persons.

Authority as special constable.

11. All constables and other peace officers in Canada, whether appointed under Dominion, provincial, or municipal authority, shall, when so directed by the Minister or by any officer under this Act, receive and execute according to the tenor thereof any written order of the Minister, or of the Minister of Justice, or of a Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such, and any warrant of the Superintendent of Immigration, for the arrest, detention or deportation of any immigrant, alien or other person in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Duties of police to execute orders of Minister.

12. For the preservation of the peace, and in order that arrests may be made for offences against the laws of Canada, or of any province or municipality thereof, wherein the various immigrant stations are located, the officers in charge of such immigrant stations, as occasion may require, shall admit therein any constables or other peace officers charged with the enforcement of such laws; and for the purposes of this section the authority of such officers and the jurisdiction of the local courts shall extend over such immigrant stations.

Right of local police to enter immigrant stations.

APPOINTMENT, POWERS AND PROCEDURE OF BOARDS OF INQUIRY.

13. The Minister may appoint three or more officers, of whom the immigration officer in charge shall be one, at any port of entry, to act as a permanent Board of Inquiry for the summary determination of all cases of immigrants or passengers seeking to enter Canada or detained for any cause under this Act.

Appointment of boards of inquiry.

14. Such Boards of Inquiry shall have authority to determine whether an immigrant, passenger or other person seeking to enter Canada or detained for any cause under this Act, shall be allowed to enter or remain in Canada, or shall be rejected and deported.

Authority of boards.

15. The hearing of all cases brought before such Board of Inquiry shall be separate and apart from the public, but in the presence of the immigrant, passenger or other person concerned whenever practicable, and such immigrant, passenger or other person shall have the right to be represented by counsel whenever any evidence or testimony touching the case is received by the Board, and a summary record of proceedings and of evidence and testimony taken shall be kept by the Board.

Hearing of cases by board.

2. The Board, and any member thereof, may, at discretion, administer oaths and take evidence under oath or by affirmation in any form which they deem binding upon the person being examined.

Taking of evidence.

16. In all such cases, such Board of Inquiry may at the hearing, receive and base its decision upon any evidence, considered credible or trustworthy by such Board in the circumstances of each case; and in all cases where the question of the right to enter Canada under this Act is raised the burden of proof shall rest upon the immigrant, passenger or other person claiming such right.

All evidence to be received.

Decision of majority to prevail.

17. The Board of Inquiry shall appoint its own chairman and secretary to keep the record of its proceedings, and in all cases and questions before it the decision, which decision shall be in writing, of a majority of the Board shall prevail.

Cases where no appeal allowed from board.

18. There shall be no appeal from the decision of such Board of Inquiry as to the rejection and deportation of immigrants, passengers or other persons seeking to land in Canada, when such decision is based upon a certificate of the examining medical officer to the effect that such immigrants, passengers or other persons are afflicted with any loathsome disease, or with a disease which may become dangerous to the public health, or that they come within any of the following prohibited classes, namely, idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics and insane persons: Provided always that Canadian citizens and persons who have a Canadian domicile shall be permitted to land in Canada as a matter of right.

Proviso as to Canadian citizens.

Cases where appeal allowed from board.

19. In all cases other than provided for in the next preceding section an appeal may be taken to the Minister against the decision of any such Board of Inquiry or officer in charge by the immigrant, passenger or other person concerned in the case, if the appellant forthwith serves written notice of such appeal, (which notice may be in form C in the schedule to this Act), upon the officer in charge, or the officer in whose custody the appellant may be, and shall at the same time deposit with such officer the sum of twenty dollars for himself and ten dollars for each child or other person dependent upon such appellant and detained with him, such sum to be used for the purpose of defraying the cost of maintaining the appellant and those dependent upon him, pending the decision of the Minister on such appeal. In case of the appeal being allowed by the Minister or by the Board of Inquiry on a re-hearing, then the said sum shall be returned to the appellant; and in case of the appeal being disallowed by the Minister or by the Board of Inquiry on a re-hearing, then the balance of such sum, if any, after deduction of regular detention charges for board, shall be returned to the appellant; and the appellant shall forthwith be deported.

Security for cost of maintenance pending appeal.

Notice of appeal.

20. Notice of appeal and deposit of the said sum shall act as a stay of all proceedings until a final decision is rendered by the Minister, and within forty-eight hours after the filing of the said notice and deposit of the said sum a summary record of the case shall be forwarded by the immigration officer in charge to the Superintendent of Immigration, accompanied by his views thereon in writing.

Stay of proceedings.

Appellant in custody pending decision of Minister.

21. Pending the decision of the Minister, the appellant and those dependent upon him shall be kept in custody at an immigrant station, unless released under bond as provided for in section 33 of this Act.

When powers of board to be exercised by officer in charge.

22. When there is no Board of Inquiry at a port of entry, or at a neighbouring port to which a person detained under this Act could conveniently be conveyed, or to which a case for decision could conveniently be referred, then the officer in charge shall exercise the powers and discharge the duties of a Board of Inquiry and shall follow as nearly as may be the procedure of such Board as regards hearing and appeal and all other matters over which it has jurisdiction.

Jurisdiction of courts in cases of rejection and deportation restricted.

23. No court, and no judge or officer thereof, shall have jurisdiction to review, quash, reverse, restrain or otherwise interfere with any proceeding, decision or order of the Minister or of any Board of Inquiry, or officer in charge, had, made or given under the authority and in accordance with the provisions of this Act relating to the detention or deportation of any rejected immigrant, passenger or other person, upon any ground whatsoever, unless such person is a Canadian citizen or has Canadian domicile.

24. The Governor in Council may make such further regulations governing the procedure of Boards of Inquiry and appeal therefrom as are deemed necessary. Further regulations governing boards.

SPECIAL PROVISION AS TO PASSENGERS BY VESSEL.

25. It shall be the duty of every transportation company bringing passengers or other persons to Canada by vessel to prevent such passengers or other persons leaving such vessel in Canada at any time or place other than as designated by the immigration officer in charge, and the failure of any such company to comply with such duty shall be an offence against this Act and shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars, in respect of each such passenger or person and every passenger or other person so landed may be arrested and detained for examination as contemplated under section 33 of this Act. Passengers to be landed only at places designated by officer in charge.

Penalty.

26. The master shall furnish to the immigration officer in charge at the port of entry a bill of health, certified by the medical officer of the vessel, such bill of health being in the form and containing such information as is required from time to time under this Act. Bill of health.

27. Before any passengers are permitted to leave a vessel in Canada the immigration officer in charge, or any officer directed by him, may go on board and inspect such vessel, and examine and take extracts from the manifest of passengers, and from the bill of health. Officer may go on board ship.

28. The master shall permit any examination of passengers required under this Act to be made on board his vessel whenever so directed by the immigration officer in charge. Master to permit examination of passengers on board ship.

29. Medical officers appointed under this Act shall make a physical and mental examination of all immigrants and passengers seeking to land in Canada from any ship or vessel, except in the case of Canadian citizens and persons who have Canadian domicile. Such examination shall be made in accordance with and subject to regulations prescribed by the Superintendent of Immigration under the direction or with the approval of the Minister. Medical examination of passengers.

29. The immigration officer in charge, after satisfying himself that the requirements of this Act, and of any order in council, proclamation or regulation made thereunder, have been carried out, shall grant written permission to the master of the vessel to allow the passengers to leave the vessel. When permission to land passengers to be granted.

SPECIAL PROVISION AS TO PASSENGERS BY LAND.

30. Every transportation company carrying passengers in Canada by land shall, for the purposes of this Act, be considered as one with any transportation company with which it co-operates or makes or affords connection whether in Canada or not and whether under the same management or not, and shall be liable for any offence against this Act by any company with which it so co-operates or makes or affords connection. Liability of companies co-operating.

31. Regulations made by the Governor in Council under this Act may provide that the obligations of transportation companies bringing immigrants and passengers into Canada by land shall be similar to those imposed by this Act on masters and owners of vessels bringing immigrants and passengers to Canada, including the furnishing of names and descriptions of such immigrants and passengers. Obligations of transportation companies bringing passengers by land.

2. Such regulations may also provide that officers under this Act shall have the power to hold and detain railway trains, cars and other vehicles entering Canada until examination of immigrants and passengers has been made as required by this Act; and may provide penalties for non-compliance with such regulations by transportation companies, or any official or employee thereof. Detention of trains.

Obligations of transportation companies to provide detention buildings.

Proviso.

Regulations for examination of passengers along the border.

3. Such regulations may also impose a duty upon transportation companies to provide, equip and maintain suitable buildings for the examination and detention of passengers for any purpose under this Act at such ports of entry or border stations as may be designated by the Minister; and may provide penalties for non-compliance by transportation companies with such regulations: Provided that no transportation company shall be made liable for the safe-keeping of any person who is in custody of an officer for any cause under this Act, unless such person is on a vessel, railway train or other vehicle belonging to or operated or controlled by such company.

32. Subject to any regulations made under the preceding section, the Superintendent of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Minister, shall prescribe regulations for the entry, inspection and medical examination of immigrants and passengers along the border of Canada so as not to unnecessarily delay, impede or annoy passengers in ordinary travel.

LANDING OF PASSENGERS.

Landing of passengers.

33. Every passenger or other person seeking to land in Canada shall first appear before an immigration officer, and shall be forthwith examined as required under this Act, either on shipboard or on train or at some other place designated for that purpose.

Answers to questions.

2. Every passenger or other person seeking to land in Canada shall answer truly all questions put to him by any officer when examined under the authority of this Act.

Doubtful cases.

3. Every passenger or other person so examined shall be immediately landed unless the examining officer has reason to believe that the landing of such passenger or other person would be contrary to any provision of this Act.

Examination in doubtful cases.

4. Every passenger or other person, as to whose right to land the examining officer has any doubt, shall be detained for further examination by the officer in charge, or by the Board of Inquiry, and such examination shall be forthwith conducted separate and apart from the public, and upon the conclusion thereof such passenger or other person shall be either immediately landed or shall be rejected and kept in custody pending his deportation.

Deportation.

5. An order for deportation by a Board of Inquiry or officer in charge may be made in the form B in the schedule to this Act, and a copy of the said order shall forthwith be delivered to such passenger or other person, and a copy of the said order shall at the same time be served upon the master or owner of the ship or upon the local agent or other official of the transportation company by which such person was brought to Canada; and such person shall thereupon be deported by such company subject to any appeal which may have been entered on his behalf under section 19 of this Act.

Duty to report entry.

6. Every person who enters Canada except at a port of entry shall forthwith report such entry to the nearest immigration officer and present himself for examination as provided by this section.

Avoiding port of entry.

7. Any person who enters Canada except at a port of entry, or who at a port of entry eludes examination by an officer or Board of Inquiry, or who enters Canada by force or misrepresentation or stealth or otherwise contrary to any provision of this Act, or who escapes from the custody of an officer or from an immigrant station when detained for any cause under this Act, shall be guilty of an offence under this Act, and liable on conviction to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, and may be arrested and detained without a warrant by any officer for examination as provided under this section; and if found not to be a Canadian citizen, or not to have Canadian domicile, such entry shall in itself be sufficient cause for deportation whenever so ordered by a Board of Inquiry or officer in charge subject to any appeal which may have been entered under section 19 of this Act.

8. Any transportation company or person knowingly and wilfully landing, or assisting to land or attempting to land in Canada, any prohibited immigrant or person whose entry into Canada has been forbidden under this Act, shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable on conviction, to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars for each prohibited immigrant or other person so landed in Canada, or whose landing in Canada was so attempted.

Penalty for landing prohibited immigrant.

9. Any transportation company or person interfering with or resisting an immigration officer in the performance of his duty under this Act, or knowingly and wilfully assisting in the escape of any person detained by an officer, or at an immigrant station, for any purpose under this Act, or giving false information to an officer, whereby such officer is induced to land or permit the landing of any person in Canada who otherwise would be refused landing for any cause under this Act or would be detained for examination, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for each such offence.

Interference with officer in performance of duty.

10. Every person who enters Canada as a tourist or traveller or other non-immigrant, but who ceases to be such and remains in Canada, shall forthwith report such facts to the nearest immigration officer and shall present himself before an officer for examination under this Act, and in default of so doing he shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and shall also be liable to deportation by order of a Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such.

Penalty for tourist who ceases to be such falling to report.

11. Pending the final disposition of the case of any person detained or taken into custody for any cause under this Act he may be released under a bond, which bond may be in the form B in the schedule to this Act, with security approved by the officer in charge, or may be released upon deposit of money with the officer in charge in lieu of a bond, and to an amount approved by such officer; upon condition that such person shall appear before a Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such at any port of entry named by the officer in charge, and at such time as shall be named, for examination in regard to the cause or complaint on account of which he has been detained or taken into custody.

Release under bond or approved deposit.

12. If such person fail to appear for examination at such time and place named, or shall fail to keep and observe every other condition under which he is so released, then such bond shall be enforced and collected, and the proceeds thereof, or the money deposited in lieu of a bond, as the case may have been, shall be paid into the hands of the Minister of Finance, and shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada; and such person may be taken into custody forthwith and deported by order of a Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such.

Failure to appear for examination.

MEDICAL TREATMENT OF SICK AND DISABLED PASSENGERS.

34. A passenger or other person seeking to enter Canada or who has been rejected or is detained for any purpose under this Act, who is suffering from sickness or physical or mental disability, may whenever it is so directed by the Superintendent of Immigration or officer in charge be afforded medical treatment on board ship or in an immigrant station, or may be removed to a suitable hospital for treatment, according as the officer in charge decides is required by existing circumstances and the condition of the person's health as reported upon by the examining medical officer.

Medical treatment.

2. If, in the opinion of the Superintendent of Immigration, or of the officer in charge, the transportation company which brought such person to Canada failed to exercise proper vigilance or care in so doing, then the cost of his hospital treatment and medical attention and maintenance shall be paid by such transportation company, and otherwise the cost thereof shall be collected from such person, and if that be not possible then the cost thereof shall be paid by the Department of the Interior.

When transportation companies liable for cost of medical treatment.

Cost of attendant or dependent.

3. The Superintendent of Immigration, or officer in charge, may, whenever it is considered necessary or advisable for the proper care of such persons, direct that a suitable attendant, or someone upon whom such person is dependent, or someone who is dependent upon such person, as the case may be, shall be kept with such person during his medical treatment on board ship or at an immigrant station or hospital, or in case of deportation from any place within Canada shall accompany such person to his port of embarkation from Canada; and the cost thereof shall be paid by the said transportation company whenever in the opinion of the Superintendent of Immigration it has failed to exercise proper vigilance or care as aforesaid, and otherwise the cost thereof shall be collected from such person, and if that be not possible then the cost thereof shall be paid by the Department of the Interior.

Hospital treatment not to constitute landing.

35. A passenger or other person permitted to enter Canada for medical treatment under this Act shall not be regarded as landed within the meaning of this Act.

Regulations for diseased persons for treatment at Canadian sanitariums.

36. The Superintendent of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Minister, shall prescribe regulations whereby sick and diseased persons may enter Canada for treatment and care at any health resort, hospital, sanitarium, asylum or other place or institution for the cure or care of such persons.

REGULATIONS AS TO MONETARY AND OTHER REQUIREMENTS FROM SPECIFIED CLASSES OF IMMIGRANTS.

Immigrants may be required to possess prescribed amount of money.

37. Regulations made by the Governor in Council under this Act may provide as a condition to permission to land in Canada that immigrants and tourists shall possess in their own right money to a prescribed minimum amount, which amount may vary according to the race, occupation or destination of such immigrant or tourist, and otherwise according to the circumstances; and may also provide that all persons coming to Canada directly or indirectly from countries which issue passports or penal certificates to persons leaving such countries shall produce such passports or penal certificates on demand of the immigration officer in charge before being allowed to land in Canada.

Prohibition of immigrants not coming to Canada by continuous journey.

38. The Governor in Council may, by proclamation or order whenever he deems it necessary or expedient,—

(a) prohibit the landing in Canada or at any specified port of entry in Canada of any immigrant who has come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which he is a native or naturalized citizen, and upon a through ticket purchased in that country, or prepaid in Canada;

Prohibition of landing of passengers brought by companies neglecting to comply with provisions of this Act.

(b) prohibit the landing in Canada of passengers brought to Canada by any transportation company which refuses or neglects to comply with the provisions of this Act;

Prohibition of specified classes of immigrants.

(c) prohibit for a stated period, or permanently, the landing in Canada, or the landing at any specified port of entry in Canada, of immigrants belonging to any race deemed unsuited to the climate or requirements of Canada, or of immigrants of any specified class, occupation or character.

Duty of companies to convey rejected immigrants to country of birth or citizenship.

39. When any immigrant or other person is rejected or ordered to be deported from Canada, and such person has not come to Canada by continuous journey from the country of which he is a native or naturalized citizen, but has come indirectly through another country, which refuses to allow such person to return or be returned to it, then the transportation company bringing such person to such other country shall deport such person from Canada to the country of which he is a native or naturalized citizen whenever so directed by the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration and at the cost of such transportation company, and in case of neglect or refusal so to do, such transportation company shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for each such offence.

Penalty.

DEPORTATION OF PROHIBITED AND UNDESIRABLE CLASSES.

40. Whenever any person, other than a Canadian citizen, within three years after landing in Canada has been convicted of a criminal offence in Canada, or has become a prostitute or an inmate of a house of ill-fame, or by common repute has become a procurer or pimp or person living on the avails of prostitution, or has become a professional beggar or a public charge, or an inmate of a penitentiary, gaol, reformatory, prison, hospital, insane asylum or public charitable institution, or enters or remains in Canada contrary to any provision of this Act, it shall be the duty of any officer cognizant thereof, and the duty of the clerk, secretary or other official of any municipality in Canada wherein such person may be, to forthwith send a written complaint thereof to the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration, giving full particulars.

Duty of officer to send complaint to Minister regarding undesirable classes.

41. Whenever any person other than a Canadian citizen advocates in Canada the overthrow by force or violence of the government of Great Britain or Canada, or other British dominion, colony, possession or dependency, or the overthrow by force or violence of constituted law and authority, or the assassination of any official of the Government of Great Britain or Canada or other British dominion, colony, possession or dependency, or of any foreign government, or shall by word or act create or attempt to create riot or public disorder in Canada, or shall by common repute belong to or be suspected of belonging to any secret society or organization which extorts money from, or in any way attempts to control, any resident of Canada by force or threat of bodily harm, or by blackmail; such person for the purposes of this Act shall be considered and classed as an undesirable immigrant, and it shall be the duty of any officer becoming cognizant thereof, and the duty of the clerk, secretary or other official of any municipality in Canada wherein such person may be, to forthwith send a written complaint thereof to the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration, giving full particulars.

Duty of officers to send complaint to Minister concerning certain acts of undesirable classes.

42. Upon receiving a complaint from any officer, or from any clerk or secretary or other official of a municipality, whether directly or through the Superintendent of Immigration, against any person alleged to belong to any prohibited or undesirable class, the Minister may order such person to be taken into custody and detained at an immigrant station for examination and an investigation of the facts alleged in the said complaint to be made by a Board of Inquiry or by an officer acting as such. Such Board of Inquiry or officer shall have the same powers and privileges, and shall follow the same procedure, as if the person against whom complaint is made were being examined before landing as provided in section 33 of this Act; and similarly the person against whom complaint is made shall have the same right and privileges as he would have if seeking to land in Canada.

Investigation of complaints concerning undesirable classes.

2. If upon investigation of the facts such Board of Inquiry or examining officer is satisfied that such person belongs to any of the prohibited or undesirable classes mentioned in sections 40 and 41 of this Act, such person shall be deported forthwith, as provided for in section 33 of this Act, subject, however, to such right of appeal as he may have to the Minister.

Deportation in such cases.

3. The Governor in Council may, at any time, order any such person found by a Board of Inquiry or examining officer to belong to any of the undesirable classes referred to in section 41 of this Act to leave Canada within a specified period. Such order may be in the form D in the schedule to this Act, and shall be in force as soon as it is served upon such person, or is left for him by any officer at the last known place of abode or address of such person.

Order to leave Canada.

Penalty for rejected or deported person remaining in or re-entering Canada.

4. Any person rejected or deported under this Act who enters or remains in or returns to Canada after such rejection or deportation without a permit under this Act or other lawful excuse, or who refuses or neglects to leave Canada when ordered so to do by the Governor in Council as provided for in this section, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and may forthwith be arrested by any officer and be deported on an order from the Minister or the Superintendent of Immigration, or may be prosecuted for such offence, and shall be liable, on conviction, to two years imprisonment, and immediately after expiry of any sentence imposed for such offence, may be again deported or ordered to leave Canada under this section

Deportation of head of family.

5. In any case where deportation of the head of a family is ordered, all dependent members of the family may be deported at the same time. And in any case where deportation of a dependent member of a family is ordered on account of having become a public charge, and in the opinion of the Minister such circumstance is due to wilful neglect or non-support by the head or other members of the family morally bound to support such dependent members, then all members of the family may be deported at the same time. Such deportation shall be at the cost of the persons so deported; and if that be not possible then the cost of such deportation shall be paid by the Department of the Interior.

Deportation of dependent member of family.

Detention of certain prisoners for deportation.

43. When any person has, within three years of landing in Canada, become an inmate of a penitentiary, gaol, reformatory or prison, the Minister of Justice may, upon the request of the Minister of the Interior, issue an order to the warden or governor of such penitentiary, gaol, reformatory or prison, which order may be in the form E in the schedule to this Act, commanding him after the sentence or term of imprisonment of such person has expired to detain such person for, and deliver him to, the officer named in the warrant issued by the Superintendent of Immigration, which warrant may be in the form EE in the schedule to this Act, with a view to the deportation of such person.

Order of Minister of Justice and warrant of superintendent of immigration.

2. Such order of the Minister of Justice shall be sufficient authority to the warden or governor of the penitentiary, gaol, reformatory or prison, as the case may be, to detain and deliver such person to the officer named in the warrant of the Superintendent of Immigration as aforesaid, and such warden or governor shall obey such order, and such warrant of the Superintendent of Immigration shall be sufficient authority to the officer named therein to detain such person in his custody, or in custody at any immigrant station, until such person is delivered to the authorized agent of the transportation company which brought such person into Canada, with a view to deportation as herein provided.

OBLIGATIONS OF TRANSPORTATION COMPANIES IN CASES OF REJECTION AND DEPORTATION.

Return of rejected immigrants.

44. Every immigrant, passenger, stowaway or other person brought to Canada by a transportation company and rejected by the Board of Inquiry or officer in charge, shall, if practicable, be sent back to the place whence he came, on the vessel, railway train or other vehicle by which he was brought to Canada. The cost of his maintenance, while being detained at any immigrant station after having been rejected, as well as the cost of his return, shall be paid by such transportation company.

Refusal to receive on board.

2. If any such transportation company—
(a) refuses to receive any such person back on board of such vessel, railway train or other vehicle or on board of any other vessel, railway train or other vehicle owned or operated by the same transportation company, when so directed by the officer in charge; or,

Failure to detain.
Failure to return.

(b) fails to detain any such person thereon; or,
(c) refuses or fails to return him to the place whence he came to Canada; or,

(d) refuses or fails to pay the cost of his maintenance while on land awaiting deportation; or,

(e) makes any charge against any such person for his maintenance while on land, or for his return to the port of embarkation, or takes any security from any such person for the payment of such charge;

such master, agent, owner or transportation company concerned shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars for each offence; and no such vessel shall have clearance from any port of Canada until such fine is paid.

45. Every person ordered to be deported under this Act who has been brought to Canada by ship, shall be reconveyed free of charge, by the railway company or companies which brought him to the place in Canada where he is being detained for deportation, to the ocean port where he was landed, or the nearest available winter ocean port, as may be directed by the Board of Inquiry, and thence he shall be conveyed free of charge by the transportation company which brought him to Canada to the place in the country whence he was brought or to the country of his birth or citizenship, and in such manner as to passage accommodation as may be directed by the officer in charge; and similarly every such person brought to Canada by a railway train or other vehicle shall, subject to the regulations under sections 31 and 32 of this Act, be reconveyed free of charge by the transportation company which carried him to the place in Canada where he is rejected or where he is being detained for deportation to the place in the country whence he was brought or to the country of his birth or citizenship.

46. Every transportation company, which refuses or neglects to comply with the order of the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration or Board of Inquiry or officer acting as such to take on board, guard safely, and return to the country whence he came, or to the country of his birth or citizenship, any passenger or other person brought to Canada by such transportation company and ordered to be deported under the provisions of this Act shall be liable to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars in each case.

47. The Superintendent of Immigration, under the direction or with the consent of the Minister, shall prescribe regulations for the proper detention and treatment on board ship or railway train or other vehicle of all persons who have been ordered to be deported under this Act, both while awaiting and during deportation.

48. Every transportation company which, through the connivance or negligence of any of its officials or employees, permits the escape of any person delivered into the custody of such transportation company by any officer for deportation under this Act shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars for each offence.

2. In the event of such person escaping from the custody of a transportation company, it shall be the duty of the master of the vessel, conductor of the train, dockmaster, special constable or other official or employee of the transportation company in whose custody such person then was, to immediately report such escape to the nearest available immigration officer; and it shall also be the duty of the said company forthwith to report such escape to the Superintendent of Immigration, and such report shall state when, and from whom, such person was received, and the time and mode of escape. Failure on the part of such master, conductor, or other official to so report to the nearest available immigration officer shall render him liable to a penalty of not more than twenty dollars and not less than ten dollars for each offence, and failure on the part of the transportation company to so report to the Superintendent of Immigration shall render such company liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for each offence.

OBLIGATIONS OF MASTERS OF VESSELS AND PILOTS.

- Manifest to be delivered by master to immigration officer. 49. The master of every vessel arriving at any port of entry in Canada shall forthwith after such arrival, and before any entry of such vessel is allowed, deliver to the immigration officer in charge a manifest in the form prescribed by the Superintendent of Immigration, of all the passengers and stowaways on board such vessel at the time of her departure from the port or place whence she last cleared or sailed for Canada, or who were on board such vessel at the time of her arrival in Canada, or at any time during her voyage; and such manifest shall also state the name and apparent age of all passengers on board of such vessel on such voyage who are insane, idiotic, epileptic, dumb, blind or infirm, or suffering from any disease or injury or physical defect which may be cause for rejection under this Act, and whether or not they are accompanied by relatives able to support them.
- Entry as to passengers who have been born or have died during voyage. 2. Such manifest shall further state if any birth has taken place during the voyage, and shall state the name, age and last place of residence of any person who has died during the voyage, and shall specify the cause of death and whether such person was accompanied by relatives or other persons who are entitled to take charge of the moneys and effects left by such person and the disposition made thereof.
- Disposal of property of deceased passengers. 3. If there were no such relatives or other persons so entitled the manifest shall fully designate the quantity and description of the property, whether money or otherwise, left by such person; and the master of the vessel shall pay over to the immigration officer in charge at the port at which the vessel is entered, and fully account for, all moneys and effects belonging to any person who has died on the voyage. The officer in charge shall thereupon give to the master a receipt for all moneys or effects so placed in his hands by the master, which receipt shall contain a full description of the nature or amount thereof.
- Receipt for property by immigration officer. 4. If the master of such vessel fails—
- Failure to deliver, or making partial or false, manifest. (a) to deliver such manifest required by this section; or, (b) wilfully or negligently fails to state therein all the particulars of information required by this section; or, (c) wilfully or negligently makes any false statement in such manifest; he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for every person with regard to whom any such omission occurs or any such false statement is made.
- Penalty. 50. The master of any vessel sailing from a port outside of Canada who embarks passengers after the vessel has been cleared and examined by the proper officer at the port of departure, and who does not report such additional passengers in the manifest required to be delivered under this Act to the immigration officer in charge at the port of entry, shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for each passenger so embarked as aforesaid and not included in one of the said manifests.
- Entry in manifest of additional passengers. 51. The master of every vessel embarking outbound passengers from any seaport of Canada shall, on the return voyage of such vessel to Canada, deliver to the immigration officer in charge a manifest in form prescribed by the regulations in that behalf giving the names of all such passengers on board such vessel, or booked to sail by such vessel, and stating in every case whether they are British subjects or aliens, and their sex, nationality, and port of destination.
- Manifest of outbound passengers. 2. If the master of any vessel refuses or omits to deliver such manifest of outbound passengers he shall incur a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for every passenger with regard to whom he has refused or wilfully neglected to give the required information, and clearance of such

4. If the master of any vessel arriving at any port of entry in Canada shall pay off or discharge any member of the crew of such vessel without such member having first been examined by an immigration officer, as required under section 33 of this act, he shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars for every member of the crew so paid off or discharged.

Master discharging crew without examination.

Penalty.

5. If the master of any vessel arriving at any port of entry in Canada fails to report to the immigration officer in charge every case of desertion from the crew of such vessel occurring at such port so soon as such desertion is discovered, or shall refuse or neglect to describe the deserter for purposes of identification whenever required by such officer he shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars in the case of each such deserter.

Master failing to report cases of desertion.

Penalty.

53. Nothing in this Act shall prevent the master of any vessel from permitting any passenger to leave the vessel outside of Canada at the request of such passenger before the arrival of the vessel at her final port of destination; but in every such case the name of the passenger so leaving shall be entered in the manifest of passengers made out at the time of the clearing of the vessel from the port of departure or at the port at which such passenger was embarked.

Passenger may leave vessel before arrival at port of destination.

54. Every pilot who has had charge of any vessel having passengers on board, and knows that any passenger or stowaway has been permitted to leave the vessel contrary to the provisions of this Act, and who does not immediately upon the arrival of such vessel in the port to which he engaged to pilot her, and before the immigration officer in charge has given permission to the passengers to leave the vessel, inform the said officer that such passenger or stowaway has been so permitted to leave the vessel, shall be liable to a fine of not more than one hundred dollars and not less than ten dollars for every passenger with regard to whom he has wilfully neglected to give such information.

Pilots neglecting to inform immigration officer of unlawful landing of passengers.

Penalty.

PROTECTION OF IMMIGRANTS.

False representation to deter or induce immigration.

55. Every person who causes or procures the publication or circulation, by advertisement or otherwise, in a country outside of Canada, of false representations as to the opportunities for employment in Canada, or as to the state of the labour market in Canada, intended or adapted to encourage or induce, or to deter or prevent, the immigration into Canada of persons resident in such outside country, or who does anything in Canada for the purpose of causing or procuring the communication to any resident of such country of any such representations which are thereafter so published, circulated or communicated, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and liable on summary conviction before two justices of the peace, to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

Violation of foreign laws regarding duties of master of crew.

56. If, during the voyage of any vessel carrying immigrants from any port outside of Canada to any port in Canada, the master or any of the crew is guilty of any violation of any law in force in the country in which such foreign port is situate, regarding the duties of such master or crew towards the immigrants in such vessel, or if the master of any such vessel during such voyage commits any breach whatsoever of the contract for the passage made with any immigrant by such master, or by the owners of such vessel, such master or such one of the crew shall, for every such violation or breach of contract, be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars and not less than twenty dollars, independently of any remedy which such immigrants complaining may otherwise have.

Breach of contract with passenger.

Penalty.

Intercourse between crew and female immigrants.

57. No officer, seaman or other person on board of a vessel bringing immigrants to Canada shall, while such vessel is in Canadian waters, entice or admit any female immigrant into his apartment, or, except by the direction or permission of the master of such vessel, first given for such purpose, visit or frequent any part of such vessel assigned to female passengers.

Penalty for intercourse between crew and female immigrants.

2. Every officer, seaman or other man employed on board of a vessel bringing immigrants to Canada, who, while such vessel is in Canadian waters, entices or admits any female immigrant into his apartment or, except by the direction or permission of the master of such vessel first given, visits or frequents any part of such vessel assigned to female passengers, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for every such offence.

Penalty for permitting crew to visit parts of vessel assigned to female immigrants.

3. Every master of a vessel who, while such vessel is in Canadian waters, directs or permits any officer or seaman, or other man employed on board of such vessel to visit or frequent any part of such vessel assigned to female immigrants, except for the purpose of doing or performing some necessary act or duty, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty-five dollars for every such offence.

Notices to be posted regarding intercourse between immigrants and the crew.

58. The master of every vessel bringing immigrants to Canada from Europe shall, at all times while the vessel is in Canadian waters, keep posted, in a conspicuous place on the forecastle and in the parts of the steerage of the said vessel assigned to steerage passengers, a written or printed notice in the English, French, Swedish, Danish, German, Russian and Yiddish languages, and such other languages as are ordered from time to time by the Superintendent of Immigration, containing the provisions of this Act regarding the prevention of intercourse between the crew and the immigrants and the penalties for the contravention thereof, and shall keep such notice so posted during the remainder of the voyage.

Penalty.

2. Every master of a vessel bringing immigrants to Canada from Europe who neglects to post, and keep posted, the notice required by this Act to be posted regarding the prevention of intercourse between the crew and the immigrants and the penalties for contravention thereof, as required by this Act, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars for every such offence.

3. The immigration officer in charge shall inspect every such vessel upon arrival for evidence of compliance with this section, and shall institute proceedings for any penalty incurred for violation thereof.

Inspection of notices by officer in charge.

59. If any vessel from any port or place outside of Canada comes within the limits of Canada having on board, or having had on board, at any time, during her voyage—

Proportionate number of passengers to area of decks.

(a) any greater number of passengers than one adult passenger for every fifteen clear superficial feet on each deck of such vessel appropriated to the use of such passengers and unoccupied by stores or goods, not being the personal luggage of such passengers, or,

(b) a greater number of persons, including the master and crew and the cabin passengers, if any, than one for every two tons of the tonnage of such vessel, calculated in the manner used for ascertaining the tonnage of British ships, the master of such vessel shall be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty dollars, and not less than ten dollars for each passenger or person constituting such excess.

Penalty.

2. For the purpose of this section, each person of or above the age of fourteen years shall be deemed an adult, and two persons above the age of one year and under the age of fourteen years shall be reckoned and taken as one adult.

"Adult" defined.

3. If there shall be a bar or other place for the sale of intoxicating liquors on any such vessel in the quarters assigned to third-class or steerage passengers, or to which third-class or steerage passengers are permitted to have access at any time during the voyage of such vessel to Canada, the master of such vessel shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and not less than fifty dollars; and any officer or member of the crew of such vessel who sells or gives intoxicating liquor to any third-class or steerage passenger, during the voyage of such vessel to Canada, without the consent of the master or ship surgeon or other qualified medical practitioner on board thereof, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding fifty dollars and not less than ten dollars for every such offence.

Sale of intoxicating liquors to steerage passengers.

Penalty.

60. Every immigrant on any vessel arriving at a port of entry to which the owner or master of such vessel engaged to convey him, if facilities for housing or inland carriage for such immigrant are not immediately available, shall be entitled to remain and keep his luggage on board such vessel for a period of twenty-four hours or until such facilities are available, whichever shall first occur, and the master of such vessel shall not, until such time, remove any berths or accommodation used by such immigrant.

Right of immigrants to remain on board vessel till housing or carriage available.

61. Passengers and their luggage shall be landed from any ship by the master thereof free of expense to the said passengers, and such landing shall be either at a usual public landing place at the port of entry or at such other place as is designated by the officer in charge.

Passengers to be landed free of expense.

62. The Minister or the Superintendent of Immigration may, from time to time, by instructions to the immigration officer in charge, appoint the places at which passengers arriving at such port shall be landed.

Appointment of landing places.

63. At the places so appointed the Minister or Superintendent of Immigration may cause proper shelter and accommodation to be provided for immigrants until they can be forwarded to their place of destination.

Shelter for immigrants.

64. If both the immigrant parents, or the last surviving immigrant parent of any child brought with them, in any vessel bound for Canada, die on the voyage, or at any immigrant station or elsewhere in Canada while still under the care of any immigrant agent, or other officer under this Act, the Minister, Disposal of property of deceased immigrant parents.

or such officer as he deposes for the purpose, may cause the effects of such parents to be disposed of for the benefit of such child to the best advantage in his power, or in his discretion to be delivered over to any institution or person assuming the care and charge of such child.

Inquiry in case of complaints respecting violation of Act.

65. If complaint be made to the Minister or the Superintendent of Immigration against any company or person for any violation of this Act, in any matter relating to immigrants or immigration, the Minister may cause such inquiry as he thinks proper to be made into the facts of the case, or may bring the matter before the Governor in Council in order that such inquiry may be made under The Inquiries Act.

Procedure.

2. If upon such inquiry it appears to the satisfaction of the Minister that such company or person has been guilty of such violation, the Minister may require such company or person to make such compensation to the person aggrieved, or to do such other thing, as is just and reasonable; or may adopt measures for causing such proceeding to be instituted against such company or person as the case requires.

Regulations respecting employment agencies.

66. The Governor in Council may make such regulations and impose such penalties as are deemed expedient to safeguard the interests of immigrants seeking employment from any companies, firms, or persons carrying on the business of intelligence offices or employment or labour agencies at any place in Canada.

- IMMIGRANT RUNNERS.

Licenses for immigrant runners.

67. The Superintendent of Immigration may issue to agents of transportation companies, forwarding and transfer companies, hotels and boarding houses, a license authorizing such persons to exercise the vocation of immigrant runners, or of soliciting the patronage of immigrants for their respective companies, hotels or boarding houses, or of booking passengers. Such license shall be in the form prescribed by the Superintendent of Immigration, and may at any time be cancelled by him under the direction or with the consent of the Minister.

Immigrants not to be solicited except by licensed persons.

68. No person shall, at any port or place in Canada, for hire, reward or gain, or the expectation thereof, conduct, solicit or recommend, either orally or by handbill or placard or in any other manner, any immigrant to or on behalf of any owner of a vessel, or to or on behalf of any inn-keeper or boarding house keeper, or any other person, for any purposes connected with the preparations or arrangements of such immigrant for his passage to his final place of destination in Canada, or elsewhere, or give or pretend to give to such immigrant any information oral, printed or otherwise, or assist him to his said place of destination, or in any way exercise the vocation of booking passengers, or of taking money for their inland fare, or for the transportation of their luggage, unless such person has first obtained a license from the Superintendent of Immigration authorizing him to act in such capacity.

Selling tickets to immigrants at excessive rates.

69. Every person licensed under this Act as an immigrant runner, or person acting on behalf of any transportation company, or forwarding or transfer company, or hotel or boarding house, and every person in his employ, who sells to any immigrant a ticket or order for the passage of such immigrant, or for the conveyance of his luggage, at a higher rate than that for which it could be purchased directly from the company or person undertaking such conveyance, and every person who purchases any such ticket from an immigrant for less than its value, or gives in exchange for it one of less value, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and the license of such person shall be cancelled.

Persons not to board vessels or enter immigrant stations without authority.

70. No licensed immigrant runner, or agent or person acting on behalf of any transportation company, or other person, shall go on board any vessel after such vessel has arrived in Canadian waters until all passengers thereon have been landed, or shall go into any immigrant station, unless he is authorized so to do by the Superintendent of Immigration or officer in charge.

DUTIES OF INN-KEEPERS.

71. Every inn-keeper or boarding house keeper in any city, town, village or place in Canada designated by any order in council, who receives into his house as a boarder or lodger any immigrant within three months after his arrival in Canada, shall cause to be kept conspicuously posted in the public rooms and passages of his house and printed upon his business cards, a list of the prices which will be charged to immigrants per day and per week for board or lodging, or both, and also the prices for separate meals, which cards shall also contain the name of the keeper of such house, together with the name of the street in which it is situate, and its number in such street.

List of prices to be posted in hotels and boarding houses for immigrants.

2. No such inn-keeper or boarding house keeper shall have any lien on the effects of such immigrant for any amount claimed for such boarding or lodging for any sum exceeding five dollars.

Inn-keeper's lien limited.

72. Every such inn-keeper or boarding house keeper who detains the effects of any immigrant by reason of any claim for board or lodging after he has been tendered the sum of five dollars or such less sum as is actually due for the board or lodging of such immigrant, shall incur a penalty not exceeding twenty-five dollars and not less than five dollars, over and above the value of the effects so detained, and he shall also be liable to restore such effects.

Penalty on inn-keeper for detaining immigrant's effects after tender.

2. In the event of such unlawful detention, the effects so detained may be searched for and recovered under search warrant as in the case of stolen goods.

Search for effects.

RULES, FORMS AND NOTICES.

73. In addition to the forms set out in the schedule to this Act the Superintendent of Immigration, under direction or with the consent of the Minister, shall prescribe, formulate and issue such rules, notices, forms of reports and manifests, and other forms as are deemed necessary from time to time in connection with regulations made under this Act or for the use and guidance of officers under this Act, or of transportation companies and agents thereof, and masters of vessels and immigrants.

Superintendent of Immigration to prescribe forms.

UNIFORMS.

74. The Superintendent of Immigration shall, under the direction or with the consent of the Minister, prescribe and contract for suitable uniforms and insignia for the various officers on duty at ports of entry, and the same shall be supplied to such officers, and one-third of the cost thereof shall be chargeable to such officers, or in the case of officers having their uniforms made to order a proportionate sum shall be paid to them on account thereof.

Uniforms for immigration officers.

75. All officers while on duty at ports of entry, or on duty elsewhere inspecting immigrants or passengers, or acting on a Board of Inquiry, or on duty in connection with the deportation of any person under this Act, shall wear the uniform prescribed for him, unless otherwise directed by the Superintendent of Immigration.

Officers to wear uniform when on duty.

PROSECUTIONS AND PROCEDURE.

76. Any officer may institute summary proceedings before any police magistrate, recorder or justice of the peace against any transportation company or director, official or employee thereof charged with an offence against this Act, at the place where such offence was committed, or at the place where such company has an office or place of business in Canada, or where such person then is.

Prosecutions.

- Costs. 2. Such police magistrate, recorder or justice of the peace may, in addition to any fine or penalty imposed, award costs against any such company or person as in ordinary cases of summary proceedings, and in default of payment thereof may award imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, to terminate on payment of the fine or penalty and costs incurred, and may, in his discretion, award any part of such fine or penalty, when recovered, to the person aggrieved by or through the act or neglect of such company or person.
- Imprisonment. Award of penalty. Application of fines and penalties. 3. Subject to such award to a person aggrieved all fines and penalties recovered under this Act shall be paid to the Minister of Finance and shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.
- Lien on property of transportation companies. 4. Every duty and every fine or penalty imposed under authority of this Act upon a transportation company, or upon any director, official or employee thereof, shall until payment thereof be a lien upon any and all property of such company in Canada, and may be enforced and collected by the seizure and sale of all or any such property under the warrant or process of the magistrate or court before whom it has been sued for, and shall be preferred to all other liens or hypothecations except wages.
- Liability of directors and officials. 5. Every duty imposed under authority of this Act upon a transportation company shall be a duty devolving upon every director, official or employee thereof, and every duty imposed upon the master of a vessel shall be a duty devolving upon the owner thereof.
- Owners of vessels. Imprisonment not a discharge of lien. 6. Imprisonment of a master or owner of any vessel, or of any official or employee of any transportation company, for any offence against this Act, shall not discharge the ship or other property of such company from the lien attached thereto by this Act.
- Convictions not to be quashed for want of form. 77. No conviction or proceeding under this Act shall be quashed for want of form, nor, unless the penalty imposed is one hundred dollars or over, be removed by appeal or certiorari or otherwise into any superior court.
- Warrants of commitment. 2. No warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the person has been convicted, and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain such warrant.
- Security in case of appeal. 3. In case of removal by appeal or certiorari or otherwise of any conviction or proceeding under this Act into any superior court, security shall be given to the extent of one hundred dollars for the costs of such removal proceedings to such superior court.
- General penalty. 78. Every person who violates any provision of this Act, or of any order in council, proclamation or regulation thereunder in respect of which violation no other penalty is provided by this Act, shall incur a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars.

APPLICATION TO CHINESE.

- Application of Act to Chinese. 79. All provisions of this Act not repugnant to the provisions of The Chinese Immigration Act shall apply as well to persons of Chinese origin as to other persons.

EXPENSES OF ADMINISTRATION.

- Payment of cost of administering Act. 80. All expenses incurred in administering this Act and carrying out the provisions thereof, and of affording help and advice to immigrants, and aiding, visiting and relieving destitute immigrants, procuring medical assistance and otherwise attending to the objects of immigration, shall be paid out of any moneys granted by Parliament for any such purpose and under such regulations or under such orders in council, if any, as are made for the distribution and application of such moneys.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

81. The Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, make such orders and regulations, not inconsistent with this Act, as are considered necessary or expedient for enforcing the provisions of this Act according to the true intent and meaning thereof. Power to make further regulations.

REPEAL.

82. The following Acts are repealed: Chapter 93 of the Revised Statutes, 1906; chapter 19 of the statutes of 1907; and chapter 33 of the statutes of 1908. Acts repealed.

APPENDIX G.

REGULATION AND ORDERS IN COUNCIL, LAW OF 1910.

REGULATION.

The following Regulation was promulgated by the Superintendent of Immigration, May 6, 1910—

No immigrant shall be treated for any of the diseases specified or referred to in subsection (b) of Section Three of the Immigration Act unless it appears to the satisfaction of the Canadian Immigration Medical Inspector conducting the medical examination that such immigrant was free from disease when leaving his or her home to commence the journey to Canada, and that any disease which the immigrant has at time of arrival in Canada has been contracted or developed during the journey, and that it can be completely and permanently cured within a reasonably short space of time; and further, that no cost shall be incurred by the Department for such treatment.

ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

The following orders in council have been promulgated under the Canadian immigration act of May 4, 1910:

I.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Monday, the 9th day of May, 1910.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

His Excellency in Council is pleased, in virtue of the provisions of Section 37 of the Immigration Act of 9 and 10 Edward VII, to make and doth hereby make the following Regulations:—

1. No immigrant, male or female, other than a member of a family provided for under the following regulations shall be permitted to enter Canada between the first day of March and the thirty-first day of October both days inclusive, unless he or she have in actual and personal possession at the time of arrival, money, belonging absolutely to such immigrant, to the amount of at least $25.00 in addition to a ticket or such sum of money as will purchase a ticket or transport for such immigrant to his or her destination in Canada.

2. If an immigrant so intending to enter Canada is the head of a family and is accompanied by his or her family or any members thereof, the foregoing regulations shall not apply to such family or the members thereof, but the said immigrant head of family shall have in his or her possession, in addition to the said sum of money and means of transport hereinbefore required, a further sum of money, belonging absolutely to such immigrant, equivalent to $25.00 for each member of the said family of the age of eighteen years or upwards, and $12.50 for each member of said family of the age of five years or upwards and under the age of eighteen years, and in addition tickets or a sum of money equivalent to the cost of transport for all the said members of the family to their place of destination in Canada.

3. Every such immigrant, seeking to enter Canada, between the first day of November and the last day of February both inclusive, shall be subject to the foregoing regulations, with the substitution of $50.00 for $25.00 and $25.00 for $12.50, wherever the said sums of $25.00 and $12.50 are mentioned in the said regulations.

4. It shall be the duty of the immigration officers at the various places or ports of entry or landing in Canada to see that the foregoing regulations are complied with. Provided, however, that the immigration agent may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, exempt any immigrant from the operation of the foregoing regulations if it is shown to his satisfaction that:

(a) The immigrant, if a male, is going to assured employment at farm work, and has the means of reaching the place of such employment; or

(b) That the immigrant, if a female, is going to assured employment at domestic service, and has the means of reaching the place of such employment; or

(c) That the immigrant, whether male or female, is of one of the following descriptions, and is going to reside with a relative of one of the following descriptions, who is able and willing to support such immigrant and has the means of reaching the place of residence of such relative:

- (1) Wife going to husband.
- (2) Child going to parent.
- (3) Brother or sister going to brother.
- (4) Minor going to married or independent sister.
- (5) Parent going to son or daughter.

These regulations shall not apply to immigrants belonging to any Asiatic race.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

II.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Monday, the 9th day of May, 1910.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

His Excellency, in virtue of the provisions of section 37 of the Immigration Act, Statutes of Canada, 9 and 10 Edward VII, and by and with the advice of the King's Privy Council for Canada, is pleased to make and doth hereby make the following regulation:—

No immigrant shall be permitted to enter Canada if he or she, being a subject or citizen of any country which issues a passport or penal certificate or both to persons emigrating therefrom, fails to produce such passport or penal certificate or both upon demand by the immigration officer in charge, and whether coming to Canada directly or indirectly from any such country.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

III.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Monday, the 9th day of May, 1910.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

His Excellency in Council is pleased, under the authority of section 37 of the Immigration Act of 9 and 10 Edward VII, to make and doth hereby make the following regulation:—

No immigrant of Asiatic origin shall be permitted to enter Canada unless in actual and personal possession in his or her own right of two hundred dollars, unless such person is a native or subject of an Asiatic country in regard to which special statutory regulations are in force or with which the Government of Canada has made a special treaty, agreement or convention.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

IV.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,
Monday, the 9th day of May, 1910.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

His Excellency in Council is pleased, under the authority of subsection 1 of section 38 of the Immigration Act of 9 and 10 Edward VII, to make and doth hereby make the following regulation:—

From and after the date hereof the landing in Canada shall be and the same is hereby prohibited of any immigrants who have come to Canada otherwise than by continuous journey from the country of which they are natives or citizens, and upon through tickets purchased in that country or purchased or prepaid in Canada.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

V.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,

Monday, the 9th day of May, 1910.

Present: His Excellency in Council.

Whereas by section 71 of the Immigration Act, 9 and 10 Edward VII, it is provided as follows:—

71. Every inn-keeper or boarding house keeper in any city, town, village or place in Canada designated by any Order in Council, who receives into his house as a boarder or lodger any immigrant within three months after his arrival in Canada, shall cause to be kept conspicuously posted in the public rooms and passages of his house, and printed upon his business cards, a list of the prices which will be charged to immigrants per day and per week for board and lodging, or both, and also the prices for separate meals, which cards shall also contain the name of the keeper of such house, together with the name of the street in which it is situate, and its number in such street.

2. No such innkeeper or boarding-house keeper shall have any lien on the effects of such immigrant for any amount claimed for such boarding or lodging for any sum exceeding five dollars.

And whereas it is considered expedient to bring this section into force in certain places, therefore his excellency in council is pleased to designate and doth hereby designate, for the purpose of the said section 71, the cities of Ottawa and Toronto, in the Province of Ontario; the cities of Quebec and Montreal, in the Province of Quebec; the city of Halifax, in the Province of Nova Scotia; the city of St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick; the city of Winnipeg in the Province of Manitoba; and the cities of Vancouver, Victoria and Prince Rupert, in the Province of British Columbia, as cities in which every keeper of a tavern, hotel, or boarding house therein who receives into his house as a boarder or lodger any immigrant within three months after his arrival in Canada, shall be subject to the requirements and the provisions of the said section.

(Sgd.)

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

THE UNITED STATES IMMIGRATION LAW.

[Act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat., pt. 1, p. 898).]

AN ACT To regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid a tax of four dollars for every alien entering the United States. The said tax shall be paid to the collector of customs of the port or customs district to which said alien shall come, or, if there be no collector at such port or district, then to the collector nearest thereto, by the master, agent, owner, or consignee of the vessel, transportation line, or other conveyance or vehicle bringing such alien to the United States. The money thus collected, together with all fines and rentals collected under the laws regulating the immigration of aliens into the United States, shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, and shall constitute a permanent appropriation to be called the "immigrant fund," to be used under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to defray the expense of regulating the immigration of aliens into the United States under said laws, including the contract labor laws, the cost of reports of decisions of the Federal courts, and digest thereof, for the use of the Commissioner-General of Immigration, and the salaries and expenses of all officers, clerks, and employees appointed to enforce said laws. The tax imposed by this section shall be a lien upon the vessel or other vehicle of carriage or transportation bringing such aliens to the United States, and shall be a debt in favor of the United States against the owner or owners of such vessel or other vehicle, and the payment of such tax may be enforced by any legal or equitable remedy. That the said tax shall not be levied upon aliens who shall enter the United States after an uninterrupted residence of at least one year, immediately preceding such entrance, in the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, the Republic of Cuba, or the Republic of Mexico, nor upon otherwise admissible residents of any possession of the United States, nor upon aliens in transit through the United States, nor upon aliens who have been lawfully admitted to the United States and who later shall go in transit from one part of the United States to another through foreign contiguous territory: Provided, That the Commissioner-General of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, by agreement with transportation lines, as provided in section thirty-two of this Act, may arrange in some other manner for the payment of the tax imposed by this section upon any or all aliens seeking admission from foreign contiguous territory: Provided further, That if in any fiscal year the amount of money collected under the provisions of this section shall exceed two million five hundred thousand dollars, the excess above that amount shall not be added to the "immigrant fund:" Provided further, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to aliens arriving in Guam, Porto Rico, or Hawaii; but if any such alien, not having become a citizen of the United States, shall later arrive at any port or place of the United States on the North American Continent the provisions of this section shall to such final destination; whether the alien has paid his own passage or whether it has been paid by any other person or by any corporation, society, municipality, or government, and if so, by whom; whether in possession of fifty dollars, and if less, how much; whether going to join a relative or friend, and if so, what relative or friend, and his or her name and complete address; whether ever before in the United States, and if so, when and where; whether ever in prison or almshouse or an institution or hospital for the care and treatment of the insane or supported by charity; whether a polygamist; whether an anarchist; whether coming by reason of any offer, solicitation, promise, or agreement, express or implied, to perform labor in the United States, and what is the alien's condition of health, mental and physical, and whether deformed or crippled, and if so, for how long and from what cause; that it shall further be the duty of the master or commanding officer of every vessel taking alien passengers out of the United States, from any port thereof, to file before departure therefrom with the collector of customs of such port a complete list of all such alien passengers taken on board. Such list shall contain the name, age, sex, nationality, residence in the United States, occupation, and the time of last arrival of every such alien in the United States, and no master of any such vessel shall be granted clearance papers for his vessel until he has deposited such list or lists with the collector of customs at the port of departure and made oath that they are full and complete as to the name and other information herein required concerning each alien taken on board his vessel; and any neglect or omission to comply with the requirements of this section shall be punishable as provided in section fifteen of this Act. That the collector of customs with whom any such list has been deposited in accordance with the provisions of this section, shall promptly notify the Commissioner-General of Immigration that such list has been deposited with him as provided, and shall make such further disposition thereof as may be required by regulations to be issued by the Commissioner-General of Immigration with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor: Provided, That in the case of vessels making regular trips to ports of the United States the Commissioner-General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, may, when expedient, arrange for the delivery of such lists of outgoing aliens at a later date: Provided further, That it shall be the duty of the master or commanding officer of any vessel sailing from ports in the Philippine Islands, Guam, Porto Rico, or Hawaii to any port of the United States on the North American Continent to deliver to the immigration officers at the port of arrival lists or manifests made at the time and place of embarkation, giving the names of all aliens on board said vessel.

SEC. 13. That all aliens arriving by water at the ports of the United States shall be listed in convenient groups, and no one list or manifest shall contain more than thirty names. To each alien or head of a family shall be given a ticket on which shall be written his name, a number or letter designating the list in which his name, and so forth, is contained, and his number on said list, for convenience of identification on arrival. Each list or manifest shall be verified by the signature and the oath or affirmation of the master or commanding officer, or the first or second below him in command, taken before an immigration officer at the port of arrival, to the effect that he has caused the surgeon of said vessel sailing therewith to make a physical and oral examination of each of said aliens, and that from the report of said surgeon and from his own investigation he believes that no one of said aliens is an idiot, or imbecile, or a feeble-minded person, or insane person, or a pauper, or is likely to become a public charge, or is afflicted with tuberculosis or with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease, or is a person who has been convicted of, or who admits having committed a felony or other crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, or is a polygamist or one

Manifests:	admitting belief in the practice of polygamy, or an anarchist, or under promise or agreement, express or implied, to perform labor in the United States, or a prostitute, or a woman or girl coming to the United States for the purpose of prostitution, or for any other immoral purpose, and that also, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, the information in said lists or manifests concerning each of said aliens named therein is correct and true in every respect.
To be signed and sworn to by surgeon;	SEC. 14. That the surgeon of said vessel sailing therewith shall also sign each of said lists or manifests and make oath or affirmation in like manner before an immigration officer at the port of arrival, stating his professional experience and qualifications as a physician and surgeon, and that he has made a personal examination of each of said aliens named therein, and that the said list or manifest, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, is full, correct, and true in all particulars relative to the mental and physical condition of said aliens. If no surgeon sails with any vessel bringing aliens the mental and physical examinations and the verifications of the lists or manifests shall be made by some competent surgeon employed by the owners of the said vessel.
Incoming passengers—	SEC. 15. That in the case of the failure of the master or commanding officer of any vessel to deliver to the said immigration officers lists or manifests of all aliens on board thereof, as required in sections twelve, thirteen, and fourteen of this Act, he shall pay to the collector of customs at the port of arrival the sum of ten dollars for each alien concerning whom the above information is not contained in any list as aforesaid: Provided , That in the case of failure without good cause to deliver the list of passengers required by section twelve of this Act from the master or commanding officer of every vessel taking alien passengers out of the United States, the penalty shall be paid to the collector of customs at the port of departure and shall be a fine of ten dollars for each alien not included in said list; but in no case shall the aggregate fine exceed one hundred dollars.
Penalty of $10;
Outgoing passengers—
Penalty of $10;
Aggregate fines not to exceed $100.
Inspection:	SEC. 16. That upon the receipt by the immigration officers at any port of arrival of the lists or manifests of incoming aliens provided for in sections twelve, thirteen, and fourteen of this Act, it shall be the duty of said officers to go or to send competent assistants to the vessel to which said lists or manifests refer, and there inspect all such aliens, or said immigration officers may order a temporary removal of such aliens for examination at a designated time and place, but such temporary removal shall not be considered a landing, nor shall it relieve the transportation lines, masters, agents, owners, or consignees of the vessel upon which said aliens are brought to any port of the United States from any of the obligations which, in case such aliens remain on board, would, under the provisions of this Act, bind the said transportation lines, masters, agents, owners, or consignees: Provided , That where a suitable building is used for the detention and examination of aliens the immigration officials shall there take charge of such aliens, and the transportation companies, masters, agents, owners, and consignees of the vessels bringing such aliens shall be relieved of the responsibility for their detention thereafter until the return of such aliens to their care.

- Deportation: SEC. 20. That any alien who shall enter the United States in violation of law, and such as become public charges from causes existing prior to landing, shall, upon the warrant of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, be taken into custody and deported to the country whence he came at any time within three years after the date of his entry into the United States. Such deportation, including one-half of the entire cost of removal to the port of deportation, shall be at the expense of the contractor, procurer, or other person by whom the alien was unlawfully induced to enter the United States, or, if that can not be done, then the cost of removal to the port of deportation shall be at the expense of the "immigrant fund" provided for in section one of this Act, and the deportation from such port shall be at the expense of the owner or owners of such vessel or transportation line by which such aliens respectively came: Provided, That pending the final disposal of the case of any alien so taken into custody he may be released under a bond in the penalty of not less than five hundred dollars with security approved by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, conditioned that such alien shall be produced when required for a hearing or hearings in regard to the charge upon which he has been taken into custody, and for deportation if he shall be found to be unlawfully within the United States.

- Deportation: SEC. 21. That in case the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall be satisfied that an alien has been found in the United States in violation of this Act, or that an alien is subject to deportation under the provisions of this Act or of any law of the United States, he shall cause such alien within the period of three years after landing or entry therein to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came, as provided by section twenty of this Act, and a failure or refusal on the part of the masters, agents, owners, or consignees of vessels to comply with the order of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to take on board, guard safely, and return to the country whence he came any alien ordered to be deported under the provisions of this Act shall be punished by the imposition of the penalties prescribed in section nineteen of this Act: Provided, That when in the opinion of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor the mental or physical condition of such alien is such as to require personal care and attendance, he may employ a suitable person for that purpose, who shall accompany such alien to his or her final destination, and the expense incident to such service shall be defrayed in like manner.
- Penalty against vessels for refusal to deport on warrant.
- Attendants for deported persons.
- Commissioner-General: SEC. 22. That the Commissioner-General of Immigration, in addition to such other duties as may by law be assigned to him, shall, under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, have charge of the administration of all laws relating to the immigration of aliens into the United States, and shall have the control, direction, and supervision of all officers, clerks, and employees appointed thereunder. He shall establish such rules and regulations, prescribe such forms of bond, reports, entries, and other papers, and shall issue from time to time such instructions, not inconsistent with law, as he shall deem best calculated for carrying out the provisions of this Act and for protecting the United States and aliens migrating thereto from fraud and loss, and shall have authority to enter into contract for the support and relief of such aliens as may fall into distress or need public aid; all under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. And it shall be the duty of the Commissioner-General of Immigration to detail officers of the immigration service from time to time as may be necessary, in his judgment, to secure information as to the number of aliens detained in the penal, reformatory, and charitable institutions (public and private) of the several States and Territories, the District of Columbia, and other territory of the United States and to inform the officers of such institutions of the provisions of law in relation to the deportation of aliens who have become pub-

SEC. 23. That the duties of the commissioners of immigration shall be of an administrative character, to be prescribed in detail by regulations prepared, under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

SEC. 24. That immigrant inspectors and other immigration officers, clerks, and employees, shall hereafter be appointed and their compensation fixed and raised or decreased from time to time by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, upon the recommendation of the Commissioner-General of Immigration and in accordance with the provisions of the civil-service Act of January sixteenth, eighteen hundred and eighty-three: Provided, That said Secretary, in the enforcement of that portion of this Act which excludes contract laborers, may employ, without reference to the provisions of the said civil service Act, or to the various Acts relative to the compilation of the official register, such persons as he may deem advisable and from time to time fix, raise, or decrease their compensation. He may draw from the "immigrant fund" annually fifty thousand dollars or as much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended for the salaries and expenses of persons so employed and for expenses incident to such employment; and the accounting officers of the Treasury shall pass to the credit of the proper disbursing officer expenditures from said sum without itemized account whenever the Secretary of Commerce and Labor certifies that an itemized account would not be for the best interests of the Government: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter the mode of appointing commissioners of immigration at the several ports of the United States as provided by the sundry civil appropriation Act approved August eighteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, or the official status of such commissioners heretofore appointed. Immigration officers shall have power to administer oaths and to take and consider evidence touching the right of any alien to enter the United States, and, where such action may be necessary, to make a written record of such evidence; and any person to whom such an oath has been administered under the provisions of this Act who shall knowingly or wilfully give false evidence or swear to any false statement in any way affecting or in relation to the right of any alien to admission to the United States shall be deemed guilty of perjury and be punished as provided by section fifty-three hundred and ninety-two, United States Revised Statutes. The decision of any such officer, if favorable to the admission of any alien, shall be subject to challenge by any other immigration officer, and such challenge shall operate to take the alien whose right to land is so challenged before a board of special inquiry for its investigation. Every alien who may not appear to the examining immigrant inspector at the port of arrival to be clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to land shall be detained for examination in relation thereto by a board of special inquiry.

SEC. 25. That such boards of special inquiry shall be appointed by the commissioner of immigration at the various ports of arrival as may be necessary for the prompt determination of all cases of immigrants detained at such ports under the provisions of law. Each board shall consist of three members, who shall be selected from such of the immigrant officials in the service as the Commissioner-General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, shall from time to time designate as qualified to serve on such boards: Provided, That at ports where there are fewer than three immigrant inspectors, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, upon the recommendation of the

- SEC. 30. That all exclusive privileges of exchanging money, transporting passengers or baggage, or keeping eating houses, and all other like privileges in connection with any United States immigrant station, shall be disposed of after public competition, subject to such conditions and limitations as the Commissioner-General of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, may prescribe: Provided, That no intoxicating liquors shall be sold in any such immigrant station; that all receipts accruing from the disposal of such exclusive privileges as herein provided shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the "immigrant fund" provided for in section one of this Act.

SEC. 31. That for the preservation of the peace and in order that arrests may be made for crimes under the laws of the States and Territories of the United States where the various immigrant stations are located, the officers in charge of such stations, as occasion may require, shall admit therein the proper state and municipal officers charged with the enforcement of such laws, and for the purpose of this section the jurisdiction of such officers and of the local courts shall extend over such stations.

SEC. 32. That the Commissioner-General of Immigration, under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, shall prescribe rules for the entry and inspection of aliens along the borders of Canada and Mexico, so as not to unnecessarily delay, impede, or annoy passengers in ordinary travel between the United States and said countries, and shall have power to enter into contracts with transportation lines for the said purpose.

SEC. 33. That for the purpose of this Act the term "United States" as used in the title as well as in the various sections of this Act shall be construed to mean the United States and any waters, territory, or other place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, except the Isthmian Canal Zone: Provided, That if any alien shall leave the Canal Zone and attempt to enter any other place under the jurisdiction of the United States, nothing contained in this Act shall be construed as permitting him to enter under any other conditions than those applicable to all aliens.

SEC. 34. That the Commissioner-General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, may appoint a commissioner of immigration to discharge at New Orleans, Louisiana, the duties now required of other commissioners of immigration at their respective posts.

SEC. 35. That the deportation of aliens arrested within the United States after entry and found to be illegally therein, provided for in this Act, shall be to the trans-Atlantic or trans-Pacific ports from which said aliens embarked for the United States; or, if such embarkation was for foreign contiguous territory, to the foreign port at which said aliens embarked for such territory.

SEC. 36. That all aliens who shall enter the United States except at the seaports thereof, or at such place or places as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may from time to time designate, shall be adjudged to have entered the country unlawfully and shall be deported as provided by sections twenty and twenty-one of this Act: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall affect the power conferred by section thirty-two of this Act upon the Commissioner-General of Immigration to prescribe rules for the entry and inspection of aliens along the borders of Canada and Mexico.

SEC. 37. That whenever an alien shall have taken up his permanent residence in this country, and shall have filed his declaration of intention to become a citizen, and thereafter shall send for his wife or minor children to join him, if said wife or any of said children shall be found to be affected with any contagious disorder, such wife or children shall be held, under such regulations as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall prescribe, until it shall be determined whether the disorder will be easily curable, or whether they can be permitted to land without danger to other persons; and they shall not be either admitted or deported until such facts have been ascertained; and if it shall be determined that the disorder is easily curable or that they can be permitted to land without danger to other persons, they shall, if otherwise admissible, thereupon be admitted.

sources useful information regarding the resources, products, and physical characteristics of each State and Territory, and shall publish such information in different languages and distribute the publications among all admitted aliens who may ask for such information at the immigrant stations of the United States and to such other persons as may desire the same. When any State or Territory appoints and maintains an agent or agents to represent it at any of the immigrant stations of the United States, such agents shall, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner-General of Immigration, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, have access to aliens who have been admitted to the United States for the purpose of presenting, either orally or in writing, the special inducements offered by such State or Territory to aliens to settle therein. While on duty at any immigrant station such agents shall be subject to all the regulations prescribed by the Commissioner-General of Immigration, who, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, may, for violation of any such regulations, deny to the agent guilty of such violation any of the privileges herein granted.

SEC. 41. That nothing in this Act shall be construed to apply to accredited officials of foreign governments nor to their suites, families, or guests.

SEC. 42. It shall not be lawful for the master of a steamship or other vessel whereon immigrant passengers, or passengers other than cabin passengers, have been taken at any port or place in a foreign country or dominion (ports and places in foreign territory contiguous to the United States excepted) to bring such vessel and passengers to any port or place in the United States unless the compartments, spaces, and accommodations hereinafter mentioned have been provided, allotted, maintained, and used for and by such passengers during the entire voyage; that is to say, in a steamship, the compartments or spaces, unobstructed by cargo, stores, or goods, shall be of sufficient dimensions to allow for each and every passenger carried or brought therein eighteen clear superficial feet of deck allotted to his or her use, if the compartment or space is located on the main deck or on the first deck next below the main deck of the vessel, and twenty clear superficial feet of deck allotted to his or her use for each passenger carried or brought therein if the compartment or space is located on the second deck below the main deck of the vessel: Provided, That if the height between the lower passenger deck and the deck immediately above it is less than seven feet, or if the apertures (exclusive of the side scuttles) through which light and air are admitted together to the lower passenger deck are less in size than in the proportion of three square feet to every one hundred superficial feet of that deck, the ship shall not carry a greater number of passengers on that deck than in the proportion of one passenger to every thirty clear superficial feet thereof. It shall not be lawful to carry or bring passengers on any deck other than the decks above mentioned. And in sailing vessels, such passengers shall be carried or brought only on the deck (not being an orlop deck) that is next below the main deck of the vessel, or in a poop or deck house constructed on the main deck; and the compartment or space, unobstructed by cargo, stores, or goods, shall be of sufficient dimensions to allow one hundred and ten cubic feet for each and every passenger brought therein. And such passenger shall not be carried or brought in any between decks, nor in any compartment, space, poop, or deck house, the height of which from deck to deck is less than six feet. In computing the number of such passengers carried or brought in any vessel, children under one year of age shall not be included, and two children between one and eight years of age shall be counted as one passenger; and any person brought in any such vessel who shall have been, during the voyage, taken from any other vessel wrecked or in distress on the high seas, or have been picked up at sea from any boat, raft, or otherwise, shall not be included in such computation. THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN AUSTRALIA.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN AUSTRALIA.

There has been a steady immigration movement to the British colonies of Australasia since the earliest days of their settlement. Previous to the formation of the Australian Commonwealth in 1901, however, the extent of immigration from overseas is not definitely shown, because the various colonies did not distinguish between transoceanic immigration and the constant movement of population that went on among the colonies. It is well known, however, that in every period by far the greater part of the immigration to the Australian states from across the seas has come from the United Kingdom and the white population of the Commonwealth is fundamentally British.

AUSTRALIA'S IMMIGRATION POLICY.

Since the federation in 1901 immigration has become a national question and its regulation has been within the Commonwealth. The immigration policy of the Commonwealth, however, is similar to that pursued by the separate colonies, which in general was the exclusion of Asiatics and Pacific Islanders, and the preservation and development of a "white Australia."

The immigration problem in Australia is that of a vast undeveloped land, the only districts which are at all well populated with whites being a fringe of country along the coast.

With an area of 2,974,581 square miles Australia had in 1907 a population of only 4,197,022, while the continental United States with a land area of 2,974,159 square miles, had in 1900 a population of about 76,000,000. The total area and the number of acres alienated, in process of alienation, leased or licensed, and unoccupied, in each Australian state, in 1907, are shown in the following table:

It will be noted that of the total area of the Commonwealth 52.7 per cent remained unoccupied in 1907. Only 4.7 per cent has been entirely alienated, 1.9 per cent being in process of alienation, and 40.7 per cent being leased or licensed. The largest proportion of land entirely alienated is in Victoria; Tasmania and New South Wales also have relatively large proportions of area entirely alienated. On the other hand, in Victoria less than 1 per cent has been alienated, while 72.3 per cent remains unoccupied. Both in South Australia and Tasmania considerably more than one-half the total area of the State remained unoccupied in 1907.

In order to induce settlers to take up unoccupied land the government allows them to purchase the freehold by the payment of small half-yearly installments upon liberal terms. Advances for improving their holdings are also made in all the States except Tasmania. Even with such liberal inducements, however, the movement of settlers from overseas is not great, and some of the States continue to induce immigration by paying the passage wholly or in part of persons desiring to settle on the land or to engage in farm or dairy work, or work of a similar nature. Such assistance is also afforded to domestic servants and to other persons who can satisfy the agents-general of the Commonwealth in London that they would make desirable settlers for Australia.^a

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

The policy of assisting immigration has been vigorously pursued by the several colonies of Australasia for a greater part of the time since the early days of their settlement. This practice was practically discontinued in Victoria in 1873, in South Australia in 1886, and in Tasmania in 1891. In 1887 it was discontinued in New South Wales, but with certain reservations which enabled that colony to assist a limited number of immigrants during the period 1888 to 1899. From 1900 to 1905 no assistance was given by that colony, but the practice was resumed in 1906. Queensland and Western Australia have continually pursued the policy of assisted immigration.

The following figures show the total number of assisted immigrants that have come to the various States now comprising the Commonwealth of Australia up to the end of 1907:^b

New South Wales	215,497
Victoria	140,229
Queensland	171,473
South Australia	95,348
West Australia	9,452
Tasmania	21,699
Total	653,698

The immigrants mostly desired by Australia are agricultural settlers with small capital who will devote themselves to the development of the agricultural area, and also suitable immigrants with health and willingness to work on the land.^a

POPULATION AND EARLIER IMMIGRATION.

In 1788, 1,030 persons settled in New South Wales, the parent colony of Australia, and since that beginning immigration has been a very important factor in the growth of the population. This growth is shown in the following table, which gives the combined population, exclusive of aborigines, of the Australian colonies now forming the Commonwealth at various census periods:

Year.	Population.	Year.	Population.
1788-----	1, 030	1851-----	403, 889
1801-----	6, 508	1861-----	1, 153, 973
1811-----	11, 525	1871-----	1, 668, 377
1821-----	35, 610	1881-----	2, 252, 617
1831-----	79, 306	1891-----	3, 183, 237
1841-----	206, 095	1901-----	3, 773, 248

The high rate of increase between 1831 and 1841 was due to the policy of state-aided immigration, which was vigorously pursued during that period. The rapid growth between 1851 and 1861 was largely due to the discovery of gold in Victoria and the consequent heavy immigration to that colony. Later the large gains in the populations of Queensland and Western Australia were also mainly the results of the large immigration attendant upon gold discoveries. In the following table is shown the population at the specified census periods of each colony now composing the Commonwealth:

Previous to the formation of the Commonwealth in 1901, the immigration records of the several colonies were kept separately, and while statistics are available to show the extent of the movement, in some of the colonies account was not taken of the destination of emigrants nor of the country of last residence of immigrants. It is impossible, therefore, to determine exactly what proportion of the immigration was intercolonial and what proportion was from over the sea. However, the table next submitted shows for various periods the increase of population in the several colonies by reason of the excess of immigration over emigration.

b Denotes excess of emigrants.

During the 11 years ending 1901 there was a decided decline in "net immigration." Western Australia alone seemed to continue to attract a large number of immigrants, the excess arrivals in that State from 1891 to 1900 being 118,592.

The figures show very clearly the attractive force of the gold discoveries: In 1851-1860 the rush to Victoria; in 1861-1870 the current turned to New Zealand; in 1881-1890 to Queensland; and in 1891-1900 to western Australia.

IMMIGRATION SINCE 1901.

As in colonial times, recent immigration to Australia is mainly British, 82.1 per cent of the 391,207 persons included in the foregoing table being of that nationality. Moreover, British immigration to Australia increased rapidly during the period considered. In 1902 it was 35,330, and in 1908 it had increased to 64,374. No other nationality comes in any considerable numbers; the French being second with 10,976 during the seven years considered; the Germans third with 9,098. Among the Asiatic immigrants the Chinese led with 8,767, during the period under consideration.

Except in the case of the British, data are not available to show the geographical sources of the immigration above considered. Of the British, however, only a little more than one-fourth are recorded as coming to Australia from the United Kingdom; the remainder being from New Zealand and other British colonies.

The following table shows the total number of immigrants who arrived from all British countries from 1904 to 1907, inclusive, and the per cent that were from the United Kingdom, New Zealand, and other British possessions:

The British character of Australian immigration is due partly to the efforts that have been made in British countries. At one period New South Wales voted £5,000 for the dispatch to Great Britain and Ireland of agents for the purpose of inducing immigration,^a and also during the later periods of assisted immigration, the propaganda was confined to British sources.^b

Another factor in determining the character of Australian immigration has been the great distance and the cost of transportation. These have deterred the peoples of southern and eastern Europe, who are in general less able to afford the trip.

THE BRITISH ELEMENT IN AUSTRALIA'S POPULATION.

The following table, based on the Australian census of 1901, shows how fundamentally British is the population of the commonwealth:

TABLE 6.—The population of Australia, exclusive of aborigines, by birthplace, 1901.

Africa.....	2,869	.1	Total.....	3,773,801	100.0

Of the 77.1 per cent of the population classed as native-born it is probable that nearly all were the descendants of British immigrants. Undoubtedly this is also true of those born in New Zealand. Consequently when these elements in the population are consolidated with persons born in the United Kingdom it will be seen that the population of the Commonwealth is essentially British by birth or descent.

IMMIGRATION BY SEX.

The following shows the immigration to Australia, by sex, for each calendar year from 1904 to 1906, inclusive:

In each year for which data are given more than two-thirds of the immigrants to Australia were males, which suggests that the movement to that country is largely one of individuals rather than the families. Among immigrants of white nationalities the proportion of females is somewhat larger than among Asiatics and Pacific Islanders, as is shown by the table next submitted.

THE AUSTRALIAN IMMIGRATION LAW.

Prior to the federation the several colonies of Australia had restricted the immigration of Chinese and other Asiatic races and had also put a bar upon the admission of other persons who were undesirable for medical or economic reasons. Upon the formation of the Commonwealth, in 1901, the power to control immigration and emigration was conceded to the Parliament of the Commonwealth.^a

Acting under this authority, Parliament passed the immigration restriction act of 1901, which superseded the immigration laws of the several colonies. In 1905 the contract immigrants act was substituted for a clause of the act of 1901 which restricted the immigration of persons under contract, and the act was otherwise amended. The law of 1901 as amended by the two acts of 1905 is printed in full in the appendix of this report.^b

Under the Australian law the following classes of persons are prohibited from entering the Commonwealth:

(1) Any person who fails to pass the dictation test; that is, who fails to write out not less than 50 words of a language prescribed by the regulation, when dictated to him by an officer administering the act.

^a Commonwealth Constitution Act, Chap. I, Pt. V, sec. 51, xxvii and xxviii.^b Pp. 177-183.

- (2) Any person likely to become a charge upon the public.
- (3) Any idiot or insane person.
- (4) Any person suffering from an infectious or contagious disease of a loathsome or dangerous character.
- (5) Any person who has been convicted of an offense, other than a mere political offense, and has been sentenced to imprisonment for one year or longer and has not served his sentence or received a pardon.
- (6) Any prostitute or person living on the prostitution of others.

The act of 1901 provided that the dictation test should be in a European language. The act of 1905 provided that a European language should continue to be used until regulations be passed prescribing the languages for the test. Such regulations have not been passed, so a European language continues to be employed. This test, however, has never been imposed upon European immigrants.^a

The contract immigrants act, 1905, defines a contract immigrant as an immigrant to Australia under a contract or agreement to perform manual labor in the Commonwealth. No such immigrant will be admitted to Australia except upon the following conditions: The contract must be in writing and must be made by or on behalf of a resident of Australia. Its terms must be approved by the minister of external affairs. It must not be made in contemplation of or with a view of affecting an industrial dispute. The minister must be satisfied that there exists a difficulty of obtaining a worker of equal skill and ability in the Commonwealth. This last provision does not apply to contract immigrants who are British subjects, either born in the United Kingdom or descended from persons born there. The terms of the contract must offer to the immigrants advantages equal to those of local workers. This act does not apply to domestic servants and personal attendants accompanying their employers to Australia.^b

Nine hundred and seventy-two contract immigrants, distributed among the following nationalities, were admitted to Australia in 1907: British, 731; Spaniards, 107; Scandinavians, 80; Austrians, 41; Germans, 13.

Excepting 47 of the British and the 13 Germans, these were all agricultural laborers brought in for the Queensland sugar industry, 571 being contracted for by the Queensland Government and 341 by the Colonial Sugar Refining Co.^c

Although the immigration law of the Commonwealth embodies a plan of rigid exclusion, it bears heavily only on a small per cent of immigrants. There are two clauses in it which permit discrimination in favor of immigrants who are desired. Section 3 provides that "any person possessed of a certificate of exemption in force for the time being in the form in the schedule, signed by the minister or by any officer appointed under this act, whether within or without the Commonwealth," may enter Australia even though he is one of the prohibited classes. This certificate shall be good only for a specified period. No statistics of the number of exemption certificates issued are available.

Even greater elasticity is given to the law by section 4 A, which allows the minister for external affairs to make an arrangement with the Government of any country regulating the admission to the Commonwealth of the subjects or citizens of that country whereby the subjects and citizens of that country shall not be required to pass the dictation test. The arrangement must be sanctioned by resolutions of both Houses of the Parliament.

PENALTY FOR EVASION OF THE LAW.

Section 5 of the immigration restriction act provides as follows:

1. Any immigrant who evades an officer or who enters the Commonwealth at any place where no officer is stationed may, if at any time thereafter he is found within the Commonwealth, be required to pass the dictation test, and shall if he fails to do so be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act.

2. Any immigrant may at any time within one year after he has entered the Commonwealth be required to pass the dictation test, and shall if he fails to do so be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act.

A prohibited immigrant offending against the act is liable to "imprisonment for not more than six months, and in addition to or substitution for such imprisonment shall be liable pursuant to any order of the minister to be deported from the Commonwealth."

REJECTION OF ARRIVING IMMIGRANTS.

The following table shows the number of immigrants admitted with or without the educational test and the number to whom admission was refused:

TABLE 10.—Persons admitted or refused admission to the Australian Commonwealth, 1902 to 1908, inclusive.

[Compiled from the Official Year Book of the Commonwealth of Australia, No. 2, 1901-1908, p. 1106.]

1908.....	1	75,660	108

It will be seen that the proportion of immigrants to Australia to whom admission is refused is relatively small. The table next submitted compares the number of immigrants admitted and rejected in 1908 under the Australian, Canadian, and United States laws.

TABLE 11.—Total number of immigrants admitted and rejected under the Australian, Canadian, and United States laws in the year 1908.

[Compiled from the Official Year Book of the Commonwealth of Australia, reports of Superintendent of Immigration, Canada, and reports of United States Commissioner General of Immigration.]

United States (year ending June 30).....	782,820	10,907	1 to 72

The comparatively small proportion of immigrants refused admission to Australia is due to the fact that such a large part of those who seek admission are British, and to immigrants of that nationality there is practically no bar, the immigrants to whom admission is refused being almost entirely Asiatics. The following figures for recent years indicate the nationality of the rejected immigrants and the grounds upon which the rejections were based.

^a Not including 53 excluded in 1906, for whom data are not available.

It will be noted that the immigrants rejected were nearly all of the Asiatic races, and that of these all but two were refused admission because of failure to pass the dictation test, the exceptions noted being Hindus, both of whom were turned back because of the likelihood that they would become public charges. The latter cause also accounts for the rejection of nearly all the Europeans who failed to gain admission. During the whole period considered five persons were rejected for insanity, one for criminality, and none for disease.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

During the last 50 years the most vital phase of the Australian immigration situation has been the exclusion of Asiatics. The colonies have fought this immigration by entrance fees and fines, limitations of the number of passengers to a given tonnage of ships, educational tests, and absolute prohibition.

There were Chinese in Queensland as early as 1848, but the number of persons of that race in all Australia was inconsiderable up to the rush to the Victorian gold fields in 1851. The influx of Chinese at that time was the immediate cause of the adoption of a vigorous exclusion by all the colonies. In 1855 Victoria enacted a law providing that no ship should bring more than 1 Chinese to each 10 tons of its tonnage and that a shipmaster must deposit £10 with the collector of customs for each Chinaman brought.^a South Australia, New South Wales, and Queensland soon afterwards enacted similar legislation. Under these laws the exclusion of the Chinese became so effective that after several years they were repealed in Victoria and New South Wales.

In 1880, however, the Chinese movement again became the subject of even more drastic legislation. New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, and Tasmania^b decreed that every Chinaman must pay an entrance tax of £10 and that a ship might bring only 1 person of that race to every 100 tons of its tonnage. Queensland in 1884 raised the entrance fee to £30 and allowed 1 to 50 tons.

These measures were only temporarily effective, and another crisis was reached in 1888, in which year the colonies conferred and agreed to adopt more stringent measures. New South Wales fixed the entrance fee for Chinese at £100 each and permitted ships to bring only 1 Chinese to each 300 tons of the tonnage. The restrictions in the other colonies were made almost equally severe. Following these enactments there was a rapid decrease in the number of Chinese immigrants. At the same time there were small beginnings of other Asiatic immigration which was considered equally as undesirable as the Chinese. The result was that in the few years preceding the federation the colonies adopted the policy of imposing upon all immigrants an educational test in a European language. This measure proved an effectual barrier to the Asiatics, and the same provision was embodied in the Commonwealth immigration restriction act of 1901, which, slightly amended, is still operative.

THE PACIFIC ISLANDERS.

Kanakas, black laborers, recruited from the Pacific Islands, were introduced in Queensland about 1865 for the cultivation of sugar cane.^a As early as 1868 an attempt was made to prohibit the traffic in this class of labor, but the only measures enacted were to regulate the recruitment of laborers and contracts with them. The traffic grew and the greater part of the field work on the sugar plantations of that colony was done by the Kanakas.

In 1892 the Pacific laborers' (extension) bill was passed in Queensland, and in spite of the protests of white laborers Polynesian Kanaka laborers were again employed for the cultivation of sugar cane.^b

In 1901 the Commonwealth Parliament passed the Pacific Island laborers' act, which aimed to abolish the employment of Kanakas. It provided that only a limited number of Pacific Islanders should be admitted to the Commonwealth before March 31, 1904, and that after that date none would be permitted to enter. No contract could be made with those already in the Commonwealth after December 31, 1906. Any Pacific Islander found in the Commonwealth after the latter date would be liable to deportation.^c

To protect the sugar planters who had been the employers of this labor a tariff was put on foreign sugar; while the sugar-bounty act of 1905 and the bounties act of 1908 provided that a bounty should be paid on sugar grown or produced by white labor.^d

THE AUSTRALIAN IMMIGRATION LAW.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION ACT, 1901 (No. 17 of 1901), AS AMENDED BY THE IMMIGRATION RESTRICTION AMENDMENT ACT, 1905 (No. 17 of 1905)^a AND BY THE CONTRACT IMMIGRANTS ACT, 1905 (No. 19 of 1905.)^b

AN ACT To place certain restrictions on immigration and to provide for the removal from the Commonwealth of prohibited immigrants.

Be it enacted by the King's Most Excellent Majesty, the Senate, and the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Australia, as follows:

1. This act may be cited as the immigration restriction act, 1901.^c

2. In this act, unless the contrary intention appears, "officer" means any officer appointed under this act, or any officer of customs, or any member of the police force of a State; "the minister" means the minister for external affairs.

3. The immigration into the Commonwealth of the persons described in any of the following paragraphs of this section (hereinafter called "prohibited immigrants") is prohibited, namely: (a) any person who fails to pass the dictation test—that is to say, who, when an officer dictates to him not less than 50 words in any prescribed^d language, fails to write them out in that language in the presence of the officer; no regulation prescribing any language or languages shall have any force until it has been laid before both Houses of the Parliament for thirty days and, before or after the expiration of such thirty days, both Houses of the Parliament, by a resolution, of which notice has been given, have agreed to such regulation; (b) any person likely, in the opinion of the minister or of an officer, to become a charge upon the public or upon any public or charitable institution; (c) any idiot or insane person; (d) any person suffering from an infectious or contagious disease of a loathsome or dangerous character; (e) any person who has been convicted of an offense, not being a mere political offense, and has been sentenced to imprisonment for one year or longer therefor, and has not served his sentence or received a pardon; (f) any prostitute or person living on the prostitution of others.

* * * * *

But the following are excepted: (h) Any person possessed of a certificate of exemption in force for the time being in the form in the schedule, signed by the minister or by any officer appointed under this act whether within or with-

^a Assented to Dec. 21, 1905; proclaimed to commence Feb. 1, 1906.

^b Assented to Dec. 21, 1905.

^c The immigration restriction act, 1901, and the immigration restriction act, 1905, may together be cited as the immigration restriction acts, 1901-1905. (See act No. 17, 1905, sec. 1.)

^d Section 5 of the immigration restriction amendment act, 1905, is as follows: "5. Until a regulation prescribing any language or languages under section three of the principal act as amended by this act shall come into force, any language authorized by section three of the principal act before the commencement of this act shall be deemed to be a prescribed language within the meaning of that section as so amended."

out the Commonwealth; (i) members of the King's regular land or sea forces; (j) the master and crew of any public vessel of any Government; (k) the master and crew of any other vessel landing during the stay of the vessel in any port in the Commonwealth: Provided, That the master shall, upon being so required by any officer and before being permitted to clear out from or leave the port, muster the crew in the presence of an officer; and if it is found that any person, who, according to the vessel's articles was one of the crew when she arrived at the port, and who would, in the opinion of the officer, be a prohibited immigrant but for the exception contained in this paragraph, is not present, then such person shall not be excepted by this paragraph, and until the contrary is proved shall be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant and to have entered the Commonwealth contrary to this act; (l) any person duly accredited to the Government of the Commonwealth by the Imperial or any other Government or sent by any Government on any special mission.

4. A certificate of exemption shall be expressed to be in force for a specified period only, and may at any time be canceled by the minister by writing under his hand.

Upon the expiration or cancellation of any such certificate, the person named therein shall, if found within the Commonwealth, be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act, and may be deported from the Commonwealth pursuant to any order of the minister: Provided, That in the case of a person entering the Commonwealth from any vessel under this section no penalty shall attach to the vessel or its master owners agents or charterers.

4a. (1) If the minister notifies by notice in the Gazette that an arrangement has been made with the Government of any country regulating the admission to the Commonwealth of the subjects or citizens of that country, the subjects or citizens of that country shall not, while the notice continues to have effect, be required to pass the dictation test.

(2) The minister shall not issue any such notice until the arrangement has been sanctioned by resolution of both Houses of the Parliament.

(3) Any such notice shall cease to have effect upon the minister notifying, by notice in the Gazette, that it is canceled.

4b. (1) Any person who has resided in Australia for a period or periods in the aggregate of not less than five years, and who is about to depart from the Commonwealth, may in manner prescribed apply to an officer authorized in that behalf for a certificate in the prescribed form excepting him, if he returns to the Commonwealth within the period limited in the certificate, from the provisions of paragraph (a) of section three of this act.

(2) The officer may in his discretion give the certificate on payment of the prescribed fee, or, without assigning any reason, withhold it.

(3) Where the minister is satisfied that a certificate given under this section has been obtained by any untrue statement of fact or intention, the minister may revoke the certificate, which shall thereupon be taken to be of no effect, and shall on demand be delivered up to the minister.

(4) A person to whom a certificate under this section has been issued (which certificate has not been revoked) shall not, on his return to the Commonwealth within the time limited by the certificate, if he produces and delivers the certificate to an officer, be required to pass the dictation test.

5. (1) Any immigrant who evades an officer or who enters the Commonwealth at any place where no officer is stationed may if at any time thereafter he is found within the Commonwealth be required to pass the dictation test, and shall if he fails to do so be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act.

(2) Any immigrant may at any time within one year after he has entered the Commonwealth be required to pass the dictation test, and shall if he fails to do so be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act.

(3) In any prosecution under the last preceding subsection, the averment of the prosecutor contained in the information that the defendant has entered the Commonwealth within one year before his failing to pass the dictation test shall be deemed to be proved in the absence of proof to the contrary.

6. Any prohibited immigrant within the meaning of paragraph (a) only of section three may if thought fit by an officer be allowed to enter the Commonwealth or to remain within the Commonwealth upon the following conditions: (a) He shall on entering the Commonwealth or on failing to pass the dictation test, deposit with an officer the sum of one hundred pounds; (b) he shall within thirty days after depositing such sum obtain from the minister a certificate of exemption in the form of the schedule, or depart from the Commonwealth, and thereupon the deposit shall be returned; but otherwise the deposit or any part thereof may be forfeited and he shall be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act: Provided, That in the case of a person entering the Commonwealth from any vessel under this section no penalty shall attach to the vessel or its master owners agents or charterers.

7. Every prohibited immigrant entering or found within the Commonwealth in contravention or evasion of this act shall be guilty of an offense against this act, and shall be liable upon summary conviction to imprisonment for not more than six months, and in addition to or substitution for such imprisonment shall be liable pursuant to any order of the minister to be deported from the Commonwealth: Provided, That the imprisonment shall cease for the purpose of deportation, or if the offender finds two approved sureties each in the sum of fifty pounds for his leaving the Commonwealth within one month.

8. Any person who is not a British subject either natural born or naturalized under a law of the United Kingdom or of the Commonwealth or of a State, and who is convicted of any crime of violence against the person, shall be liable, upon the expiration of any term of imprisonment imposed on him therefor, to be required to pass the dictation test, and if he fails to do so shall be deemed to be a prohibited immigrant and shall be deported from the Commonwealth pursuant to any order of the minister.

9. The master, owners, agents, and charterers of any vessel from which any prohibited immigrant enters the Commonwealth contrary to this act shall be guilty of an offense against this act, and be jointly and severally liable on summary conviction to a penalty of one hundred pounds for each prohibited immigrant so entering the Commonwealth.

10. (1) The minister, or any collector of customs specially empowered by him, may by writing under his hand authorize any officer to detain any vessel from which any prohibited immigrant has, in the opinion of the officer, entered the Commonwealth contrary to this act; and the vessel may then be detained either at the place where she is found, or at any place to which the minister or collector may order her to be brought. The minister or such collector shall forthwith give notice to the owner or agent of the vessel of the detention of such vessel.

(2) For the purposes of the detention and other lawful dealing with the vessel the officer so authorized shall be entitled to obtain such writ of assistance or other aid as is provided under any law relating to the customs with respect to the seizure of vessels or goods.

(3) The detention shall be for safe custody only, and shall cease if a bond with two sufficient sureties to the satisfaction of the minister or the collector be given by the master, owners, agents, or charterers of the vessel for the payment of any penalty which may be adjudged under this act to be paid for the offense or default.

(4) If default is made in payment of any such penalty, the officer may seize the vessel; and the like proceedings shall thereupon be taken for forfeiting and condemning the vessel as in the case of a vessel seized for breach of any law relating to the customs, and the vessel shall be sold.

(5) The proceeds of the sale shall be applied first in payment of the penalty and of all costs incurred in and about the sale and the proceedings leading thereto, and the balance shall be paid to the owners or other persons lawfully entitled to the vessel before condemnation and sale.

12. (1) Any person who in any way willfully assists any other person to contravene or attempt to contravene any of the provisions of this act, or makes or authorizes any contract or agreement the performance of which would be a contravention of this act, shall be guilty of an offense against this act.

(2) Any person who makes or authorizes such contract or agreement shall be liable to the Commonwealth for any expense incurred by the Commonwealth in respect of any immigrant prohibited by reason of the contract or agreement.

13. Any person who is willfully instrumental in bringing or attempting to bring into the Commonwealth any prohibited immigrant within the meaning of paragraphs (b), (c), (d), or (f) of section three of this act contrary to this act shall, in addition to any other penalty, be liable to the Commonwealth for any expense in respect of the maintenance of the prohibited immigrant whilst within the Commonwealth.

13a. The master, owners, agents, or charterers of a vessel in which a prohibited immigrant, or a person who under section three or section five of this act becomes a prohibited immigrant, comes to the Commonwealth, shall, on being required in writing by any collector of customs so to do, without charge to the Commonwealth, provide a passage for the prohibited immigrant to the place whence he came, and shall also be liable to pay to the Commonwealth for the State a fair sum to recoup the State for the cost of keeping and maintaining the prohibited immigrant while awaiting his deportation from Australia.

13b. The master of a vessel on which a prohibited immigrant, or a person reasonably supposed to be a prohibited immigrant, is, may, with the necessary assistance, prevent the prohibited immigrant from entering the Commonwealth from the vessel in contravention of this act.

14. Every member of the police force of any State and every officer may with any necessary assistance prevent any prohibited immigrant, or person reasonably supposed to be a prohibited immigrant, from entering the Commonwealth, and may take all legal proceedings necessary for the enforcement of this act.

14a. Every member of the police force of any State and every officer may, without warrant, arrest any person reasonably supposed to be a prohibited immigrant offending against this act, and no person shall resist or prevent such arrest.

15. Subject to any act relating to the public service, the Governor General may appoint officers for carrying out this act, and may prescribe their duties.

16. (1) The Governor General may make regulations for carrying out this act and for empowering officers to determine whether any person is a prohibited immigrant.

(2) All such regulations shall be notified in the Gazette, and shall thereupon have the force of law.

(3) All such regulations shall be laid before both Houses of the Parliament within thirty days after the making thereof if the Parliament be then sitting, and if not then within thirty days after the next meeting of the Parliament.

17. The minister shall cause to be made annually a return which shall be laid before Parliament, showing the number of persons refused admission into the Commonwealth on the ground of being prohibited immigrants, the nations to which they belong and whence they came, and the grounds on which admission was refused; the number of persons who passed the test prescribed by paragraph (a) of section three, the nations to which they belong and whence they came; the number of persons admitted to the Commonwealth without being asked to pass the test, the nations to which they belong, and whence they came.

18. Where no higher penalty is expressly imposed, a person guilty of any offense against this act, or against any regulation made thereunder, shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds, and in default of payment to imprisonment with or without hard labor for any period not exceeding three months.

19. This act shall not apply to the immigration of Pacific Island laborers under the provisions of the Pacific Island laborers acts, 1880-1892, of the State of Queensland.

STATUTORY RULES.

1906.—No. 70.

Provisional regulation under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905.

I, the Governor General in and over the Commonwealth of Australia, acting with the advice of the Federal Executive Council, do hereby certify that, on account of urgency, the following regulation under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905, should come into immediate operation, and make such regulation come into operation as a provisional regulation from this date.

Dated this 8th day of August, 1906.

NORTHCOTE, Governor General.

By his excellency's command:

ALFRED DEAKIN.

Regulation under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905.

5a. Where any person, not being a British subject either natural born or naturalized under a law of the United Kingdom or of the Commonwealth or a State, has been convicted of any crime of violence against the person, and has, upon the expiration of any term of imprisonment imposed on him therefor, been required to pass the dictation test, and has failed to do so, an officer may detain him in such custody for such time as is, under all the circumstances, reasonably necessary to enable a deportation order to be made by the minister.

Where the minister has made an order for the deportation of any such person, an officer may detain him in such custody and for such time as is reasonably necessary to enable him to be deported pursuant to the order, and may for that purpose convey him to any place of shipment and on board any ship.

1906.—No. 10.

Provisional regulations under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905.

I, the Governor General in and over the Commonwealth of Australia, acting with the advice of the Federal Executive Council, do hereby certify that, on account of urgency, the following regulations under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905, should come into immediate operation, and make the Regulations to come into operation as Provisional Regulations forthwith after the commencement of the immigration restriction amendment act 1905.

Dated this 23d day of January, 1906.

By his excellency's command.

ALFRED DEAKIN.

Regulations under the immigration restriction acts, 1901–1905.

DEFINITION.

1. In these regulations "the act" means the immigration restriction act, 1901, as amended by the immigration restriction amendment act, 1905, and by the contract immigrants act, 1905.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

2. Except as provided in section 6 of the act, an officer shall not allow a prohibited immigrant to enter the Commonwealth.

3. For the purpose of medical examination, an officer may detain for a period not exceeding 24 hours, in such place and in such custody as he thinks fit, any person whom he reasonably supposes to be a prohibited immigrant within the meaning of paragraph (c) or (d) of section 3 of the act.

4. Any officer may, at any time, enter into or upon any vessel, other than a public vessel of any government, and may search, or cause a search to be made in every part of the vessel for the purpose of determining whether any prohibited immigrant is on board.

5. Any person who claims to be excepted from the act, as being (a) possessed of a certificate of exemption, or (b) duly accredited to the Government of the Commonwealth, by the Imperial or any other Government, or sent by any government on any special mission, shall, when required by an officer, produce the certificate or his credentials.

CERTIFICATE EXCEPTING FROM THE DICTATION TEST.

6. (1) Any person desiring a certificate under section 4 (b) of the act may make application therefor in the form in schedule A to the collector of customs for the State in which he resides or to an officer authorized in that behalf by the minister.

(2) The applicant shall furnish to the collector, with his application, certificates of character by at least two reputable citizens of the Commonwealth and four photographs of himself—two of his full face and two of his profile.

(3) The certificate may be in the form of schedule B.

(4) The certificate shall be in duplicate, and one part shall be delivered to the applicant and the other part shall be retained.

(5) The fee for issue of the certificate shall be £2.

OFFENSES.

7. Every person shall answer all questions which are put to him by an officer, and which are, in the opinion of the officer, necessary for determining whether he or any other person is a prohibited immigrant.

8. Any person who refuses to answer any question lawfully put to him by an officer, or who knowingly makes a false statement, either in answer to any such question or in applying to an officer for any certificate under the act or these regulations, or in connection with any such certificate, shall be guilty of an offense against these regulations.

9. Any person who, with intent to contravene or evade the act or these regulations, or without just cause or excuse, transfers or delivers up to any other person any certificate or credentials, referred to in the act or in these regulations, shall be guilty of an offense against these regulations.

10. Any person who, with intent to contravene or evade the act or these regulations, or without just cause or excuse, has in his possession (a) a certificate of exemption which does not belong to him, or (b) any certificate or credentials referred to in the act or in these regulations, and not belonging to him or (c) any such certificate or credential which is forced or false shall be guilty of an offense against these regulations.

DUTIES OF MASTERS.

11. The master of every vessel, other than a public vessel of any government, arriving at any port in the Commonwealth from parts beyond the Commonwealth, with any passengers on board for that port shall, before making entry at the customs, deliver to an officer a list of all such passengers, specifying, to the best of his knowledge, the name, the nationality and race, the place of shipment, and the calling and occupation of each such passenger; and he shall, if required by the officer, certify in writing that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, none of the passengers in the list (except as therein stated) is an idiot or insane person, or a person suffering from an infectious or contagious disease of a loathsome or dangerous character, or a person likely, by reason of any physical disability, to become a charge upon the public or upon any public or charitable institution.

12. The master of every vessel, other than a public vessel of any government, arriving at a port in the Commonwealth from parts beyond the Commonwealth, shall, if required by an officer, deliver to an officer a list showing the number and names of the crew and their nationality and race, and produce the vessel's articles.

13. The master of every vessel shall afford to an officer every facility for performing his duties, and shall answer all questions which are put to him by the officer, and which are, in the opinion of the officer, necessary for determining whether any person is a prohibited immigrant. And no person shall obstruct or hinder an officer in the carrying out of the act or of these regulations.

14. The approved sureties mentioned in section 7 of the act shall be such sureties as are approved by the minister or by a State collector of customs. The sureties shall enter into a bond, conditioned to become void if the immigrant leaves the Commonwealth within one month.

REPEAL.

15. All regulations made under the immigration restriction act 1901 before the making of these regulations are hereby repealed, save as to anything lawfully done or any right, privilege, obligation, liability, or penalty acquired, accrued, or incurred thereunder.

NOTE.—A person guilty of any offense against these regulations is, under section 18 of the act, liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding £50, and in default of payment imprisonment with or without hard labor for any period not exceeding three months.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN NEW ZEALAND.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN NEW ZEALAND.

The immigration situation in the British Dominion of New Zealand is similar to that in the Commonwealth of Australia, the problem of the colony being the encouragement of British immigration and the exclusion of the Chinese. The area of New Zealand, including the Cook and other outlying islands, is estimated at 104,751 square miles, or a little more than the area of the State of Colorado.

New Zealand was established as a colony in 1840 and in 1907 it was proclaimed as a dominion. In earlier years the population growth was slow, and in 1861 there were less than 100,000, exclusive of aborigines, in the islands. Subsequent to the latter year there was a rapid increase in this class of the population, as will be seen from the following figures:

1871.....	256,393
1881.....	489,933
1891.....	626,658
1901.....	772,719
1906.....	888,578

CHARACTER OF THE POPULATION.

The population, exclusive of aborigines, by nativity, in 1906, was as follows:

TABLE 1.—Population of New Zealand, exclusive of aborigines, by birthplace, April 29, 1906.

[From the New Zealand Official Year Book, 1907, p. 146.]

Birthplace.	Number.	Per cent.
Australasia.....	653,783	73.61
United Kingdom.....	208,931	23.53
Other British possessions.....	4,280	.48
Other foreign countries.....	19,867	2.24
At sea.....	1,245	.14
Not specified.....	472	.01
Total.....	888,578	100.00

It will be noted from the above table that 97.62 per cent of the population of New Zealand was born in Australasia, the United Kingdom, or other British possessions. As the native-born people of Australasia are for the most part of British descent, it appears the population of the colony is essentially British. The Maoris, or original inhabitants of New Zealand, numbered only 47,731 in 1906, and the Chinese only 2,570 in the same year. Consequently New Zealand is essentially a "white man's country."

SOURCES AND EXTENT OF IMMIGRATION.

As in the case of other parts of Australasia, immigration has been largely responsible for the growth of population in New Zealand, the "net immigration" or excess of immigration over emigration, by decades, from 1851 to 1900 being as follows:

1851-1860	44,742
1861-1870	118,637
1871-1880	132,976
1881-1890	9,453
1901-1910	27,211

Immigration to New Zealand in recent years has been largely a movement of population from Australia, although a considerable number from the United Kingdom have been admitted annually. This movement is shown by the following table:

TABLE 2.—Immigration to New Zealand, 1901 to 1908, inclusive, by country of last permanent residence.

[Compiled from Official Year Books of New Zealand.]

1906	39,233	28,699	8,293	2,241	73.2	21.1	5.7
1907	36,108	26,916	7,449	1,743	74.5	20.6	4.8
1908	44,970	31,769	11,348	1,853	70.6	25.2	4.1
Total (1901-1908)	271,890	206,963	46,881	18,046	76.1	17.2	6.6

It will be noted that more than three-fourths of the immigration to New Zealand from 1901 to 1908, inclusive, was from Australia, 17.2 per cent was from the United Kingdom, and only 6.6 per cent from all other countries.

However, although the great preponderance of immigration to New Zealand is from Australia, the following table, which shows the birthplace of recent immigrants, suggests that many of them originally came from the United Kingdom.

TABLE 3.—Immigration to New Zealand, by birthplace of the immigrants, 1901 to 1906.

SEX AND AGE OF IMMIGRANTS.

During the period of 1901-1908 the immigration movement to New Zealand was composed of 180,470 males and 91,420 females, indicating that the movement was largely one of individuals rather than families.

The fact that the movement to New Zealand is not largely one of families is further shown by the small proportion of children among the immigrants, as will be noted from the following table:

ORIENTAL IMMIGRATION.

In common with Australia, New Zealand has experienced an oriental immigration problem, and in 1907 the Dominion Parliament passed an act which required "that any Chinese proposing to land in the Dominion shall be able to read a printed passage of not less than 100 words in the English language." This provision was incorporated in the immigration restriction act of 1908.^a

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

The policy of assisted immigration was discontinued by the Government of New Zealand in 1890, and since that time there has been no free immigration. However, the Government still continued to arrange with the shipping companies for reduced fares for desirable settlers.^b The following statement shows the extent to which immigration was assisted prior to 1891.

THE NEW ZEALAND IMMIGRATION LAW.

In 1899 New Zealand enacted a law designed to exclude undesirable immigrants. This act provides that it shall be unlawful for any persons included within the meaning of "prohibited immigrant" to land in the territory of New Zealand.

PROHIBITED IMMIGRANTS.

A "prohibited immigrant" is defined to be any idiot or insane person; any person afflicted with a dangerous or loathsome contagious disease; any person arriving in New Zealand within two years after the termination of any imprisonment for an offense, not of a political nature, punishable in New Zealand by death or imprisonment for two or more years, and to whom no pardon was granted; or any person unwilling or unable and failing to write and sign in any European language an application for admission in the prescribed form, provided he shall have the right of final appeal to a magistrate.

Exceptions.

Any person not diseased, criminal, insane, or an idiot, appearing to be a "prohibited immigrant," may lawfully land on condition that he deposit in advance, with an agent of the government, the sum of £100 sterling, and obtain, within fourteen days, an official certificate of exemption from the prohibition of the law. Upon specific compliance with these regulations the deposit will be refunded, but in the absence of such compliance the deposit will be forfeited to the State as payment of the fine for landing as a prohibited immigrant.

Penalty.

Every "prohibited immigrant" unlawfully landing in New Zealand is liable to a penalty of £100, removal from the State, and detention in prison or custody, not less than six months, pending removal from the country. Upon payment of £100 or upon securing two sureties of £50 each that he will leave the State within one month, he will be released from detention.

Liability.

If "prohibited immigrants" are transhipped from one vessel to another for the purpose of bringing them to New Zealand, both vessels will be liable to the prescribed penalty, and all vessels may be detained in port until the penalties imposed are paid.

Rights after conviction.

Upon conviction of any prohibited immigrant, and after a fine has been imposed, the court may order the time of payment extended to a period of three months, with sufficient security.

Removal.

For the removal of such immigrant a contract may be made for passage to the nearest port to his own country or to his original home; and, if destitute, sufficient money shall be supplied him for maintenance during thirty days after the end of his voyage.

THIRD PERSONS.

Every person is liable to a penalty of not over £100 who wilfully assists in any evasion or contravention of the law. And in addition to other penalties any person wilfully assisting an idiot or insane person to enter New Zealand shall be liable for the cost of maintenance of such person while in the State.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN ARGENTINA.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN ARGENTINA.

The Argentine Republic has an area of 1,135,840 English square miles, or about 726,940,000 acres. According to the last census, in 1895, the population was a little less than 4,000,000. It was estimated to have increased to 6,000,000 in 1907, giving an average population on that basis of a little more than five persons to the square mile. The arable land area is estimated to be 300,000,000 acres, of which 10,000,000 require irrigation. The total acreage under cultivation in 1907 was 36,000,000 acres, or about one-eighth of the cultivable area.

IMMIGRATION POLICY.

Argentina is rich in natural resources. In addition to its vast grain-producing possibilities, much of it is finely adapted to grazing, while its immense timber and mineral resources as yet have hardly been touched. The development of this vast, rich, sparsely settled country is waiting largely upon an adequate supply of settlers and laborers, and to this end the Government uses every means to foster foreign immigration, particularly that of farmers and farm laborers.

The encouragement of immigration is authorized in the constitution of the Republic, which also guarantees to aliens the same civil rights enjoyed by citizens. The articles of the constitution relating to these matters are in part as follows:

ART. 20. Aliens shall enjoy in the territory of the nation the same civil rights as its citizens. They have full liberty to engage in all kinds of business, industrial, commercial, or professional, and are authorized to own, hold, and possess real estate, acquire it by purchase, inheritance, or any other legal means, and to sell or convey it to others. They are also allowed to navigate the rivers of the Republic, and along the coasts of the same, and to practice freely their own religion. They can dispose by will of the property of which they are possessed, provided that the disposition which they make is not in contravention of the law of the country; and contract valid marriages, subject to the same proviso. They are entitled to obtain naturalization in the Republic if they so desire, upon application for that purpose and sufficient proof that they have resided continuously within the limits of the country for the period of two years; but this period may be shortened at the discretion of the proper authorities, at the request of the applicant, and upon proof that he rendered some service to the Republic.

ART. 25. The Federal Government shall promote and encourage European immigration. It shall have no power to restrict, to limit, or to burden with taxes or charges of any kind, the afflux to the territory of the Republic of any foreigners coming to it to cultivate its soil, to improve its industries, or to introduce and teach the sciences and arts.

Naturalized citizens are exempted from military service during the 10 years subsequent to their admission to citizenship. But this privilege may be waived by them if they wish, and in that case they may be allowed to render this service.

NATIONALITY OF IMMIGRANTS TO ARGENTINA.

The transoceanic immigration movement to the Argentine Republic from 1863 to 1908, inclusive, and the immigration by way of Montevideo for the same period are shown by the following table:

^a The exact meaning of the word "nationality" is not stated in the reports. It appears to mean either the country to which the immigrant owes allegiance or the race or people from which the immigrant is descended. The statement is made that "nationality" does not mean "country of embarkation."

The per cent each nationality forms of the total "oversea" immigration is as follows:

EMIGRATION FROM ARGENTINA.

As in the case of the United States and other large immigrant-receiving nations, a considerable part of the immigration movement to Argentina is temporary. This fact is illustrated by the following table, which shows immigration to and emigration from the Republic from 1871 to 1908, inclusive:

a Excess of emigration over immigration.

Complete data relative to the nationality of persons emigrating from Argentina are not available, but official Italian statistics show that the return movement from the Plata to Italy from 1887 to 1903, inclusive, was as follows:

The Plata includes Uruguay, Paraguay, and Argentina, but the two former countries contribute so small a proportion of the total that the figures do not greatly exaggerate the number returning from Argentina:

THE ARGENTINE IMMIGRATION LAW.

The immigration and colonization law of the Argentine Republic which was enacted in 1876 provides for the encouragement of immigration through agents in Europe and America, and makes liberal provision for the reception, care, and maintenance of immigrants. It provides for a central bureau of immigration and commissions of immigration at the capital of each Province, at certain ports of arrival, and, if necessary, at any other place. The law also provides for the establishment of employment bureaus, which, under the direction of the bureau of immigration or the local commissions, shall assist immigrants to find work and act as their advisors in other matters.

Some of the principal sections of the law relating directly to immigrants and the methods of handling and assisting them are presented herewith.

Chapter 5, on immigrants, is as follows:

SEC. 12. Foreigners of both sexes, of good moral character and under the age of sixty years, whether day laborers, or capable of exercising a trade, or of working in an industrial establishment, farmers, or teachers, who come to the Republic for the purpose of settling on its soil, and have arrived either on board a sailing vessel or a steamer as a second or third class passenger, or have had their passage paid by the nation, by some one of the provinces, or by some private colonization board or association, shall be, for all the purposes of the present law, deemed to be immigrants.

SEC. 13. Those, however, who may be unwilling, for reasons of their own, to be considered as such immigrants, even if they shall have all the qualifications required by the preceding section, shall be permitted to set forth their wishes, either before starting in their voyage, by representing to the captain or master of the vessel, who shall be bound to make a record of it in his books, that they waive all their rights and privileges as immigrants, or after their arrival in the Argentine Republic by making a declaration to the same effect before the proper authorities. In both cases said passengers shall be deemed to be ordinary travelers.

This provision, nevertheless, shall not be applicable to those persons coming to the Republic, under proper contracts, to settle on its territory, whether in any colony or elsewhere.

SEC. 14. Every immigrant who gives sufficient evidence of his good moral character and shows his aptitude to engage in any industrial business, or in any trade or useful occupation, shall be entitled, upon his arrival in the country, to the following:

First. To be lodged and supported at the expense of the nation for the time set forth in sections 45, 46, and 47 of the present law (five days, to be counted from the date of landing, if the immigrant is in good health, and in case of illness which prevents his removal at the expiration of five days, as many days as the illness may last. But immigrants under contract shall have board and lodging gratuitously until sent to their destination).

Second. To be given occupation in any such branch of labor or industry existing in the country as he may wish to engage in.

Third. To be carried at the expense of the nation, to any place of the Republic in which he may wish to establish his domicile.

Fourth. To be allowed to introduce, free from duty, his wearing apparel, household furniture, agricultural implements, tools, instruments of his particular trade or art, and a fowling piece for each adult immigrant up to the amount fixed by the executive.

SEC. 15. The foregoing provisions shall be applicable, as far as possible, to the wives and children of the immigrants.

SEC. 16. The good moral conduct and industrial ability of the immigrant may be proved by certificates issued either by the Argentine consul or immigration agent at the place from which the immigrant comes, or by the local authorities of the same place. In the latter case the certificates must be authenticated either by the consul or the immigration agent.

SEC. 17. All immigrants, farmers, who come under contracts to settle on any of the colonies established in the Republic, and engage therein in agricultural pursuits, or who in the absence of such contracts are willing to go to the said colonies for the same purposes, shall be given the same special privileges and advantages in regard to the payment of passages, concessions of land, facilities for the cultivation of the lands, etc., as are granted under Chapter III, part second, of the present law.

Chapter 6 contains provisions calculated to insure the safety and comfort of the immigrants and to prevent abuses on the part of masters or captains of the ships.

Chapter 7 provides for national supervision of the landing of immigrants.

Chapter 8 is concerned with the lodging and board of immigrants, and provides as follows:

SEC. 45. The immigrants shall be entitled to proper decent boarding and lodging at the expense of the nation during the five days immediately following their landing.

SEC. 46. In case of grave disease, which rendered it impossible for the immigrant, at the expiration of the said five days, to move from that place, he shall be allowed to remain there, and the Government shall continue to attend to his lodging and support until he recovers.

SEC. 47. The foregoing provisions shall not be applicable to such immigrants as come to the country under contracts made and entered into between them and the nation to settle in the colonies, said immigrants being entitled to gratuitous boarding and lodging until they are sent to their places of destination.

Chapter 9 deals with securing occupation for immigrants and their transportation to the localities where they are to settle.

SEC. 51. Whenever an immigrant expresses his wish to reside in any province or colony of the Republic he shall immediately be transported free, together with his family and baggage, to the locality selected by him.

SEC. 52. If he has chosen to reside in any of the provinces, he shall be supported by the respective commissions of immigration until reaching the place of destination during 10 days. At the expiration of this time each person over 8 years shall pay half a dollar a day and each child under that age 25 cents, but in cases of grave sickness the State shall continue to pay as long as it lasts.

SEC. 53. If the immigrant has chosen to go to a colony, he shall be granted all the advantages to which colonists are entitled under the present law.

Chapter 10 provides for the creation of an "immigrant fund" consisting, first, of all moneys appropriated by Congress to encourage immigration; second, of all moneys collected through the office of lands and colonies; third, of all fines imposed for violations of the immigration law; fourth, of all moneys the immigrants themselves may pay under the provisions of this law.

LAW REGULATING COLONIZATION.

The second section of the law, containing seven chapters, is devoted to the subject of colonization.

Chapter 3 provides that in the establishment of colonies the first 100 colonists who are farmers and the heads of families shall be given gratuitously 100 hectares of land, or about 247 acres. The remaining rural lots shall be sold at the rate of $2 a hectare, to be paid in 10 installments, the first not payable until the end of the second year.

The sales may be limited to the fourth of one lot, and can never exceed four lots to one purchaser.

The office of lands and colonies shall advance the money necessary for the payment of the passage of the colonists from the place of embarkation to destination, also for their lodging, support, the animals which they may require for breeding or working purposes, as well as seeds and implements, all of this for one year at least. But the sums so advanced shall never exceed $1,000 per colonist, and shall be repaid to the Government in five installments, the first of which shall not be due until after the expiration of the third year.

The law further provides that lands may be reserved for private colonization companies; it being required that at least 40 agricultural families shall be brought in and settled upon the land within two years.

Each one of these families shall be the owner, either through donation or purchase, of at least 50 hectares of land, and are to be provided with proper lodgings, implements of labor, animals for working and breeding purposes, seeds, and board for at least one year, the actual value of which shall be paid back by them, with 20 per cent additional and interest at 10 per cent per annum, in easy installments, after the third year.

Chapter 5 empowers the executive by all possible means to encourage the development of agriculture, and make gratuitous concessions of lands to those colonists who have distinguished themselves by their steady work and exceptional industry. But no more than two lots shall be granted in this way to the same person.

Each colonist shall be entitled, within the first six years of his establishment in the country, to a reward of $10 for each 1,000 trees 2 years old which he has planted and has growing on his property.

The national colonies shall be exempt from direct taxation of all kinds during the first 10 years of their existence as colonies.

The agricultural implements, seeds, tools, furniture, and arms imported for the use of immigrants shall be introduced into the colonies free from duty.

Chapter 7 encourages colonization by granting gratuitous transportation of the colonists, by giving $200 for each 100 families settled in the province, and by other liberal measures.

It will be seen from the foregoing that it is a comparatively simple matter for immigrants to become land owners in the Republic. According to the census of 1895, out of a total of 180,000 farms in operation, 60 per cent were being cultivated by their owners, 30 per cent were being worked by tenants paying rent, and 8 per cent by persons working the land on shares. The tremendous growth of the area under cultivation has been due to the great increase in the immigration of agricultural peasants from Europe. During the years 1857-1905 the total immigration was 2,065,869, while for the year 1908 alone it was more than 250,000, largely from the south of Europe.

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

It is said that the national government has spent an annual average of a quarter of a million pesos since 1870 in the work of assisting immigrants. The amount and kind of assistance given to immigrants is shown in the table which follows.

The first column shows the number for each specified year who were given free landing; this means that the goods and belongings of themselves and their families were entered free of duty, and that the immigrants had no lighter or other landing charges to pay.

The second column shows the number who were lodged at public expense, and the third the number of those who were transported to the interior and placed in situations.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE LAW.

The following statement concerning the administration of the Argentina immigration law is taken from "A Sketch of the Argentine Republic as a Country for Immigration," prepared in 1904 by the department of agriculture of the Republic:

The immigration visit and its object.—Every vessel arriving in the country carrying immigrants, who, according to the law, are second or third class passengers, is visited and carefully inspected by a commission, composed of the immigrants' visitor, the sanitary doctor, and an official from the maritime prefecture, which verifies the hygienic and wholesome conditions of the vessel, the accommodation for transportation, food during the voyage, supply of medicines; if a doctor and apothecary are on board; if it carries or not an excess of passengers in relation to its tonnage; if the dimensions of the main and lower decks and berthing are in accordance with regulations; if there are a sufficient number of ventilators, fire pumps, and kitchen utensils; life buoys and lifeboats; if they carry persons suffering from contagious disease; if passengers have come on board in ports where any epidemic prevails; if it carries any inflammable or unhealthy articles amongst the cargo; and, finally, it receives any complaints on the part of the passengers as to bad treatment, together with the documents that the captain has to deliver respecting the knowledge of the immigration law, as also a statement of incidents occurring during the voyage, all of which is enforced for the benefit of the immigrants.

Reception.—The immigrants are minutely interrogated and classified in order to acquire a knowledge of their ability for labor and the intentions they have formed, then a list is made of those who abandon the benefits conferred by law, their documents being stamped "simple viajero" (ordinary passenger); other passports are classified and stamped "residente antiguo" (old resident).

The passports of the immigrants, who take advantage of the law, having been stamped by the visitor they are taken in hand by the employees of the immigrants' home named to receive them, who attend to them and direct them what to do, placing them in tramcars, which are sent down in anticipation, in which they are transported from the port to the home. The baggage is loaded on the trucks by porters from the home.

Free lodging.—On arrival at the home the immigrants are given entry and are noted on the registers, and further, are provided with a board and lodging ticket valid for five days, which term may be increased in case of sickness. The immigrants are conveniently lodged, the women and children in halls separated from those occupied by the men. The baggage is taken by the home porters to a deposit store where it is examined by the customs officers as a special service.

Free board.—The immigrants are rationed with food of the best quality, the quantities, which form the daily ration of an adult, being meat, 600 grams; bread, 500 grams; potatoes, carrots, or cabbage (alternately), 150 grams; rice, macaroni, or beans (alternately), 100 grams; sugar 25 and coffee 10 grams. The children are supplied with milk. The meals, prepared in good steam kitcheners, are served by waiters in a large dining hall.

Medical assistance.—In the infirmary attached to the home the sick are always carefully attended to; the young are vaccinated and also the adults who so desire. There are doctors, students, men and women nurses; a dispensary with an ample supply of medicine and disinfecting material.

The national labor bureau.—As soon as the immigrants arrive they are questioned as to the places to which they wish to go and they are offered by the labor bureau the situations which it is able to provide, according to the requests it may have received, the originals of which are filed, stating wages that can be paid and other conditions, all of which are carefully noted in special books kept for the purpose. Should it happen that for the moment no request is to hand for men of the trade of the immigrant desiring work the bureau itself will endeavor to procure for him, either by applying at the factories, companies, and works or, in default, telegraphing to the interior of the Republic. The immigrant who wishes to proceed to some point where there is no demand for men of his trade is duly notified of the fact by the bureau. No pressure is applied to the immigrant to induce him to proceed to such or such a place, but due regard is given to his wishes.

Free transport to the interior.—Immigrants for whom situations have been procured in the interior of the country, or who wish to join their families, are sent off by the expeditionary officials, whose duty is to have their baggage properly addressed, loaded up, to note the names of the immigrants on the list of the expedition, to provide them with the corresponding tickets for the journey, and to look after them generally until they are conveniently and fully installed on the train or river steamer.

Reception in the provinces or places of destination.—The immigrants who proceed to the Provinces or National Territories where work is to be procured for them are received from the train by the secretary of the auxiliary commission, lodged and boarded for ten days, at most, until they are provided with a place or leave for their ultimate destination. In case they have been sent up to be forwarded on by another railway, they are similarly attended to by that employee, in the same manner as in the federal capital from the moment that the train arrives until the instant in which the other that has to take him on leaves.

Postal and telegraphic.—In the immigrants' home there is an office for the dispatch of mails and telegrams in order to facilitate delivery of correspondence and also with the object that the general commissary and the national labor bureau may be enabled to transmit throughout the Republic the necessary orders and instructions for the proper carrying out of the service.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN BRAZIL.

THE IMMIGRATION SITUATION IN BRAZIL.

The Republic of the United States of Brazil has an area of 3,218,991 square miles, exceeding that of continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, by over 192,000 square miles. It lies almost wholly within the torrid zone, but its extensive mountain ranges and table-lands modify the climate to a marked extent. Its vast fertile plains yield all the products of the Tropics, and it has an immense wealth of natural resources. Its forests are as yet almost untouched; its enormous mineral wealth has hardly been tapped, while grazing and agriculture, the two industries to which it is perhaps best adapted, are still far behind their possible development.

In 1907 the population was estimated to be 19,910,646, or a little more than six persons per square mile, the density of the population being about one-fifth that of the United States.

IMMIGRATION POLICY.

Comparing the sparse population with the evident need of developing the resources of the country, it is readily understood why the Government should use every means to stimulate and encourage immigration. The Brazilian immigration law is most liberal in its provisions for immigrants. Besides giving them free passage, it promises to take care of them upon arrival at any Brazilian port, for a stated time, transport them to their destination, and to provide them with free tools and seeds, as well as medicine and care for their families. The ultimate aim of the Government is to build up a class of peasant proprietors, who shall at the same time be available for work on the great coffee plantations.

An attempt, or several attempts, to import Japanese agricultural colonists have not met with the expected success. It is said that the Japanese have too great a tendency to drift to the towns and cities to make them successful colonists.

This movement of the Government is in line with their general policy of establishing agricultural colonies in the endeavor to secure the development of these industries. Bureaus of immigration and colonization have been established, offering every guarantee to prospective settlers.

The question of immigration and colonization has always been a subject of great importance to the legislators of Brazil. The Government has realized that the growth of industry and the development of the country's resources would be enhanced by a constant and sufficient stream of incoming settlers, especially of agricultural workers. As far back as 1818, 1824, and 1830, earnest efforts were made to induce the immigration of peasants from Switzerland and Germany and to introduce with them European agricultural methods, as well as scientific and industrial improvements.

The importance of each nationality as a factor in the immigration movement to Brazil during the period covered by the foregoing table is shown as follows:

ITALIAN IMMIGRATION AND EMIGRATION.

Italy has been the greatest single source of immigration to Brazil. In the eighties great numbers came whose passage from Italy was supplied free by the Brazilian Government. But in the late nineties a crisis in coffee growing occurred. Stories of failure to pay wages, of corporal punishment and other evils, reached Italy, and the Italian Government discouraged further immigration. As a consequence emigration from Italy fell off greatly.

The Italians go mostly to the immense coffee plantations of the southern States of Sao Paulo, Espirito Santo, and Minas Geraes. The Spanish and Portuguese go to the north, and the Germans to Rio Grande do Sul, and Santa Catherina.

The following table derived from Italian sources shows the extent of Italian emigration to Brazil from Italy from 1878 to 1906.

THE BRAZILIAN IMMIGRATION LAW.^a

The immigration law of Brazil is liberal and comprehensive. It is designed to facilitate desirable immigration and to exclude the undesirable. Complete and effective cooperation is contemplated between the Union, the States, and private enterprises, for the purpose of settling and developing the country.

IMMIGRANTS DEFINED.

All aliens under 60 years of age and traveling on second or third class passage are deemed immigrants unless they are criminals, rogues, beggars, vagabonds, lunatics, or invalids, are plying illicit trades, or are afflicted with any contagious disease. The disabilities enumerated bar admission. Persons over 60 years of age or incapacitated for work are admitted only when they are accompanied by their family and evidence is adduced of ability to provide support.

RIGHTS OF IMMIGRANTS.

Immigrants settling in the country and engaging in agriculture, industry, trade, or any useful craft or profession are guaranteed entire liberty of action, are allowed free access to any trade or other pursuit not inimical to public safety, health, or morals, and are granted complete religious liberty and the general civil rights enjoyed by Brazilian citizens under the constitution.

NUCLEUS COLONIES.

Nucleus colonies consist of selected divisions of territory in process of settlement and development. They may be established by either public or private initiation. Locations are determined by the general resources and value. Immigrants with families who intend to purchase land will be assisted by the Government in paying their passage to Brazil. They will also be assisted in making the first installment on the land and in purchasing farming implements and equipment, provided that they present on arrival a certificate of age, identity, occupation, character, and nationality, signed by an authorized Brazilian representative abroad.

REPATRIATION.

The Government will repatriate agricultural immigrants who have entered Brazil at State expense within two years prior to filing request for same and who have resided continuously with the head of the family, but whose absence or incapacity induces the request. Persons eligible are widows and orphans destitute of support, wives and minor children of immigrants who are afflicted or unable to provide support, and immigrants incapacitated by incurable disease, accident, or lack of resources.

APPENDIX.

REGULATIONS REGARDING IMMIGRATION AND COLONIZATION IN BRAZIL.

DECREE No. 6455 OF APRIL 19, 1907, APPROVING REGULATIONS FOR THE PEOPLING OF THE SOIL.

The President of the Republic of the United States of Brazil in accordance with the authorization conferred in section b of No. XIII of article 35 of Law No. 1617 of December 30, 1906, decrees:

Sole article. The appended regulations for the peopling of the soil, signed by the minister of industry, railways, and public works, are hereby approved.

Rio de Janeiro, April 19, 1907, nineteenth year of the Republic.

AFFONSO AUGUSTO MOREIRA PENNA.

MIGUEL CALMON DU PIN E ALMEIDA.

REGULATIONS FOR THE PEOPLING OF THE SOIL REFERRED TO IN DECREE
No. 6455 OF APRIL 19, 1907.

DIVISION I.

CHAPTER I.—Preliminary dispositions.

ARTICLE 1. The peopling of the soil will be promoted by the union in agreement with State governments, railway and river navigation companies, other companies or associations, and with private individuals provided that the sureties and rules hereby guaranteed and laid down are duly observed.

ART. 2. There shall be counted as immigrants all foreigners of less than 60 years of age who are not suffering from contagious diseases nor plying illicit trades and who are not criminals, rogues, beggars, vagabonds, lunatics, or invalids who arrive at Brazilian ports traveling third class at the cost of the union, States, or third parties, as well as those who (ceteris paribus) have paid their own passages and desire to enjoy the same privileges as other new arrivals.

Persons over 60 years of age or unfitted for work will only be admitted when accompanied by their families or when coming to join them, provided that there is in the family at least one able-bodied member against the invalid and one or two against the member over 60 years of age.

ART. 3. To immigrants who establish themselves in any part of the country and devote themselves to any branch of agriculture, industry, or trade, or to any useful craft or profession, the following guaranties will be granted: Complete liberty of action and freedom to engage in any trade, provided that the same does not endanger public safety, health, or morals; complete liberty of religious belief; and, finally, civic rights, as enjoyed under the constitution and laws by Brazilians themselves.

ART. 4. The union, without interfering with the liberty of similar action on the part of the States, will enter into an accord with them to direct and facilitate the placing of immigrants who desire to settle as owners of their own land and will protect and advise such spontaneous immigrants as need material aid for their first installment, while only in special cases will it bring in at its own expense such immigrants as desire only to work without acquiring the land on which they settle.

DIVISION II.—CONCERNING COLONIZATION.

CHAPTER I.—Concerning nucleus colonies and their foundation.

ART. 5. By a "nucleus colony" for the operation of this decree, is understood a group of lots, duly measured and marked out, on land chosen as fertile and fitted for agriculture or cattle breeding, where the conditions are healthy, and there is abundance of drinking water to supply all the needs of the population. The colonies shall also be of sufficient extent to admit of their development, while they shall have easy and convenient means of transport, shall be possessed of favorable economic factors, and shall be prepared for the settling of immigrants as holders of their own land.

ART. 6. The foundation of nucleus colonies shall be undertaken:

I. By the union with help from the States.

II. By the States with or without the help of the union.

III. By railway or river navigation companies, other companies or associations, or by private individuals with or without the help of the union and the States.

The union may interfere in the foundation of nucleus colonies by railway or river navigation companies, other companies, associations, or private individuals when the founders are not in the receipt of official aid and necessary rules and regulations have to be made or abuses remedied.

CHAPTER II.—Concerning nucleus colonies founded by the union.

ART. 7. The foundation of nucleus colonies under the direct administration of the union and with the aid of the interested State shall be effected in accordance with this decree whilst the following rules must be observed:

I. The union will choose the site and will undertake to form the nucleus.

II. If the land is fallow or is the property of the State, the Federal Government will enter into an accord with the State government for the cession of the area required for the foundation of the nucleus.

In this case the State will aid in the marking out, if necessary, according to its land laws, and will permit the following work of preparation: Preliminary surveys for the best division of the lots and for the establishment of lines of communication both internal and external; measuring and marking out of rural lots; sanitary works, when necessary; building of houses, roads, and paths; preparation of the areas set apart for the first cultivation in each rural lot; establishment of the headquarters of the nucleus, if convenient, together with the urban lots, and, finally, the settling of the immigrants.

III. So soon as the lots have been measured and marked out in accordance with the foregoing clause, they will be definitely handed over to the union on the distinct understanding that they will be sold to immigrants or otherwise used for the good of the nucleus.

IV. Lands belonging to private individuals will be acquired by amicable arrangement, i. e., by purchase or agreement, or will be disappropriated by the State, while the union will undertake the work of preparation according to Clause II above.

V. The State will provide the immigrants with tools and seeds free of charge for their assistance on first being installed, while the union may grant them these and other favors for the same purpose.

VI. Should the State desire to establish, at the headquarters of the nucleus, farms for experiments and instruction, a suitable area will be reserved for this purpose and pecuniary aid granted, as established by law, in accordance with plans and estimates previously approved.

ART. 8. The State may give any assistance to the immigrants independent of that given by the union, and may offer prizes to promote healthy emulation.

ART. 9. Provisional and definite titles to the lots will be indorsed by Federal officials appointed for this purpose.

ART. 10. The product of the sale of the lots will belong to the union, except in case of arrangement with private owners of land, who by contract will be obliged to allow the colony to be founded and the sale of lots at stipulated prices for the transfer of lands and improvements thereon.

ART. 11. The collection of immigrant's debts arising from the sale of lots and houses and from aid not granted free will be made by the union.

ART. 12. The choice of localities for the nucleus colonies will be made in accordance with the previous surveys and will be carefully fiscalized by the administration.

ART. 13. Localities for the foundation of nucleus colonies will be chosen which are healthily situated and conform to the conditions laid down in article 5 as well as the following:

I. Convenient altitude and soil fitted for all kinds of cultivation.

II. A position on or near railways actually working or in course of construction, on rivers navigated by steamers, or close to populous centers where the holders of the lots will find a ready market for their produce.

III. A constant and ample supply of running and drinking water which shall be adequate for the inhabitants and may be employed for agricultural and industrial purposes.

IV. Topographical configuration and conditions which will permit of the use of agricultural machinery.

V. Forests, on the spot or near, which, while improving the climatic conditions and productiveness of the district, will afford a sure and cheap supply of timber for building and other works on the colonies.

VI. A large enough area to admit of the increase of the nucleus, so that direct descendants of the first immigrants settled on the land, members of their families or persons connected with them, living abroad, may be invited to come and form new households and hold lots in the same nucleus or in its vicinity.

ART. 14. When the locality for the nucleus has been chosen, a general plan and estimate of the probable cost of the work will be immediately drawn up, the ground will be divided into lots by exact measurement, the necessary works will be put in hand at once and any factors dangerous to public health removed, whilst plans will be made and executed for the systematic construction of roads and paths according to the regulations.

ART. 15. When watercourses are in the way, if convenient, the works can be commenced by goniometric survey of same, and stakes will be driven in with their tops level with the ground, each one marked with a copper plate showing exactly the direction indicated. At the side of the stakes, signposts will be placed duly numbered so that the subsequent demarcation of the lots may be clearly indicated.

When the hydrographic plans have been drawn up, thereon will appear the distribution of lots according to the lay of the ground.

ART. 16. If there are no watercourses, and such surveys are unnecessary, the land will be divided into lots in accordance with local conditions.

ART. 17. Lots will be duly numbered and the lines intersecting them will always, when convenient, run exactly north and south or east and west.

ART. 18. If the position and importance of the nucleus demand the establishment of headquarters, which will later be a township, sufficient land will be reserved for this purpose favorably situated in the part of the district which is flattest and which, from a hygienic point of view, is most fitted for a populous center. On this site the ground will be prepared and the necessary buildings erected in accordance with plans duly drawn up.

The headquarters will be the converging point for the principal roads of the nucleus.

ART. 19. In each nucleus ground will be set aside for erection of schools and for experiments in the cultivation of vegetables, which may be grown with advantage in the district, for instruction farms, industrial purposes, etc.

ART. 20. The lots will be classified as rural and urban.

SECTION 1. Rural lots will be devoted to agriculture and cattle breeding and will be of sufficient extent for the work of the colonists who own them.

SEC. 2. As a general rule, rural lots will not exceed 25 hectares when situated along or near a railway or river, navigated by steamers, but otherwise they may be up to 50 hectares.

SEC. 3. Urban lots will be those situated at the headquarters and will ultimately form the township, and all their fronts will be on streets and squares.

SEC. 4. No urban lot may exceed 3,000 square meters unless set apart for some special purpose.

ART. 21. As a general rule, a good and sanitary house will be built on each urban lot to be occupied by the immigrant and his family, whilst the ground will be prepared for the first cultivation to be made by the person who acquires it.

SECTION 1. Immigrants who desire to erect houses at their own expense and according to their own taste will have lots without houses reserved for them.

SEC. 2. Under the conditions of the preceding section the immigrant and his family, who acquire the lot, will be afforded temporary quarters until they have built the house, which must be within the space of one year.

ART. 22. Rural lots will be sold either for cash or for payment in installments. In the former case a definite title will be handed over immediately and in the latter a provisional title which will be substituted by a definite one as soon as all payments have been made.

SECTION 1. Anyone purchasing a lot in the installment system may pay off the debt in full or in part before the due date at any time in order to shorten the period for receiving the definite title.

SEC. 2. Under the conditions of the preceding section the purchaser will enjoy the privileges of section 2, article 40.

ART. 23. Urban lots will only be sold for cash.

ART. 24. Lots will be sold at a moderate price, which shall be previously fixed according to their size and position.

ART. 25. Where there is a house on the lot, the cost price of the same will be added to the price of the lot.

ART. 26. Rural lots may be sold on the installment system to immigrants accompanied by their families.

ART. 27. Immigrants who are not accompanied by their families may only purchase rural lots for cash.

ART. 28. The immigrant who is accompanied by his family may acquire a new lot after he has obtained a definite title to the first. When the family consists of more than five persons fit for work, or when the immigrant has cultivated and improved his first lot, he will be allowed the preference for the purchase, even on the installment system, of a second lot adjoining or close to the first.

ART. 29. The foreign immigrant who is an agriculturist and has been less than two years in the country, who marries a Brazilian woman, or the daughter of a Brazilian born in the country, or the Brazilian agriculturist who marries a foreign woman who has been in the country as an immigrant less than two years, will be given a lot with a provisional title, without the pair having to pay anything, provided that during the first year from the granting of the provisional title they have lived together in harmony and have shown by the way that they have cultivated and improved the lot that they mean to continue to do so.

ART. 30. If the foreign or Brazilian immigrant, under the conditions of the preceding article, desires to obtain a lot with a definite title immediately after his marriage, the same will be sold him for half the stipulated price.

ART. 31. On the provisional title granted to the immigrant shall be written the full price of the lot and the main conditions to be observed for the obtaining of a definite title.

ART. 32. When definite titles to the lots have been granted to immigrants who are not in debt to the nucleus, the same become their absolute property.

ART. 33. When the occupant of the lot is in debt to the nucleus, he can not, without a written authorization from the administrator, sell, mortgage, transfer, let, give as security, exchange or alienate in any manner, directly or indirectly, the said lot, house, or improvements.

ART. 34. Immigrants will be transported free of charge to the nucleus.

ART. 35. Immigrants arriving for the first time at the nucleus will be given, free of charge, seeds and tools such as hoes, spades, picks, axes, and scythes.

ART. 36. During the first six months from the date of their arrival at the nucleus and until the harvest and sale of their produce, immigrants coming from abroad and settled as owners of lots shall, when necessary, be granted means for the maintenance of their families.

ART. 37. For the space of one year, under the same conditions as in the foregoing article, all immigrants will receive medical attendance and medicines free of charge. This period may be prolonged at the discretion of the administrator of the nucleus.

ART. 38. Stores or depots, where foodstuffs and other articles of prime necessity will be sold at moderate prices, will be established in the nucleus colonies to guarantee supplies for the population; the immigrants being absolutely free to buy these goods for their own account wherever they like.

ART. 39. During the first year after their installment or for a longer period, if Government so decides, aid may be given, to such immigrants as desire it, for the purchase or hiring of agricultural implements and machinery, live stock, and vehicles necessary for the cultivation of the lots, preparation, and transport of the produce.

ART. 40. The price of the lots, with or without house, when the same are purchased on the installment system, as well as any aid granted, except for work done or classed as gratuitous, shall be written in a book and handed to the debtor in the form of a current account and shall constitute the debt of the immigrant for which the head of the family is responsible. He shall begin amortization by yearly installments not later than at the end of the second year after his establishment. After this date, if no payment has been made, interest will be charged at the rate of 3 per cent per annum on the installments due.

SECTION 1. When the nucleus is situated on, or near, railways or rivers, navigated by steamers, the period for amortization shall be five years, counting from the first day of the third year of the installment of the immigrant; in other cases, or when Government deems it advisable, the period will be eight years under the same conditions.

SEC. 2. The immigrant who pays his debts in advance will have a right to a rebate at the rate of 12 per cent per annum on installments that are outstanding.

SEC. 3. The immigrant who pays the full value of the lot will immediately receive a definite title to the same, even though he has still other debts outstanding contracted with the administration of the nucleus.

ART. 41. In the event of the decease of the head of the family, in whose name the provisional or definite title had been drawn up, the lot will pass to his heirs or legal representatives on the same conditions on which he himself held it.

If the nucleus has not yet been emancipated, the transfer will be made by an official order of the administration without any legal intervention.

ART. 42. Any debt which the deceased head of the family had contracted with the nucleus will be considered extinct, if he leaves a widow and orphans, save that arising from the purchase of the lot on the installment system.

ART. 43. If the lot was purchased on the installment system and the deceased had already paid at least three installments, the remainder will be remitted in favor of the widow or orphans and a definite title granted.

ART. 44. Government will maintain free primary schools and will organize exhibitions and fairs of agricultural and industrial produce in the nucleus colonies, if deemed expedient.

ART. 45. Prizes will be offered for the reward of producers who most distinguish themselves at the exhibitions or in any other way.

ART. 46. Where the nucleus is intended for foreigners, not more than 10 per cent of the lots may be sold to Brazilians, but when in a nucleus the number of lots held by foreigners is 300 or more a special area near the lots will be set aside for Brazilian agriculturists, if deemed advisable.

ART. 47. In States or districts, where hitherto no colonies or nucleus colonies of foreign agriculturists have existed, the Federal Government may adopt special measures, when necessary, to guarantee the first nucleus under conditions favorable to its development so that it may serve as a center of attraction for the establishment of an increasing number of immigrants.

ART. 48. Each nucleus will be regulated according to special rules made with a view to the peculiarities of the locality and the needs which may arise.

ART. 49. The emancipation of the nucleus colonies will be granted by Government so soon as the immigrants settled therein require no further aid.

CHAPTER III.—Concerning nucleus colonies founded by the States in conjunction with the union.

ART. 50. The union may bring in immigrants who, under the protection of the States, are to be settled as owners in nucleus colonies, which the State Governments propose to found at their own expense, or by contract with landowners after the favorable conditions of the colonies, their hygienic condition, the good quality of their soil, and the works of preparation are approved.

ART. 51. The union may grant aid to such States as found nucleus colonies under their own direct administration, in accordance with the following article and the budgetary resources at its disposal.

ART. 52. The foundation of nucleus colonies under the direct administration of the State and with the aid of the union will be in accordance with the conditions laid down in this chapter, with special regard to the following:

I. The State will choose the locality which it judges favorable from the point of view of health, cultivation, production, safety, facility of communication, and cheap transport, and shall submit its choice, together with the general plan of the colony, including the type of the houses and other necessary information, for the approval of the Federal Government in order that the union may give a grant in aid.

II. When the choice and plans have been approved the States will make all the necessary preparations.

III. When all necessary work has been carried out so as to guarantee the convenient transport and the regular installment of immigrants and their families on lots exactly measured out and defined, in accordance with the approved plan, the union will, at its own expense, bring in the immigrants to be settled at the expense of the State, the latter being free to choose them by means of persons especially appointed for this purpose.

IV. All services of the nucleus will be at the cost of the State.

V. The union will help the State to the extent of 25 per cent on all money which it has actually expended for the foundation of the nucleus, provided that this aid does not exceed 800$000 for each foreign family settled.

The payments made by the union will be in three installments:

(a) The first, up to 250$000 per house, of the type accepted by the Federal Government, erected on a rural lot.

(b) The second, also up to 250$000, when the immigrant and his family have taken possession of the lot and have received either the provisional or definite title to the same.

(c) The third and last not to exceed 300$000, according to the valuation made by the Federal official appointed for this purpose, when the immigrant and his family have been established on the lot for six months.

ART. 53. On nucleus colonies in receipt of union aid the percentage of lots set aside for Brazilians may not exceed 10 per cent of those reserved for foreign agriculturists.

Aid granted for the settling of each family of Brazilian colonists may not exceed 500$000 maximum, payable in installments in accordance with sections (a) and (b) of No. V of the preceding article after the settling of foreign families, according to the percentage above mentioned.

Without union aid the State may form, with any number of lots it pleases, areas close by intended for Brazilians.

ART. 54. Titles to the lots will be given by the State officials in accordance with the law.

ART. 55. Of the amount produced by the sale of lots, 75 per cent will belong to the States, except in case of agreements with regard to land sold by private individuals to immigrants or colonies, whilst the remaining 25 per cent will be handed over to the union for the help which it has granted.

ART. 56. The State alone may collect debts contracted by the immigrants with the nucleus.

ART. 57. Nucleus colonies founded by States, with union aid, must be regulated according to the rules adopted by the latter.

ART. 58. When it is deemed useful to construct a railway to link up fallow lands, which may be colonized, or nucleus colonies with railway stations, consuming centers, ports on the sea or rivers, the union may help this construction by means of a subvention paid in a lump sum, when the lines are open to traffic, at the rate of 6:000$ per kilometer.

Conditions, whether of a technical nature or referring to dates for payment, indemnification for help given, maximum length to receive subsidy, and any other matters, will be defined in the contract to be signed previously.

CHAPTER IV.—Railway colonization.

ART. 59. The settling of land along or near railways, in course of construction or already in traffic, as well as along rivers, navigated by steamers, ought to be undertaken and pushed by the various companies independent of any initiative on the part of the Federal or State Government, of associations or private individuals.

ART. 60. By "railway companies" or "company" for the purposes of this chapter, is understood any single or collective entity which has for its purpose the construction of railways or carriage roads or the establishment of shipping lines in virtue of a contract made with the union or with the State.

ART. 61. The settling will be effected by the installation of families of immigrants accustomed to agricultural labor or cattle breeding as owners of lots, property measured and marked out, situated along or within 20 kilometers of either side of the railway or river and forming nucleus or service roads.

ART. 62. Any railway company which desires to obtain the aid and privileges indicated in this chapter must observe the dispositions of this decree and obtain official authorization, which will be granted by Government, when it deems advisable, its responsibility being limited by the budgetary resources at its disposal.

ART. 63. The choice of the locality most fitted for nucleus and railway colonies, will depend on careful study of all the circumstances essential to the development of the colony, special attention being paid to the mildness and healthiness of the climate, the abundance, quality, and distribution of the water, orographic conditions, the nature, fertility, and producing power of the soil, the extent of the forests, groves, plains, and land under cultivation, disposable area and every other question which it may be necessary to consider for the proper establishment of the colony.

ART. 64. The choice of locality made by the company will be submitted for the study and report of the fiscal engineer or Federal official, appointed for this purpose, and for the examination and approval of the Federal Government.

ART. 65. The general plan, comprising the division of the land into lots, areas of the same, cart roads and paths to be made, type of houses for the immigrants, will be submitted for the approval of the Federal Government and shall be executed in accordance with that approval. Otherwise, the aid and privileges treated of in this chapter will not be granted.

ART. 66. The land required for the nucleus or railway colonies will be acquired by the company by purchase, concession, or by agreement with the States or private individuals and, when necessary, its disappropriation will be authorized.

It is absolutely necessary that the land should be previously proved to be free of any litigation, legal onus, concession or contract, so that it may be transferred free from any claim whatsoever.

ART. 67. When the position of a nucleus or the number of the rural lots calls for the establishment of headquarters which shall ultimately become a township, the company will apportion the necessary urban lots according to approved plans.

ART. 68. As soon as the rural lots are ready and have proper means of communication the families of immigrants will be settled thereon.

ART. 69. The company will maintain to the best of its ability and in combination with the Federal Government a propaganda service abroad, for the sale of lots, duly marked out and prepared, to immigrants accustomed to agricultural labor or to cattle breeding, in order that they may come and settle thereon.

ART. 70. The Federal Government may authorize or promote, at its own expense, introduction of immigrants for the nucleus or railway colonies and will pay their passages from the port of their country of origin to that of their destination, effect their disembarkation, house and feed them and give them free transport to the station nearest the nucleus.

ART. 71. The service of settling the immigrants, including help given them for the same, will be at the expense of the company, which shall furnish the new arrivals with tools and seeds and, whenever convenient, give them paid work on the railway or near the lots, to make it easier for them to keep up the same, and shall supply them, whenever necessary, with advances of food or money until the first harvest.

ART. 72. Rural lots with any improvements thereon will be sold to the immigrants for cash or in installments.

ART. 73. The price of lots and of houses and the conditions of payment depend on the approval of the Federal Government, which reserves to itself the right of fiscalizing anything which is in the interests of the colonists, or deals with the rights which are guaranteed to them.

ART. 74. The company binds itself to aid the transport of the colonial produce and will grant a rebate or reduction in freights of 50 per cent, on the tariff in force, for five years dating from the installment of the first family on a lot of any nucleus or railway colony whose foundation was made under the conditions of this chapter, or was undertaken by the union or by the States for the settling of foreign immigrants as owners of the land.

ART. 75. The company will render every aid in its power to immigrants for the improvement of their produce and will stimulate the formation and increase of small industries; it will promote in the colonies, which it founds, the creation of free primary schools and will build churches for the immigrants, irrespective of denomination.

ART. 76. The Federal Government will grant, under the heading of "aid," premiums to any railway company which carries on with regularity the settling of foreign immigrants as owners of the land as hereby laid down.

The premiums will be agreed upon and fixed when the general plan is approved (see art. 65 of this Decree) and must not exceed the following maximums:

I. 200$000 for each house constructed on a rural lot, so soon as the type has been officially approved and the house is in the possession of the immigrant family.

II. For each immigrant family, which has never before been resident in the country, brought in from abroad at the expense of the company and settled on a rural lot:

(a) 100$000 when the family has been settled for six months.

(b) 200$000 when the family has been settled for a year and has increased the area of cultivation and the live stock and shows every intention of continuing to do so.

III. 5:000$ for each group of 50 rural lots occupied by families of foreign immigrants who in the same colony and within two years of the settlement of the first family have received definite titles of ownership.

ART. 77. When the families of immigrant farmers are not brought from abroad at the expense of the company the latter shall undertake to establish them in the same conditions as those of article 76, but has no right to premiums I and III.

ART. 78. When 50 rural lots are definitely occupied by families of foreign immigrants the company may settle five Brazilian families on neighboring lots and so on in the same proportion, and Government in this case will grant the same premium referred to in the preceding article for the settling of foreign families.

ART. 79. The company may obtain from the State interested any other privileges and aid besides those granted by the Federal Government.

CHAPTER V.—Colonization by companies, associations, and private individuals.

ART. 80. Companies or associations and reputable private individuals who have at their disposal land so situated as to be fitted for colonization and who undertake to divide the same into lots and to sell it to foreign immigrant farmers so that the said immigrants may live on the lots as owners of the same, may receive grants in aid from the union and the State as is most convenient in each particular case.

SECTION 1. The following are the essential conditions to be observed if union aid is to be lent:

(a) The estates must be free from litigation, mortgage, and every other legal onus, or the existence must be proved of a proper contract between the debtor and the creditor, who holds the mortgage, the terms of which permit of the transference to immigrants free from any claim whatsoever.

(b) The area available must be sufficient, in the opinion of Government, for the settlement of at least 50 families of immigrants on an equal number of rural lots which shall be adjoining or spread over a district, the greatest radius of which shall not exceed 12 kilometers.

(c) The soil must be fertile and the district healthy, and the colonies within easy reach of commercial centers to which they shall be joined by rail or carriage roads, and the conditions must be such as to allow for agricultural and industrial expansion on the part of the colonies and for the sale of their produce in a favorable market. The supply of drinking water must be abundant and such that each lot shall be provided with a proper supply for private use and for irrigation, and, finally, the general conditions must be such as will insure the prosperity of the new owner of the lot.

(d) An official inspection will be made of the district and of all documents referring to the property, in order that the foregoing conditions may be found to have been complied with.

(e) The lots must be of sufficient size to allow of expansion.

SEC. 2. The Federal Government will make no loans.

ART. 81. So soon as the essential conditions referred to in the preceding article have been found to be complied with, the immigrants and their families, who are to be settled as owners of the land, may be brought in by the union directly or on the refunding of their passage money at current rates on the following conditions:

(a) That they are in a position to buy the lots cash down and have sufficient resources to keep themselves, while cultivating the land or starting any industry, until they begin to make a profit, without any other privileges; or

(b) The owners of the land shall prove that they have made a contract with the immigrants, or with the Government of the State interested, on such terms as to guarantee not only the sale of lots, marked out and ready, at a reasonable price, but also the granting of such aid as the immigrants shall need at the time of their first installment and until they are in a position to support themselves.

ART. 82. Apart from the aid given in accordance with the preceding article the union may grant to the respective companies, associations, or private individuals, premiums for the families of immigrant farmers settled, when they have been installed for a year to a year and a half and are prospering and show intention to remain.

SECTION 1. The number of families settled which will give a right to premiums, as well as the amount and mode of distribution of the same, will be arranged by the Federal Government in each case.

SEC. 2. The State interested may aid in the measuring and marking out of the lots and grant any other privileges which it may see fit.

ART. 83. At the same time that the Federal Government recognizes, in accordance with articles 80 and 81, that the circumstances are favorable for the settling of immigrants as owners, and authorizes the company, association, or private individual to make the lots ready for their reception, it may fix a date by which time the necessary work must be concluded, and if it is not concluded by that date the union will no longer be responsible for granting aid or premiums.

ART. 84. When companies, associations, or private individuals promote the settling, on a large scale, of land which belongs to them, as in section 1, sections (a), (c), (d), and (e), of article 80, and propose to link up their property by branch lines to railway stations already existing, consuming centers, and sea or river ports, the Federal Government may grant them, if it deems convenient and subject to contract made previously, a subsidy of $6,000 per kilometer open to traffic.

In said contract shall be defined the conditions to be observed with regard to technical questions and those affecting date of payment, the maximum length to be subsidized, repayment of aid granted, etc.

ART. 85. Agricultural banks and syndicates, formed according to the laws at present in force, so soon as they have subscribed to the conditions of this decree will be granted the preference for the obtaining of aid and premiums on the bases here laid down.

CHAPTER VI.—Concerning service roads.

ART. 86. Whenever convenient service roads may be established at points starting from railways already in traffic or construction or from rivers navigated by steamers.

ART. 87. A service road in accordance with this decree is a carriage road with lots on either side of it, duly measured and marked out and contiguous to each other, and intended for the settling of immigrants as owners of the soil.

ART. 88. Service roads ought to be situated in districts which satisfy all the essential conditions exacted for nucleus colonies, and by preference will be opened on fallow lands or private estates, which have been abandoned when accidents of position or splitting up into strips which are more fertile, or other circumstances suggest the adoption of this system for their better exploitation.

ART. 89. Service roads will only be made over fallow lands by the State or in agreement with it.

ART. 90. The definite construction of service roads over private estates will be undertaken by the owners, or in agreement with them, unless, when surveys and plans have been made, no agreement can be come to, and it is found necessary to disappropriate the estates in the public interest.

ART. 91. Service roads will be on the same basis as nucleus colonies in every respect.

DIVISION III.—CONCERNING IMMIGRATION.

CHAPTER I.—Concerning the introduction of immigrants.

ART. 92. The Federal Government will promote the introduction of immigrants who, being agriculturists and accompanied by their families, desire to settle in the country as owners of the land on lots belonging to nucleus colonies, or on such other estates as satisfy the requirements of this decree.

ART. 93. Immigrants will be introduced in proportion as the lots are measured, marked out, and ready for their reception.

ART. 94. In special circumstances and in order to meet an obvious and immediate want, the Federal Government may, at its discretion, bring in, at its own expense, professors of agriculture or industry or immigrants of any nationality and profession for the construction of railways, public works, factories, etc., which will be to the advantage of the immigrants.

ART. 95. Immigrants shall be considered spontaneous who come from foreign ports and travel second or third class at their own expense.

ART. 96. The union will refund the third-class fares from the port of embarkation to the port of disembarkation to such spontaneous immigrants as are farmers and whose families consist of at least three persons of more than 12 and less than 50 years of age, fitted for work, and who settle as owners of land.

SECTION 1. The amount to be refunded for passages will be calculated according to the price paid during the same month to shipping companies who have carried immigrants between the same ports at the expense of the union, or, failing this, at the expense of the States.

If no such basis is available, the fares will be refunded in accordance with the usual prices charged by the respective companies.

SEC. 2. The right to this refunding lapses if the same is not claimed within two years from the date of entry of the ship on which they arrived.

ART. 97. When the number of spontaneous immigrants arriving in the country is not deemed sufficient or to be increasing satisfactorily, the union will grant, free of charge (without any repayment whatsoever having to be made to the Government), to such foreigners who are farmers and arrive accompanied by their families or invited by them, when they have been recognized as immigrants according to the terms of article 2, and come with the intention of settling as owners of the land:

I. Third-class passages from the port of embarkation to the port of Rio de Janeiro or any other Brazilian port which is properly equipped with a department for their reception and housing.

II. At the above-mentioned ports, reception, disembarkation of themselves and their baggage, lodging, food, medical attention, and medicine, in case of illness, at their arrival and for such period as may elapse before they are settled at the point which they may choose.

III. Transport by rail or steamer to the station or port of destination.

ART. 98. Such immigrants as are spontaneous or come with their passages paid by the States or third parties and arrive at Rio de Janeiro or any other Brazilian port, which is properly equipped for their reception and housing, will be granted the privileges mentioned in Nos. I and II of the preceding article.

ART. 99. Such immigrants as come into the country at the expense of the union, according to article 94, will also have a right to the privileges laid down by article 97.

ART. 100. Immigrants' baggage, including tools necessary to agriculture or for the profession to which they belong to, will be admitted duty free in accordance with the law at present in force.

ART. 101. All information that they may desire will be afforded to immigrants by means of interpreters, who will accompany them whenever necessary.

ART. 102. Immigrants are absolutely free to choose their destination, and it is strictly forbidden to influence them in any way in this matter.

ART. 103. Representatives of Brazil and immigration commissioners abroad will take every measure necessary to prevent the arrival of second and third class passengers who can not be recognized as immigrants ex vi article 2 of this decree.

The officials for the reception of immigrants, the doctors attached to the public health department, and the police of Brazilian ports will prevent the disembarkation of such persons and the shipping companies on whose vessels they arrive are obliged to repatriate them.

CHAPTER II.—Concerning formalities for the introduction of immigrants.

ART. 104. Immigrants will be brought in at the expense of the union by shipping companies or shipowners who have been duly authorized by representatives of the Federal Government. The price will be fixed beforehand, while the hygienic condition and the accommodation of the passengers must be assured in accordance with the dispositions of this decree.

ART. 105. The agreement shall be fixed by one or more companies, as and when the Federal Government may determine, and preference shall be given to those who best meet the wishes of the Government and offer the best guaranties, together with low rates for rapid transit and good accommodations and treatment for the immigrants.

ART. 106. Any agreement for the introduction of immigrants will only remain in force at the convenience of the Federal Government, which reserves to itself the right, by its own action, or those of its accredited representatives, of exercising full fiscal action, of choosing immigrants, of refusing those who do not comply with established conditions, of refusing right to embark, of limiting the number of passengers, and, finally, of refusing to recognize the agreement at any time without any indemnity.

ART. 107. Only those immigrants will be introduced at the expense of the union whose passages have been arranged with companies, with whom an agreement is in force, by the duly accredited representatives of the Government.

ART. 108. Whilst the agreement is in force the companies will also bind themselves:

I. To grant to all emigrants who shall be classed as immigrants, according to article 2 of this decree, and who desire to come with second or third class passages, which they pay themselves (spontaneous), a rebate of 10 per cent on the official rates, according to their ages and the ports of embarkation and disembarkation.

II. To never charge higher prices than those arranged with the Federal Government, in accordance with age and between the same ports, for the transport of immigrants who are introduced through the officials of the Federal immigration service at the request of governors of States, companies, associations, and private individuals who undertake to bear the expense.

ART. 109. Preference for transport by shipping companies, who have contracts under this decree, will be given to spontaneous immigrants, those invited by their relations already established here, those called officially, and the families of farmers which consist solely of members of over 12 and under 50 years of age.

ART. 110. Companies which undertake the introduction of immigrants must advise Government at least eight days before their arrival here as to the date of embarkation abroad, the probable date of arrival, the name of the ship on which they are coming, and their number.

ART. 111. Immigrants brought in at the expense of the Federal Government shall present a list in duplicate, in which shall be inscribed their name, age, State, nationality, and profession, relationship to the head of the family and quantity of luggage, containing their own declaration that they have disbursed nothing for their own passages or those of their families or for the transport of their baggage.

These documents must bear the visé of the official appointed for this purpose at the port of embarkation or, in default of this, the visé of the Brazilian consul or consular agent.

ART. 112. The company carrying immigrants at the expense of the Federal Government will draw up a detailed list of the baggage handed to them, which, together with the other documents, will be presented to the officials at the port of arrival.

ART. 113. Such immigrants as are brought in at the request and expense of the States, companies, associations, and private individuals by the Federal immigration agency abroad must also possess documents similar to those held by immigrants brought in at the expense of the Federal Government.

ART. 114. Immigrant's luggage shall arrive on the same vessels as themselves, and the company, when receiving it at the port of embarkation, shall hand to each immigrant or head of the family a receipt showing the number of pieces belonging to him and such marks as will facilitate their delivery.

These receipts must be checked with the list treated of in article 112 of this decree.

ART. 115. The parentage, age, morality, and profession of the immigrants shall be proved by trustworthy documents bearing the visé of the official appointed for this purpose at the port of embarkation or, in default of this, the visé of the Brazilian consul or consular agent, any of which officials shall have the right to refuse these and other documents which they may consider to be false or insufficient.

ART. 116. In the agreements made with the shipping companies rules shall be laid down affecting the constitution of families of immigrant farmers who are to be brought in at the expense of the Federal Government, as well as any other conditions which may affect the service.

CHAPTER III.—Concerning the service of receiving, disembarkation, housing, feeding, and distribution of immigrants.

ART. 117. The service of receiving, disembarkation, housing, feeding, and distribution of immigrants will be carried out at the expense of the union at the port of Rio de Janeiro.

ART. 118. In State ports the services treated of in the preceding article will be at the expense of the State interested, whilst the union may also lend aid, as indicated in this chapter, by mutual arrangement.

ART. 119. The union will grant aid to the States toward defraying the expense of the service of receiving, disembarkation, housing, and distribution, if the immigrants are brought in at the expense of the Federal Government or are spontaneous, according to the conditions of this decree.

ART. 120. In other cases than those provided for in the preceding article the cost of the said services will not be defrayed by the union, but will be at the expense of the States, companies, associations, or private individuals.

ART. 121. Without previous official authorization the companies, associations, or private individuals may not undertake the disembarkation of immigrants.

ART. 122. Union aid, as referred to in article 119, will consist in payment to the States of an amount previously fixed and calculated on an average per immigrant, taking into consideration the conditions of the port and of disembarkation, the time spent in the hostels, which must not exceed six days, except in the case of the illness of an immigrant or of a member of his family.

So soon as the State Government has made an arrangement with the Federal Government as to the amount payable, the latter will appoint an official at the respective hostel, who shall calculate the amount of the grant to be made and shall take such measures as may be necessary for arranging the destination of the immigrants and furnishing them with such information as they may require.

ART. 123. Transport by rail or boat will be paid for by the union when the immigrants are spontaneous and when they request same, when they have been brought in at the expense of the Federal Government, companies, associations, or private individuals and when the means of communication are under the administration of the Federal Government.

ART. 124. Transport by high roads or cart roads from the railway stations or ports where the immigrants disembark to the nucleus colonies or place of destination will be furnished by the union if the said colony be under their administration, and at the expense of the States, companies, associations, or private individuals when these have founded the nucleus colonies or have brought in the immigrants.

ART. 125. The lodging of newly arrived immigrants at the nucleus colonies or place of destination will be at the expense of the administration of said colonies or of the parties who brought in the immigrants, whether these be the Union, the States, companies, associations, or private individuals.

ART. 126. The services of receiving, disembarkation, housing, feeding, and distribution of immigrants are worthy of the greatest care on the part of the officials who shall carry out such services with the utmost zeal.

CHAPTER IV.—Concerning repatriation.

ART. 127. Government will repatriate such agricultural immigrants as may desire it, who have been brought in at the expense of the Union, if they have resided in Brazil for less than two years and under the following conditions:

I. Widows and orphans who absolutely can not support themselves and have no members of their families to fall back upon.

II. Such immigrants as are incapacitated from work on account of incurable disease or from accidents arising from work, if they have no other members of their family fit for work.

III. Wives and children (less than 12 years of age) of immigrants in the above-mentioned case if they have no means of support.

IV. Children of less than 12 years of age and members of immigrant families in the above-mentioned circumstances.

ART. 128. For repatriation to be granted to immigrants in cases I, III, and IV of the preceding article, they must have lived continuously under the roof of the head of the family, whose absence and incapacity is the reason for their request.

ART. 129. Repatriation will be granted, if requested, to spontaneous immigrants or to those recognized as such according to the dispositions of this decree, when they are in the condition mentioned in articles 127 and 128.

ART. 130. Such immigrants as are in the position referred to in the three preceding articles and wish to return to their country of origin will be given third-class passages by the Government to the port nearest their destination and aid toward their expenses of 50$ to 200$, according to the number of persons in the family and the length of the journey.

ART. 131. Lots which are held on definite titles by immigrants having a right to repatriation may be sold by them or transferred for their advantage, without prejudicing the rights of third parties, and on the liquidation of any debts they may have contracted with the Union. If the title is provisional they will be authorized to sell or transfer them for their own benefit according to the rights which they possess.

DIVISION IV.

SOLE CHAPTER.—General regulations.

ART. 132. The Federal Government may defray the expenses of a trip home as reward to such immigrants who have resided not under three and not over six years in Brazil and who own definite titles to landed property. Such rewards will be granted only to immigrants who by their good behavior, morals, and zeal in their work shall have deserved them.

ART. 133. The Federal Government shall every year fix the number of the rewards referred to in the preceding article and authorize the choice of the immigrants entitled to them, granting them free return tickets if desired.

ART. 134. The transmission and reception of letters and telegrams between immigrants and their relations or friends residing abroad will be facilitated as much as possible through interpreters or by other means.

ART. 135. Nucleus colonies for the exclusive reception of Brazilian farmers will only be founded by the Union when the public need demands it and the interested State can not undertake the same. The State will, however, contribute a share of the expenses.

ART. 136. The Federal Government will employ all the necessary means for disseminating knowledge by means of an active propaganda of the natural advantages, multifarious resources, and easily gained livelihood which Brazil offers to hard-working people who desire to employ their activity on any part of its territory.

ART. 137. For the full and complete execution of this decree supplementary instructions will be issued.

ART. 138. All dispositions to the contrary are hereby revoked.
